THE ARMY ESTIMATES.

The Army Estimates for 1876-77 were issued on Thursday morning. They show a net increase of £603,900. The total amount of the estimate is £15,281,600, from which is to be deducted £1,292,100, estimated Exchequer extra receipts, making the net charge for army services 1876-77 £13,989,500. The total number of men upon the home and colonial establishment, exclusive of India, for 1876-77 is 132,884, against 129,281 in 1875-76, being a net increase of 3,603. The expenditure is accounted for under the following general heads:—1. Regular forces, £5,061,700; 2. Auxiliary and reserve forces, £1,337,100; 3. Commissariat and ordnance store establishments, &c., £5,397,000; 4. Works and buildings, £845,100; 5. Various services, £395,400, making a total for effective services of £13,036,300. The vote for the non-effective services is £2,245,300, making a grand total of £15,281,600.

The largest item of increase is £243,000 under the head of "supply, manufacture, and repair of warlike and other stores." The other items of increase are—pay of the general staff, regimental pay and allowances, and other charges, £179,200; administration of military law, £1,200; medical establishments and services, £13,700; volunteer corps pay and allowances, £20,800 (this includes an increase in the capitation grants of £13,195); army reserve force pay and allowances (including enrolled pensioners), £10,300; commissariat and ordnance store establishments and wages, £1,700; provision, forage, fuel, transport, and other services, £47,000; clothing establishments, services, and other supplies, £42,500; works and buildings, £45,400; establishments for military education, £2,300; administration of the army, £3,800; total increase in effective services, £610,900. In the non-effective services there is an increase of £32,000, distributed as follows:—Rewards for distinguished services, £200; pay of general officers, £500; pensions for wounds, £100; Chelsea and Kilmainham Hospitals (in pensions), £1,100; out-pensions, £18,500; militia, yeomanry cavalry, and volunteer corps, £11,600.

The heads under which there is a decrease in the sums asked for are as follows:—Divine service, £1,900; militia pay and allowances, £12,600; yeomanry cavalry pay and allowances, £4,500; miscellaneous services, £5,600; total decrease in effective services, £24,600. In the non-effective services the items of decrease are:—Full pay of reduced and retired officers and half-pay, £8,800; widows' pensions, &c., £2,300; superannuation allowances, £3,300; total, £14,400.

A statement accompanying the estimates shows the amounts included in them for military purposes in the colonies, and the probable repayments by the several colonies on the same account. The total amounts included in the estimates for the above purpose are £1,765,432, against £1,752,535 in 1875-76. The total colonial contributions to be paid into the Exchequer amount to £236,650. Of this £121,000 is contributed by Ceylon; £50,000 by the Straits Settlements; £27,000 by the Mauritius; £20,000 by Hong Kong; £10,000 by the Cape; £5,000 by Malta; and £3,500 by Natal.

A second paper accompanying the Army Estimates shows "the variation of the numbers of her Majesty's British forces," and gives explanations of the differences between the amounts proposed in the Army Estimates for effective services for 1876-77, and the amounts voted for effective services for 1875-76.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

An interesting paper was read at the Rooms of the Royal Society of Arts on Friday, February 18, by Mr. Magniac, M.P., under the chairmanship of Mr. Grant Duff. The subject of the paper was "The Commercial Importance of the Suez Canal," which, in Mr. Magniac's opinion, was more potent for harm than for good. He considered that the rapid conversion of our mercantile marine, from sailing to steam ships, was due to the Canal, and was a loss of capital; and that the electric telegraph, combined with the rapid transit of goods, was doing away with the need for the merchant proper, and for the large capital of England. Mr. Magniac also brought forward the significant fact that in 1874 the ports of the Mediterranean imported directly from India goods to the value of £2,250,000, and exported to India such things as salt, paper, metals, and cotton twist, to the value of £462,000. When it is remembered that in 1869 the Mediterranean ports had no direct dealings at all with India, the influence of the Canal in creating rivals to English commerce becomes distinctly apparent. This, however, ceases to alarm when it is contrasted with the fact that, in the same interval of time, British shipping engaged in the same trade increased by 2,000,000 tons; and that, for all practical purposes, the whole of the trade is still in English hands. Mr. Magniac ended by remarking on the increased tonnage now passing through the Canal; and called attention to the direction of the International Commission under which we are now entitled to an abatement of the tolls demanded.

The length of the paper caused the postponement of the discussion till February 24. Mr. Maitland then led off with the remark that the Canal was world-wide in its influence, and should not be viewed from a merely English point of view. He regretted that this country had not taken part in the construction of so great a work; and thought the fact that the French sought chiefly the interests of their own land should have occasioned us no soreness. The present commercial depression he considered the necessary result of sudden change; and thought that though the Canal may be at the present time injurious to individuals it must prove, in the long run, beneficial to this country and to the world.

Sir G. Campbell considered that the advantages of the Canal were not so great as were ordinarily supposed. The recent improvements in mercantile marine must be taken into account in estimating its value. If the Canal were now to be closed, the difference in a voyage to Calcutta round the Cape of Good Hope would not exceed twelve or thirteen days.

Mr. Fleming explained that, as the Canal dues fall ultimately on the consumer they cannot be taken to specially injure the shipowner; furthermore, the tonnage of goods actually carried was, not unfrequently, far in excess of the registered tonnage of the vessel, and this also tended to reduce the burden of the tolls.—Mr. Hyde Clarke was afraid that the interests of the more important Euphrates Railway would be endangered by our connection as shareholders with the Canal.—Mr. Baruchson then amusingly demolished the objections to the Canal by explaining that the changes in the construction of vessels complained of were effected by shipowners for the purpose of securing greater profits; and that anyone visiting Liverpool could see how well that class of traders were thriving.—A few other gentlemen spoke in a similar strain; and then Mr. Magniac replied with much ingenuity; he pointed out that the present commercial prosperity of the Canal was due to illegal charges; and that in comparing the undertaking with a voyage round the Cape the facilities for coaling along the Mediterranean route gave the Canal a great advantage. A few remarks from the Chairman closed the proceedings.

Miscellaneous.

BISHOPRIC OF BOMBAY.—The Bishopric of Bombay, vacant by the death of the Rev. Dr. Douglas, has been conferred by the Marquis of Salisbury upon the Rev. L. G. Mylne, of Keble College, Oxford.

GENERAL COLBORNE.—The Manchester Guardian's London correspondent writes:—So fully satisfied are the authorities at headquarters with the ability displayed in the recent operation at the Straits Settlements by Major-General Colborne, C.B., that the gallant officer will, when the proper time arrives, be recommended for elevation to the dignity of K.C.B.

THE SLAVE CIRCULAR.—There was very little cross-voting in the divisions on Thursday night. With the exception of Mr. William Forsyth and Mr. C. W. Nevill, all who voted for Mr. Whitbread's motion were Liberals or Home Rulers. Against the motion seven Liberals—Sir Robert Peel, Mr. Dunbar, Mr. Ripley, Sir G. Bowyer, Mr. G. Morris, Mr. O'Gorman, and Mr. O'Leary voted with the Government.

THE QUEEN'S NEW TITLE.—Mr. Disraeli's Bill "to enable her most gracious Majesty to make an addition to the Royal style and titles appertaining to the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom and its dependencies," contains one clause, which is as follows:—"It shall be lawful for her most Gracious Majesty, with a view to such recognition as aforesaid of the transfer of the Government of India, by her Royal Proclamation under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, to make such addition to the style and titles at present appertaining to the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom and its dependencies as to her Majesty may seem meet."

COLONIAL DISTINCTIONS.—The Queen has made the following appointments to the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George: To be an Ordinary Member of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders of the said Order—The Right Hon. William Henry Gregory, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Island of Ceylon and its dependencies. To be Ordinary Members of the Third Class, or Companions of the said Order—Arthur N. Birch, Esq., Colonial Secretary for the Island of Ceylon; on John Douglas, Esq., Auditor and Accountant-General and Controller of the Revenue for the said Island of Ceylon.—Gazette.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—The following is a list of the candidates for her Majesty's Indian Medical Service who were successful at the competitive examination held at Burlington House on the 14th of February. Forty-four candidates competed for twenty-three appointments; forty-three were reported qualified, one having retired on account of illness:—1. A. Tomes; 2. J. Maitland; 3. G. H. Peevar; 4. A. K. Stewart; 5. S. H. Dantra; 6. W. A. Mawson; 7. E. B. Meredith; 8. D. J. Macdonald; 9. G. L. Walker; 10. J. Macgregor; 11. B. Doyle; 12. W. H. Cadge; 13. W. G. H. Henderson; 14. H. W. B. Poyd; 15. C. L. Swaine; 16. H. Hamilton; 17. R. Cobb; 18. K. A. Dalal; 19. A. E. R. Stephens; 20. M. H. Smith; 21. P. I. Farrell; 22. J. Hunter; 23. N. J. Halpin.

FUGITIVE SLAVES.—A Parliamentary Return obtained on the motion of Mr. W. B. Holms states that Commodore Sir Leopold Heath is the only British naval officer on a foreign station who "during the last ten years has asked Government for instructions in regard to slaves who have taken refuge on board their vessels while in the territorial waters of countries where slavery is the law of the land." The correspondence on the subject is given in papers lately presented to Parliament. The return also states that "no distinct case has occurred during the last ten years 'relating to fugitive slaves,' which has ended in an action being brought against a British naval officer:" but a somewhat analogous case happened to Captain Sullivan, of the London, last year The report of Mr. Rothery to the Treasury on this case is given in the return. The boats of the London captured and destroyed a supposed slave dhow off the Zanzibar coast, but Captain Prideaux, the Acting Judge of the Consular Court at Zanzibar, subsequently awarded compensation to the owner of the dhow, on the ground that, although the women on board the vessel were technically slaves, they had been "free to all intents and purposes since the death of their late master," and were voluntary passengers on board the dhow. The return states that "the compensation awarded to the owner of the dhow has been paid by the country."

THE LATE COLLISION OFF DOVER.—After deliberating for some time, the coroner's jury in the inquiry into the circumstances under which the Strathclyde was sunk off Dover returned a verdict of manslaughter against the commanding officer of the German steamer Franconia, at the same time condemning in the strongest terms the person in charge of that vessel for steaming away and leaving the crew and passengers of the Strathclyde to their fate, apparently without rendering them any assistance. Similar condemnation was passed on the persons in command of the steam-tug Palmerston for not succouring the passengers as they might have done. The Board of Trade inquiry is fixed to take place at Greenwich on Feb. 29; meanwhile, the Franconia has been detained. The following may be taken as reliable information with reference to the passengers by the Strathclyde:—Saved and landed at Deal, Captain Beckett, Mrs. Beckett, and Mr. E. Weatherdon; landed at Deal and died immediately, Mr. W. Bussell; picked up by the Queen of Nations, barque, but died in boat, Miss Young; died on board the Early Morn, lugger, Mr. Thomas Quinlin. The passengers who are missing are—Miss Gilmour, Mr. J. P. Wills, Mrs. Tubb, Mrs. Stuart, Miss Horsford, Miss Forsyth, Mr. Graves, Mrs. Graves, Miss Bowring, Mrs. Stockwell, Mrs. Bussell, Major A. R. Loughnan, Mrs. Loughnan, Captain Greene and Miss Greene, James Fogerty and Agnes Fogerty, both servants to Mr. Bussell.

LORD SALISBURY ON THE COTTON DUTIES.—In answer to a deputation introduced by Lord Winmarleigh, and consisting of many members of Parliament and representatives of associated committees of cotton manufacturers and workmen, who waited on Thursday on the Marquis of Salisbury at the India-office, to lay before him their difficulties with regard to Indian competition, his lordship spoke at some length on the cotton duties. He said he retained the opinion that the import duties on cotton must go at some fixed period of time, and that the increase which undoubtedly does take place in the Indian revenue should be applied to that purpose. He was not prepared to recommend that any new tax should be put upon the Indian people. But while saying that no additional taxes can be imposed, he thought it one of the first subjects with which the Indian financier ought to deal. The most noble marquis said, in conclusion, "I have only to state that instructions—precise instructions—in this sense have been for some months passed addressed to the Indian Government. They have been directed to fix a period at which the import duty shall cease, and to fix up to that time its gradual reduction. But at the same time they have been told—and as it was my duty to tell them, it is my duty to represent to you now—that the paramount importance of maintaining the credit and equilibrium of the finance of the Indian Government must be considered in any such operations. I have no reason to doubt that the Indian Government will obey the instructions they have received, and if they are justified by our finances I trust the objects you have at heart will be speedily attained."

Col. Wiseman-Clark, 73rd Foot; Majors Hole and Crawfurd, 6th Foot; Major Shiffner, 54th Foot; Surgeons Brodie and Macmullen, Army Medical Department; Quartermaster Gibson, R.A.; Major C. H. Barnes, R.A.; Capt. Halliday, R.A.; Capt. Beamish, 5th Foot; Capt. Barr, 15th Foot; Capts. Stuart and Hewat, 21st Foot; Capt. Kane, 48th Foot.; Lieut. M'Laughlin, 48th Foot; Capt. Healey, 66th Foot; Lieut. Adams, 66th Foot; Lieut. Torrie, 67th Foot.; Lieuts. Brockie and Garnett, 33rd Foot.; Capt. Maguire and Lieut. Odell, 44th Foot; Lieut. Crosadaile, 22nd Regiment; Capt. Smee and Lieut. Massy, 56th Regiment; Lieuts. Williamson, Plowden, and Gaussen, 43rd Foot; Capt. Dillon and Lieut. Bulpett, 45th Foot; Brigade-Major Dunn and Lieuts. Caddell and Brown, 89th Foot; Capts. Roberts, Tillard, Shiel, Smith, Marshall, and Lake, of the Royal Artillery; Capt. Hill, R.E.; Major Lucas, 109th Foot; Capt. Dean Pitt, R.A.; Vetrinary Surgs. Phillips and Dwyer, R.H.A.; Major Nairne, R.H.A.; Lieuts. Waller and St. Clair, R.E.; Capt. Preston, 5th Foot; Capt. Pearson and Sub-Lieut. Seton Burn, 43rd Regiment; Capt. Brownrigg, 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade; Capt. Firman, 4th Foot; Sub.-Lieuts. Amherst and Herbert, 7th Foot; Sub-Lieut. the Hon. P. Leigh, 15th Hussars; Sub-Lieut. Cavenagh, 16th Foot; Sub-Lieut. Golightly, 60th Foot; Sub-Lieut. Pearse, 45th Foot; Capt. Napier, 3rd Hussars; Capt. Thurburn, 83rd Foot; Sub-Lieut. Skinner, 4th Hussars; Sub-Lieut. Angelo, 40th Foot; Major Stuart, 1st Foot; Surgs.-Major Johnstone and Pennington, and Surg. Cogan, of the Army Medical Department; Paymaster Waslett, 6th Foot; Capt. Treeve, 34th Foot; Capt. Foster, 44th Foot; Capts. Burnett and Auchinleck, R.A.; and Surg.-Gen. Innes, C.B., Army Medical Department.

SUICIDE OF AN INDIAN OFFICER.—Mr. Hardwicke, coroner for Central Middlesex, held an inquest on Monday on the body of Alexander P. Le Messurier, a retired major general, aged seventy-seven, of Inverness-place, Bayswater. Captain James Le Messurier, of 41, Eastbourne-terrace, identified the body as that of his uncle, who had been in the Indian army. Deceased was in good health and spirits a month since, but seemed to be afraid of a relative who controlled all his movements. On Thursday week, witness, on hearing of his death, went to the house, but was forbidden an entry to view the body, and he had never been able to gain a sight of deceased until that morning, when he went with the jury to identify the body. He could not say what property deceased died possessed of, but knew that he had £1 000 a year as a pension and the produce of some other property. The wife of the witness corroborated her husband's statements, and said the relative alluded to attended the deceased and managed his affairs, keeping all the money and signing the cheques. Deceased never had a farthing in his possession, to the best of her belief. Mrs Ellen Quilt, who had known the deceased, said that a doctor first visited him one day last week, but on his arrival there did not appear to be anything the matter with the patient. The relative mentioned sent her for a doctor on Wednesday week, and told her to ask for the stomach pump, as the deceased had taken poison. Thomas Le Messurier, cousin of the deceased, stated that for the last twenty-two months he had managed the affairs of his relative, who had up till lately enjoyed good health. On his becoming ill he was attended by Mr. Ledham, whom witness paid. On Wednesday week the deceased rang the bell, and then said, "Tom, I am dying; this will tell you," throwing down a letter, in which deceased said he was dying, and that he had been most unhappy, and then went on to money affairs; deceased added that he had taken four ounces of laudanum. Witness at once sent for a medical man, and everything was done for the deceased. His mind had been giving way. Witness always gave deceased money when he asked for it. The jury returned a verdict of suicide whilst of unsound mind.

THE OPIUM TRAFFIC.—On Monday a deputation, introduced by the Earl of Shaftesbury, was received by the Marquis of Salisbury, at the India-office, the object being to urge upon him the limitation of the cultivation and manufacture of opium in India. Lord George Hamilton (Under-Secretary of State for India) was present, as were also Mr. J. W. Pease, M.P., Mr. Alderman M'Arthur, M.P., Mr. H. Richard, M.P., Mr. W. H. James, M.P., Mr. J. J. Colman, M.P., Mr. M. J. Stewart, M.P., Sir A. Cotton, General Alexander, Professor Sheldon Amos, Rev. J. Legge, Mr. N. G. Choy, Mr. E. B. Underhill, Mr. H. Hipsley, Rev. F.S. Turner, and Mr. F. W. Chesson. After the views of the deputation had been expressed—the Earl of Shaftesbury stating that the consumption of ardent spirits was rapidly spreading throughout India, under the direct encouragement of the British Government—the Marquis of Salisbury replied to the effect that, coming to the general principle involved, a very deep line must be drawn between the two portions of the controversy. There was the question whether they ought to continue to be the growers and sellers of the opium as Government, or whether they ought to interfere by artificial means with private people growing it in China. As far as his own personal opinion was concerned, he should not be inclined to introduce all over the country such a system as that of Bengal, although it was more favourable to the growth of a restricted quantity than was that of Bombay. In Bengal great care was taken by the Government in the growth of the opium, and it had no deleterious effect on the health of the consumers, as had the Chinese drug. It was a peculiar request to ask them to limit private enterprise, and he could not hold out a hope that legislation in that direction was probable, and if he were asked to assign a time when such might be undertaken, he should say it would be subsequent to the time when the Bill was passed for the prevention of the sale of spirits in England. He could only say that the Government of India would watch the question carefully, and that it would occupy the attention of the Viceroy now going out.

THE WILL OF THE LATE MAJOR-GENERAL REECE.—This case was again before the Court of Probate on Feb. 18, when the cross-examination of the Rev. W. Reece, who, with his brother, contested the validity of the will of their father, Major-General William Reece, C.B., late of Huntingdon-street, Barnsbury, on the ground that the testator was not of sound mind when he executed it, was resumed. The witness adhered to his statement in examination-in-chief that neither he nor his brother, Lieutenant Reece, had been guilty of any unkindness towards or neglect of their father in his last illness, and stated that on July 30, 1875, two days before his father's death, his father sent for him, and, taking him by the hand, said, "I have done a grievous wrong; I hope you will be able to put it right after my death." The witness added that his father was then calm and rational, but very ill, and that it was the last occasion on which he saw him. The examination of Lieutenant

Reece occupied the greater part of the day, and several witnesses remaining still to be examined on behalf of the defendants, the case was again adjourned. On Feb. 19 the further hearing was continued. After the examination of a few witnesses, among them Dr. Stewart, of Harley-street, whom the defendants called in to see their father on their arrival in town on May 13, a brief consultation between the counsel in the case ensued and resulted in a compromise. Mr. Serjeant Parry, in announcing the fact to the Court, said he was happy to say that the parties had come to an arrangement in the case, which would preclude the necessity of prolonging the inquiry any further. Sir H. James, on behalf of the defendants, said that during the course of the inquiry the principal and primary object they had in view was to establish that their conduct towards their father in his last illness had been that which the conduct of sons in such circumstances should be, and trusted that that would also be the opinion of all who had heard the case. Mr. Murphy, on the part of the interveners, expressed his full concurrence in the terms of the arrangement. His Lordship: It was a case in which it was eminently desirable that a settlement should be arrived at. I, of course, am still not fully possessed of all the facts and arguments which would have been brought before me, but it will probably be satisfactory to all parties that I should state that, so far as I have been able to form an opinion, I think the conduct of the Rev. William Reece and Lieutenant Reece is entirely free from blame. I think that they behaved with kindness towards their father to the best of their judgment. On the other hand, I think that Mr. Low acted bonâ fide in what he did; and I hope there will be no reason for either party feeling any resentment against the other for the future. The substance of the arrangement was that probate should be allowed of the will executed by the testator on April 23, 1875, with its three codicils, and that the will of July 1 should be pronounced against; and the Court decreed accordingly.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, Feb. 21.—THE SUEZ CANAL PURCHASE.—In Committee of Supply, the adjourned debate on the proposed vote of £4,080,000 for the purchase of the Suez Canal shares was resumed by Mr. LOWE, who went minutely into details to show that neither Mr. Disraeli nor the Chancellor of the Exchequer had accurately described the nature of the transaction. He contended that some £37,000 ought to be added to the vote for the interest which Messrs. Rothschild are to receive. The terms accorded to Messrs. Rothschild were very exorbitant, because there could be no risk in their advance. The transaction might be regarded as an important political demonstration, as a purely financial affair, or as intended to acquire influence in the management of the Canal. The political importance of the purchase has been minimised as much as possible lately by the Government, but this made many things in it quite unintelligible—Mr. Cave's mission, for instance. The Chancellor of the Exchequer had asserted that the Government had acted deliberately, but Mr. Lowe asserted that they had acted with incredible carelessness and negligence, and were not well informed, because they were under the mistaken impression that by buying the shares they had acquired votes and influence in the management of the Canal.—Sir HENRY WOLFF insisted that the shares had been purchased by Messrs. Rothschild on behalf of the Government on the faith that Parliament would buy them back, and that consequently the operation was not wholly devoid of risk. With regard to the general policy of the transaction, he defended the conduct of the Government as sagacious and farseeing, and gave it as his opinion that it was for the interest of England that she should acquire the largest possible interest in the Canal.—Mr. GLADSTONE said that the House was practically left no choice in the matter—that the purchase, so far as the Khedive was concerned, was complete. He did not hold the Chancellor of the Exchequer personally responsible except in his character of a Cabinet Minister, nor did he attach any blame to the Messrs. Rothschild; but he held that the Government ought not to have placed itself in the hands of a private financial firm, and by that means have given facilities for the enormous speculations in Egyptian bonds which took place pending the negotiations for the advance. He objected to the improvident character of the arrangement with Messrs. Rothschild. Referring next to the political aspect of the question, Mr. Gladstone invited Ministers to explain what were the new evils which the Government apprehended would follow the purchase of the shares by France or any other foreign country, and what was the additional security we had acquired for keeping open the passage to India. He also asked whether we had a preferential charge over the other creditors of Egypt, and whether any one could safely predict that the Khedive would be able to pay the interest he had promised.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER answered that, although some of the inconveniences referred to might arise, they would have arisen—and perhaps would have been precipitated—had the purchase not been effected. Indeed, it might put the Government in a position to prevent them. As to what Mr. Gladstone had said of the London press, Sir Stafford Northcote replied it was enough for the Government to defend their own conduct without being responsible for the inferences of the press, and he denied emphatically that the Government had inspired the press, or had done anything more than to communicate to it the fact of the purchase. He explained again the manner in which the Government had been led to purchase the shares, rather than leave the Khedive to mortgage them at a ruinous sacrifice, and asserted positively that the fact of the shares only carrying ten votes was perfectly well known to the Cabinet. The Government had gone to Messrs. Rothschild rather than to the Bank of England, because it was an unprecedented transaction, and because time pressed. He repeated the explanation he had formerly given as to Mr. Cave's mission, contending that it was a matter of prudence and high policy to prevent Egypt falling into a position of embarrassment.—Sir J. M'KENNA, Mr. BENETT-STANFORD, and Sir H. HOLLAND supported the policy of the Government, while Mr. NORWOOD opposed it.—Mr. ROEBUCK reminded the House that so long ago as 1858 he had moved an amendment in favour of assistance to M. de Lesseps, and that he was violently opposed by Lord Palmerston, who had a craze that the Canal would damage English commerce. On that occasion he was supported by Mr. Gladstone and opposed by Mr. Disraeli. He owned that he was disappointed at the speech of Mr. Lowe, which reminded him not of a statesman but of an Old Bailey lawyer. He approved of the policy of the Government, and he thought they would have been unfit for their position if they had haggled over the price they were to pay, or had lost the great opportunity that had arisen.—Mr. LEVESON-GOWER, Lord GEORGE HAMILTON, Colonel BERESFORD, Mr. MITCHELL HENRY, and Mr. LAING having spoken, Lord HARTINGTON criticised the Government for not having replied categorically to the questions put by Mr. Gladstone as to the employment of Messrs. Rothschild and the speculation in Egyptian bonds before the completion of the transaction. At the same time he felt that the tone of the Committee was in favour of the purchase, and that the vote would be a unanimous one. The country could not, of course, repudiate the policy of the Government, and he doubted whether, if it were absolutely as well as technically free, it would not ratify the transaction. Conceding that there were arguments in favour of the purchase, he reminded the House that the Government had deliberately ignored all reference to the political aspect of the question and to the position of the Canal in time of war. He apprehended that the Government meditated some financial intervention in the affairs of Egypt, and he warned the House that if we were needlessly to interfere in this manner we should find ourselves in a false and humiliating position.—Mr. DISRAELI remarked that it was quite clear that if Mr. Gladstone had been in office the Suez shares would never have been purchased. As to the commission paid to Messrs. Rothschild, it would not have been possible to have raised four millions of money at short notice without converting other securities and incurring some loss. The Government could not have asked the Bank of England for the money, for that would have been contrary to law. Adverting next to the political aspects of the question, he denied that Ministers had entered upon the transaction in ignorance of all the circumstances of the case. On the contrary, the subject of the Canal had long occupied their consideration. He believed that the position of England in the East was much stronger in consequence of the acquisition of the shares, but he declined to state what would be the condition of affairs in the event of war. He did not recommend the purchase as a commercial speculation or as a financial investment; but, looking at it from a political point of view and as likely to strengthen the Empire, he confidently urged it on the acceptance of Parliament. The vote was then put, and carried without a division.

HOUSE OF LORDS, TUESDAY, Feb. 22.—THE MARTINI-HENRY RIFLE.—The Duke of ST. ALBANS brought the subject of the Martini-Henry Rifle under the notice of the House, observing that this weapon was not, as far as he understood, so perfect as had been expected, and asked whether there would be any objection to lay on the table the official reports respecting it, and the estimated cost of repairing the defects complained of.—Lord CADOGAN said that some defects had been pointed out in the Martini-Henry Rifle, but they were such as could be remedied at a comparatively small cost. As this particular rifle was chosen after great deliberation, and as much public money had been spent in its manufacture, it was the duty of the Government to make the arm serviceable by remedying the defects.—Lord GREY thought that the first consideration should be to provide our soldiers with the best possible weapon; and he wished to know whether it was true that the recoil of this weapon interfered with correct shooting.—Lord LANSDOWNE stated that he had been told that the Martini-Henry rifle had been tried by a large number of regiments, and that the reports respecting it were highly satisfactory, the recoil being one of the points to which attention was directed.—The Duke of CAMBRIDGE said he should prefer the rifle if it had a half-cock. No doubt some defects had been pointed out, but they might be remedied by more careful manufacture, and the recoil was found to be owing to the musket being too long.—Lord CARDWELL said that he shrank from no responsibility with respect to the Martini-Henry rifle, and he hoped that the Government would lay on the table reports relating to the experiments tried within the last few months, in order that it might be seen whether this rifle was or was not the best weapon in Europe. He pointed out that it had been selected after most careful inquiry, and after a proper trial had been made of its capabilities.—Lord CADOGAN promised to inquire whether the reports referred to could be produced.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, Feb. 22.—THE BOMBAY NATIVE ARMY.—Mr. PARNELL asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he had any objection to lay before the House the papers relating to the recent dismissal from the service by his Excellency Sir Charles Stavely, Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, of a Subadar of the 25th Bombay Native Infantry on the charge of disloyal concealment of insurrectional circulars addressed to the Mahratta soldiers in the Bombay Native Army; and whether it had been deemed expedient as yet to arm the Bombay Native Army with breechloading weapons, and, if so, to what extent the change had been carried out.—Lord G. HAMILTON: No papers have been received at the India-office in reference to the dismissal of this Native officer of the Bombay Native Infantry, and if we had received them, I question it it would be for the advantage of the public service to publish them. (Hear, hear.) The finding of the Court-Martial which tried him is to be seen in the published General Orders of the Bombay Army, dated the 31st of December last. It has been deemed expedient to arm the Bombay Native Army with breechloaders, eleven regiments having this weapon, a number which will be increased during the ensuing year.

INDIAN ECCLESIASTICAL ESTABLISHMENTS.—Lord GEORGE HAMILTON, in answer to Mr. O'REILLY, said in the Parliamentary Return, No. 181, 1875, there were several letters, or extracts of letters, between the Government of India and the Secretary of State, subsequent to the despatch of the 6th of July, 1872. With the exception of the telegram which he read out to the hon. gentleman the other night, there was nothing to lay upon the table of the House. The despatch, of which the telegram was the embodiment, would shortly arrive, and there was no objection to making it public.

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE CIRCULARS.—Mr. WHITBREAD rose in a full House to move the resolutions of which he had given notice, which set forth the principle that a slave once admitted to the protection of the British flag, should be treated while on board one of her Majesty's ships as if he were free, and should not be removed from or ordered to leave the ship on the ground of slavery; and demanded the withdrawal of all Circulars, Instructions, or Orders heretofore issued limiting the discretion of commanding officers in respect of the reception of slaves on board her Majesty's ships. Mr. Whitbread thought that if domestic slavery were to be dealt with it would be more dignified on the part of a great country like England to attack the institution, not the individual. On the whole, he preferred the first Circular, which was at least direct in its purposes and unambiguous in its language.—The second Circular was a weak compromise, saying to the slave. "We don't surrender you," and to the slaveowner, "We don't keep him."—Mr. HANBURY, premising that he was not there to defend the first Circular, thought that on the whole it was desirable to await further information on the matter to be furnished by the report of the Royal Commissioners nominated the other day.—Mr. FORSTER admitted that Lord Clarendon's letter, which he much regretted, made it impossible for the late Government to treat this motion as a party attack, and for that reason there could be nothing humiliating in the present Government accepting Mr. Whitbread's resolution.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL took upon himself, in common with Sir John Karslake and Sir Richard Baggallay, the responsibility of the first Circular, and still maintained the accuracy and legality of the advice given by them, and upon which the Circular was issued. But the phraseology of the document was, he admitted, not happy. It was "redundant," and he would not say that her Majesty's Government had not been wise in withdrawing it. On the general question he protested against the use of metaphor in connection with the law of slavery, supporting himself herein by reference to the published opinions of "an eminent but diffident contemporary writer "Historicus." Sir W. Harcourt was not present to hear read the extracts which the Attorney-General selected, and which strongly bore against the assumption that a British ship in neutral waters was as a portion of British soil. In conclusion, the Attorney-General observed that the interests of the slave would be furthered rather by cultivating a good understanding with foreign nations than by indulgence in "bluster" about his freedom when he touched a British ship.—Mr. W. HOLMS, Sir JOHN HAY (who spoke in favour of the spirit of the resolution, but did not say he would vote for it), Mr. E. ASHLEY, Mr. A. MILLS, Mr. OSBORNE MORGAN, and Captain RITCHIE continued the debate.—In a moderately full House, Sir HENRY JAMES supported the resolution. At the outset he referred to the extraordinary speech of the Attorney-General, and amid loud cheers protested his astonishment that the hon. and learned gentleman should have found it possible to defend the first Circular, and to declare that in his opinion it was, save for its literary faults, unimpeachable. To that opinion he opposed the Lord Chancellor's view, as stated by Lord Derby on the opening night of the session, and the opinion of the Prime Minister as expressed by himself. The Lord Chancellor had admitted, with respect to that Circular, that "the Government had been wrongfully, or at any rate doubtfully, advised;" Mr. Disraeli had told the House of Commons that he "was not there to defend the first Circular;" and Sir Henry James left his hon. and learned friend the Attorney-General to settle the conflict of opinion with the Lord Chancellor and the Prime Minister. After examining the law of the case Sir Henry James, recurring to the facts, found that the only commander of a British ship who had asked for instructions with respect to the treatment of fugitive slaves was Sir Leopold Heath, and Sir Leopold Heath was one of the gentlemen nominated on the Royal Commission, which was by its report to instruct the House of Commons. —Mr. GATHORNE HARDY replied in a vigorous, animated, but lengthy speech, one of the succession of perorations of which was a simple and effective declaration of personal detestation of slavery, followed by a plea for the secretness of treaties. It was a quarter after twelve when the right hon. gentleman concluded; and on the motion of Mr. HERSCHELL the debate was adjourned till Thursday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, Feb. 24.—THE SUEZ CANAL DUES. —In reply to the Marquis of HARTINGTON, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER admitted that Colonel Stokes and M. de Lesseps were in communication on the subject of the Suez Canal dues, but of course their arrangements could not be final until they had been agreed to by the Khedive, the Porte, and the Maritime Powers. The right hon. baronet added that the negotiations upon which Colonel Stokes was engaged were proceeding favourably, and that Colonel Stokes would shortly return to England.

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE CIRCULAR.—Mr. HERSCHELL resumed the debate on the Slave Trade Circular, supporting Mr. Whitbread's resolution in a speech of marked ability.—At its close the House emptied, and the debate was continued in the presence of from a score to fifty hon. members by Mr. GORST, Mr. FORSYTH (who announced "with deep regret" his intention of voting against the Government), Mr. PEASE, and Lord ESLINGTON, who deprecated a division on the ground that the House of Commons was one in its detestation of slavery, and that a division would place members in a false position. The noble lord urged the Government to consent to the withdrawal of the second Circular, and to await the issue of the labours of the Royal Commission.—Mr. WADDY, Mr. BENTINCK, Mr. STANSFELD, and Mr. GIBSON having addressed the House, Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT rose, it being a quarter to eleven, and the House fairly refilled. At the outset the hon. and learned gentleman disposed of what, if he might be allowed to use the expression, he would call "the mare's nest" of the Act of 1873, by showing that it was simply a consolidation Act, and altered nothing. But even if it were otherwise, it had nothing to do with the Slave Circular, and that, he added amid Opposition cheers, was what the House had to consider. He reduced the inquiry to the question, was England bound by international obligations to surrender a slave taken in the territorial waters of another State? That was a question of law, and Sir W. Harcourt unhesitatingly answered it in the negative. The second question was, If England were not so bound, would she so act? That was a question of policy; and, with still less hesitation and considerably more warmth, the hon. and learned gentleman showed that if the popular voice were listened to, the answer would again be in the negative.—It was just after midnight when the Marquis of HARTINGTON rose, following Mr. PLUNKETT.—At this time the House was crowded to its fullest capacity, the galleries on either side having their double rows of hon. members, as each seat on the floor had its occupant. His lordship spoke for twenty-five minutes, and Mr. DISRAELI next presenting himself was received with a loud cheer from the Ministerial benches. The right hon. gentleman was exceedingly animated throughout his address, more especially in that portion in which he devoted himself to what he termed "a vindication of Lord Clarendon," from the imputations of his friends who had deserted him—an episode enlivened by a running fire of protest from the front Opposition bench, when it was alleged that the Prime Minister was not quite fairly representing the case as it was to be found in the documents which he rapidly summarised.—At half-past one the House was cleared for a division, and on the figures being announced it appeared that Mr. Whitbread's resolution was lost by 293 votes against 248. Mr. Hanbury's amendment was then put as a substantive resolution, whereupon Mr. FAWCETT moved his amendment thereto, urging the suspension of the second Circular, pending the report of the Royal Commission.—Mr. DISRAELI opposed this, and the House divided, with the result that the amendment was rejected, and Mr. Hanbury's resolution having been agreed to, the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, Feb. 25.—THE QUEEN'S TITLES.— Mr. FORSTER gave notice that he would ask if there was any objection to lay on the table the proclamation issued to the people of India by her Majesty when she assumed the government of that country. (Hear, hear.)—Mr. DISRAELI: I will not trouble the right hon. gentleman to put the question. The proclamation shall be laid on the table.

ARMY REFORM.—On the motion to go into Committee of Supply, Mr. JOHN HOLMS interposed with a motion declaring that the present condition of the British Army is most unsatisfactory and its cost extravagant; that the system of retaining men in barracks longer than is necessary to make them efficient is "vicious and immoral;" and that it is inexpedient to maintain two rival paid forces in the United Kingdom. This led to a long debate, chiefly maintained by military officers, in a very thin House.—Sir G. CAMPBELL discussed the question of Indian reliefs, asserting that six years were too short a term to furnish an efficient army for India, and urging that with a short period of service in India the army would not only cost a great deal more than at present but it would be infinitely less efficient. He believed that we must be prepared to face the question of an army for service in India as well as an army for service at home.—In replying, Mr. GATHORNE HARDY read Mr. Holms a severe lecture on the character of his speeches on this subject delivered during the recess, particularly complaining that he should on two occasions have called political meetings of his own friends for the purpose of discussing the condition of the army. That, Mr. Hardy said, was reducing a question of vital national importance to the level of a party fight, "and," he added, echoing a remark made a few nights ago by Mr. Disraeli with reference to Mr. Lowe, "the hon. member is the only man in the country who would have done so." After answering in detail the various and widely-spread points touched by preceding speakers, the right hon. gentleman expressed the hope that Mr. Holms would not press to a division a resolution which had not, regarded as a whole, received the support of a single member of the House.—Sir GEORGE BALFOUR, attempting to continue the debate, spoke amid a buzz of conversation, and long-continued cries of "Divide!" which rendered his speech inaudible.—Ultimately Mr. HOLMS offered to withdraw his amendment, but this course being objected to by some hon. members, it was negatived without a division.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT MIAN-MIR.—A most lamentable accident took place on Saturday last on the Mian-Mir-road, a little boy of four years of age, the son of Captain Bailey, 11th foot, Adjutant of the Lahor Volunteers, being killed. It appears the child was riding a horse attended by a syce and a servant; while passing down the Mian-Mir-road the horse took fright and broke away from the syce, unseating the child riding it, who fell, but was unable to disengage its foot from the stirrup. The poor boy was, therefore, dragged right down the Mian-Mir-road, as far as the turning to Moozung, up which the horse ran, dragging the child with it. It then jumped two compound walls, and was finally stopped in one of the gardens in the neighbourhood of Major Trail's and Dr. Calthrop's house. Much sympathy is felt by the public for Captain and Mrs. Bailey in their sad bereavement.—Indian Public Opinion, Jan. 29.

THE PIANO-MÉCANIQUE.

DEBAIN Inventor.

A Piano on which any person, although unacquainted with Music, can perform the most difficult and elaborate Compositions with faultless execution and delicacy.

The Piano-Mécanique is actuated by means of planchettes (small boards), into which is pinned the Composition to be performed; and these planchettes are caused to travel on a metal plate which is fitted on the top of the Instrument. This metal plate is pierced in a straight line across its breadth by a series of small openings, up through which project the steel ends of the keys of a miniature keyboard, chromatically arranged. The pins of the planchette, coming in contact with the miniature keyboard, act on the keys in a similar manner as would the fingers of the hand.

The metal pins of the planchette vary in height according to the marks of expression, accent, etc., indicated by the composer, the highest producing the full force of blow from the hammer, and the lowest the most delicate. It will thus be seen that every conceit of the author can be copied, and afterwards mechanically rendered in all its integrity; in fact, execution quite beyond the manual dexterity of the most accomplished performer is, by this system, ensured.

The Piano-Mécanique, when compared with kindred Instruments, presents at once its advantages; notably:—Compositions can be played in their entirety, there being no necessity for mutilation to meet the capacities of the Instrument, nor curtailment to suit the circumference of a barrel; greater facility for selecting the Music to be performed, and its requiring much less space; its faultless execution and complete means of expression; the facility with which any single Composition may be obtained for it, and at small cost; its freedom from derangement, either by excessive use or from the extremes of climate; the advantage of a Seven-Octave Manual for ordinary use.

In proof of the success of the Piano-Mécanique, it may be stated that upwards of 3,000 Compositions, ranging from the simple Ballad or Dance to the difficult Fantasia, Overture, or Grand Symphony, have been arranged for it, and to these, additions are almost daily being made.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS
THE OLDEST
PATENT MEDICINE.
In boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a most simple form. Take some good compound, such as

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tasted by many thousands of persons, are found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, February 14; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, February 12; Calcutta, February 11.

THE Prince of Wales's visit to Jaipur ended on Feb. 7 with his departure for Naini Tal. In its main features the visit was of course a mere repetition of those to Gwalior and other native States. There was the same show of elephants, hung with silver trappings and painted in all the colours of the rainbow; with the usual crowd of loyal rajahs eager to offer costly presents for which, as they well knew, his Royal Highness could return no equivalent; and the usual banquet with the inevitable exchange of compliments at the day's close. The Prince himself however had cause to remember Jaipur with special pleasure, for it was there that he shot his first tiger—a fine beast—eight feet four inches long, whose skin will doubtless reappear at Sandringham as a valued trophy of the chase. The accident which befel Prince Louis of Battenberg, through a fall from his horse while out pig-sticking at Farrah, near Agra, was serious enough to keep him there for some days. Besides dislocating his collar-bone, he was suffering from concussion of the brain. On his way through Agra the Prince saw the Taj by moonlight, to our thinking the best of all possible times for taking in the full beauty of Shah Jahan's "dream in marble." Blue lights are all very well, and sunlight is still better, but neither in this case equals the enchanting effect of pure moonshine.

THERE seems to be no prospect of a meeting between the Prince of Wales and the little Nizam of Haidarabad, either at Ellora or elsewhere. The heat of the weather in March, at the time of the Prince's intended journey homewards through Bombay, has put a necessary stop, on the Nizam's account, to any such arrangement.

AT the meeting of the Viceroy's Legislative Council at Calcutta on February 8, after discussing and passing a Bill to amend and consolidate the law relating to pleaders, muktiars and revenue agents in Northern India, the Council granted leave to Sir W. Muir to introduce a Bill enabling the Government to declare certain coins of Native States to be legal tender in British India. This measure has become needful from the increased intercourse between our own territories and the native States.

IT is again asserted in India that proposals for reorganising the Native Army are being discussed by the Viceroy's Executive Council, and that the result of their deliberations will be forwarded to Westminster before Lord Napier starts for this country. As Sir F. Haines will not relieve him before April, the Council have some weeks still in hand for the completion of their labours, if they are not meanwhile called away to other matters of equal moment.

THE efforts lately made by Mr. Lavelle to discover gold in the Kolar district of Mysor appear to have been rewarded with success. The quartz obtained by his party gave tokens of a rich yield, and it was resolved to start a company to work the mines. To satisfy themselves of the existence of the precious metal in Kolar, Mr. Linden, late of the International Ice Company, was sent to report upon the new field, and his report was so assuring that it has since been decided to lay out large capital upon the enterprise. Mr. Lavelle holds authority from the Mysor Government to search for gold over a tract of country ten miles round; but the firm that has undertaken the business will begin by working only a portion of this extensive field. Few people, we are told, can have any idea of the mine of wealth to be found in the gold fields of Kolar. They are said to be the richest in India, if not in the world, surpassing even the gold mines of Ballarat in Australia. If there were any chance of that last assertion proving true, the question of checking the present fall in the exchange value of the rupee would soon be materially simplified by India herself.

THE actual receipts from eleven sales of Bengal opium and ten months' duty on Malwa opium appear to have exceeded the estimates by £207,491. The receipts from Bengal opium have actually exceeded the estimates by £531,327, but the loss on the Bombay side accounts for the smallness of the net gain.

IN announcing the appointment of Sir R. Meade to act as Resident at Haidarabad, the Government of India records its "high sense" of the services rendered by that officer during his late employment at Baroda as Agent to the Viceroy. When Sir Richard took over the Agency from Sir Lewis Pelly, in April, 1875, there were many and most important matters in hand: the choice of a successor to Malharao, and the adoption of suitable measures for giving the youthful Prince selected a sound and wholesome training; the re-establishment of the Native Government; revenue and fiscal reforms, particularly those relating to the incidence of the land revenue; the reorganisation of the regular and irregular troops of the State; the investigations into, and adjustment of the long-standing claims of the Sirdars and hereditary retainers of the Gaikwar; these are some of the most important subjects with which the Agent to the Governor-general and Special Commissioner was called upon to deal, and with which, with the cordial co-operations of the able Minister, Sir T. Madava Rao, he has dealt to the complete satisfaction of his Excellency in Council. To the arrangements made by Sir Richard Meade for the preservation of order, whether in the city of Baroda itself or in outlying districts, the Gaikwar State is indebted for the peace and prosperity now reigning in those territories: the benefits to be expected from the measures of sound administration, which have been introduced into the State in accordance with Sir Richard Meade's advice, are not less important, and as the Government of India is deeply concerned in the welfare of the Baroda people, and of his Highness the Gaikwar, the cordial thanks and acknowledgments of his Excellency in Council are due to the officer through whose successful exertions that welfare has been promoted.

A CALCUTTA telegram of February 13 to the Bombay Gazette states that Dr. Thornton has been appointed Secretary to the Order of the Star of India; that the Hon. Ashley Eden has resigned his seat in the Legislative Council; that Colonel Ardagh is appointed Commissioner of Tenasserim, and Colonel Horace Brown Commissioner of Pegu.

NOT the least picturesque of the scenes lately witnessed by the Prince of Wales was the parade at Agra of the motley troops led thither by the several princes of Rajputana. First came Bundi with a stately train of huge elephants, followed by a wild troop of horsemen, with banners and streamers. Next marched a long file of foot soldiers, "carrying the strangest devices—great suns of talc with silver rays, golden hands, and other emblems of royalty. Close behind them came the artillery of the State, the feeblest guns imaginable, manned by gunners in a uniform that, if it had not suggested a fire brigade, would have suggested dismounted cuirassiers." Then, led horses, with pink legs and tails, and gorgeous trappings; and after them a wild rabble of parti-coloured ragamuffins. Bikanir followed, says the Englishman's correspondent, "remarkable for his splendid camel troop, each beast carrying two men in scarlet, armed with matchlocks—a formidable corps for desert fighting; and then came by the same splendid elephants, the same wild horsemen, feeble guns, and variegated camp following. Bhartpur, Alwar, Dholpur then came by in turn, each straining to rival the other in magnificence; then Tonk's wild display of galloping cavalry, and the chain-armour camel corps of Dattia." The same writer declares that in the three miles of armed men that swept by there was much formidable stuff; no discipline, of course; but, still, what discipline had Skinner's Horse in the old days of Lake and Perron? There are still among our young cavalry officers plenty of Probyns and Curetons and Hodsons, no doubt; and a single one will suffice to make a troop of dare-devil horsemen a terror to even a disciplined enemy. Many who looked on at the procession came away laughing at it, and no doubt it was very ludicrous in parts. The guns were pea-shooters, with touchholes as large as the muzzles. The infantry—some, however, were a striking exception—a ridiculously dressed and shambling rout; while the led horses, bullock carts, and palanquins suggested the comic business of a pantomime, rather than a serious display before Royalty. But others, again, and the majority, were of opinion that it was this very mixture of magnificence and triviality that gave the spectacle its wonderful charm. Splendid in attire, and superb as a coup de œuil of the most artistic kind, it was even, when the details were absurd, the perfection of the picturesque.

ON Saturday last the Prince of Wales's trip to the Terai was brought to a close, when he killed his last tiger in Nepal—a very fine animal—not far from the camp. Yesterday he left Nepal, on his journey back to Bareilly. He was to dine there with the 18th Royal Irish, and continue his route by rail the same night to Allahabad.

SURGEON GENERAL FAYRER left the camp on Thursday morning, at the desire of the Prince, to report on Canon Duckworth's illness. Travelling to Lahor by special train, he arrived to find typhoid symptoms in a moderate form, which was reported to the Prince by telegraph on Saturday. On Sunday the Prince heard that Canon Duckworth was going on very favourably. Mr. Sidney Hall will go to Lahor and remain with the Canon till he is able to travel.

ACCORDING to a telegram of March 4, the Viceroy and the Commander-in-Chief were going next day to Allahabad to meet the Prince of Wales. The Prince will probably not return to Calcutta. A public meeting has been called to consider a proposal for erecting a memorial to Lord Napier of Magdala.

THE Indian Government have sanctioned the grant of jagirs rent-free to two police officers in the Bombay Presidency for service done in connection with late events at Baroda. The fortunate objects of the Viceroy's favour are Gajanand Vithal and Khan Bahadur Akbar Ali. The former receives grant of a village in any British taluk which he may name in Bombay, yielding an annual revenue of Rs. 1,200. It is to be held by him rent free during his lifetime, but will be continued to his heirs and successors on payment of half the quit rent. Akbar Ali gets on similar terms a village rent-free, yielding Rs. 500 a year.

OF the perils incident to tiger-hunting even from the back of an elephant, the Times correspondent gives a suggestive picture in his account of what befel one of the Prince's shooting parties the other day in Nepal. This party was led by Mr. Moore, Magistrate of Bareilly.

In beating across a grassy plain they came upon a fine tiger, which was making for the jungle, when Mr. Moore fired at and hit it. As they closed on in pursuit, the tiger turned on the elephants, sprang on the head and side of Mr. Robinson's, placing one claw on the rifle, so that he could not fire, and the other on the howdah door, and tearing the mahout's leg. The elephant swung around, the howdah door flew open, and the tiger fell off, but sprang at the elephant again and clawed it cruelly, till it was kicked off by the frightened beast. It then leaped up at once on the head of Colonel Ellis's elephant, and was tearing the mahout down, when Colonel Ellis, leaning down over the howdah, coolly fired, with the muzzle almost touching the tiger, which dropped dying on the ground, but not till it had lacerated the man's knee and leg.

Under favourable circumstances a good sportsman will drop his tiger before it has sprung at the elephant; but in this case it seems that the long grass, probably taller than the elephant himself, enabled the tiger to make his sudden and desperate charges unchecked.

ON another occasion the Prince of Wales himself incurred some of the risk attendant on the chase of such large game as wild elephants. He was mounted on one of Sir Jung Bahádur's Arabs, when the whole party "emerged from a wood on the plain of burnt reeds and grass, above which towered the monster elephant, his tail straight out, his proboscis curled up, running, and evidently tired. With view halloos and cheers, the horsemen pursued him, while the pad elephants came trumpeting up in the rear, the drivers standing on their backs, holding on with one hand and beating them with sticks and mallets in the other. The wild elephant stopped short, surveyed the horsemen, and rushed at the nearest with incredible speed. 'Fly for your lives; look out for the Prince!' shouted Sir Jung, and, in a second, Prince, Peer, and commoner were scouring through the grass and reeds as fast as horses could carry them. This was repeated again and again, for the elephant's runs were short, and he gave up speedily, but he came very near Lord Suffield and Mr. Rose on one occasion, and unpleasantly near to the Prince and others also." Sir Joseph Fayrer had a narrow escape of a different kind. "While at full speed in chase his horse leaped into a disused elephant pit, ten feet deep, but, wonderful to relate, neither broke a bone, and Sir J. Fayrer saw the rest of the hunt from an elephant's back."

THE Times Correspondent, writing from Penang on the 28th January, says that at Banda Baru everything remained quiet. At Qualla Kangsa a party of Sappers and some of the Ghurkas under Lieutenant Hare, who had gone to cut a road through the jungle, were fired upon by some natives, with no effect. "A return fire, the result of which could only be judged by the shrieks from the jungle, soon quieted the enemy, who beat a speedy retreat, in which they were assisted by a couple of well-directed shots from Captain Gwyn's guns." A small party of native police, under Mr. Hewick, had an encounter with some of the rebel Malays north of Qualla Kangsa. "They ran a great chance of being worsted by a much larger force, who retreated when one of the police called out for some auxiliary rockets, which were purely creatures of his fertile imagination. It was reported that this force had succeeded in killing th murderer of poor Birch, but subsequent investigation has shown that such was not the case, and that the native slain is only the man at whose hands was required the life of the interpreter who was killed just before the attack on the bathing-house in which Mr. Birch was." Ismail and Lela were said to be flying north to the neighbourhood of Queda, a province tributary to Siam. Mr. Hewick stated it as his firm conviction that he should in a few days be able to secure the person of Rajah Ismail; but in this he had been disappointed, as a sufficient force could not be spared from the small number of men available for such a purpose. About 100 of the 10th, under Lieutenant Louth, had just arrived at Penang, and another 100 were expected the following week, leaving the 30th to take their places. The 10th seem to have been singularly free from sickness, but both the Buffs and the 80th have suffered severely. Sub-Lieutenant Armstrong, of the Buffs, died of dysentery on the 25th January, and many of the regiment were in hospital from the same disease.

LATEST advices from Berlin and Tashkand assert that the subjugation of Khokan is confirmed. It reduces the distance between the Russian and English frontiers to 225 miles. A commission have determined to recommend the Orenburg route for the construction of a railway between European Russia and Tashkand. Khokan has been formally incorporated with Russia, and General Scobeleff has been appointed to the post of Governor of the newly-formed Province, which is to be called the Firghana. The inhabitants appear to be well satisfied with the new state of things.

OFFICIAL intelligence from Achin to the 21st ult. states that the Dutch troops have attacked the 26th Mukim district and have taken several Bentjngs and four Campongs. The Rajah of Pedir seems disposed to submit to the Netherlands authorities. The sanitary state of the troops is unfavourable. Other despatches announce the death, from cholera, of General Pel, Commander of the Dutch forces in Achin. General Engel has succeeded him in his command. The Dutch forces are advancing, and several of the Achinese chiefs are giving in their submission.

A SPECIAL telegram to the Daily News from Alexandria says that Colonel Stokes and Mr. Taylor left yesterday morning for Brindisi, by the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Thibet. The Duke of Sutherland, Sir Louis Mallet, and party left by the same steamer.

IT is not very easy to make out the movements of troops engaged in such a campaign as that which has brought Captain Channer and his sturdy little Gurkhas into just prominence. One critic in the Pall Mall Gazette not unfairly blames General Colborne for failing to arrange with the Bengal column, while lying idle at Quala Kangsa, a simultaneous advance on Quinta from opposite points, so as to catch the ex-Sultan Ismail within their toils. At Kinta, as at Blanja, our troops missed their prey, whereas by waiting a few days at Blanja to give Ross time for concerted action they would most likely have caught him. With regard however to one part of the late operations few will question the justice of the Pioneer's remarks as follow:—

> Altogether this little campaign in the south of the Malay Peninsula has been admirably conducted in the face of many difficulties, its success having been complete. Colonel Clay has burned Sri Menanti, and taken nine guns with no loss on his side, comparatively speaking. The enemy, as a letter from the scene of action puts it, "had threatened to make curry of the white men, but caught it hot themselves instead." Our little force has had to do hard and trying work on half rations, has been wet through every day, marching all the time through the densest jungle and over difficult hill tracks.

THE correspondence lately published between the Indian Government and the India-office, with regard to the new Tariff Act, reveals an important change in the relations between the two governments. Before March 31, 1874, the measures passed by the Legislative Council were announced to the Secretary of State for India through enactments sent hither for his approval or disallowance. The Secretary of State had a veto upon Indian legislation, but, with this exception, the responsibility for the laws passed rested solely with the Indian Government. Under such an arrangement it was seldom that the India-office cared to set aside an Act which had already obtained the force of law in India. In March, 1874, however, Lord Salisbury sent out a despatch enjoining the Viceroy to lay before his Council no measures of any importance, save on grounds of special urgency, before the Secretary of State had had time to consider and pass judgment on them. Last July a despatch was sent out from the India-office recommending the repeal of the import duty on manufactured cottons as soon as ever the state of the Indian finances might admit. While this despatch was yet on its way to India, there came a telegram from the Governor-General, dated August 5, stating that an Act for the revision of the Customs duties had been passed that day the principal features of which were the abolition of export duties, the reduction of import duties generally from 7½ to 5 per cent., the retention of the import duty on manufactured cottons, and the imposition of an import duty on long-stapled raw cotton. In reply Lord Salisbury telegraphed his objection to the Act as it stood, and asked why it had been withdrawn from the operation of the rule laid down in the Despatch of March, 1874.

LORD NORTHBROOK in his turn explained that the revision of the duties had been anxiously awaited by the commercial community; that the Government had received two strong remonstrances against further delay from the Chamber of Commerce at Calcutta; that the season of the year was the most convenient for the abolition of export duties; that the condition of trade urgently called for the relief given by the Bill; that prolonged discussions pending a reference to the Home Government would result in an inconvenient disclosure of the intention of the Government; that the measures included in the Bill were in accordance with the policy of the Home Government as communicated to the Government of India; and, finally, that the rule laid down by Lord Salisbury was professedly a return to older precedents, which showed that it had never been the practice to refer alterations of Customs duties for the opinion of the Home Government before they had been passed in the Legislative Council.

ON November 11 Lord Salisbury sent out an answer to the following effect. He is not surprised to hear that Lord Northbrook considered the measure urgent, for nothing else could have led him to pass it in so unusual a manner. It was not the time of year at which financial discussions usually take place. The Government was at a distance from the capital. None of the unofficial members of the Legislative Council were present. The Bill was introduced and became law in a single day. "It could obviously have only been a deep sense of the urgency of the measure which led" the Governor-General while discussing a subject "in respect to which the assistance of mercantile councillors is of especial value," to deprive himself of "the advice and knowledge of persons possessing other than official experience," and to forego the advantage of "receiving from external sources and in an informal shape the counsels which in consequence of the time and place of legislation could not be tendered in debate." Lord Salisbury cannot agree with his Excellency "in thinking that the urgency of the case was such as to justify either your failure to inform me of your intentions to legislate upon this subject, or the sudden action by which your proposals have been converted into law. By urgency it was not my intention to express the state of things in which an earlier is preferable to a later passage of a proposed measure; for such a condition exists in respect to all measures which are improvements." In order, however, to avoid future misapprehensions on this point, his Lordship requests that whenever the Viceroy thinks of withdrawing a measure from the operation of the despatch of March 31, 1874, on the ground of urgency, he will at once communicate his intention by telegraph. As regards the particular measure now passed Lord Salisbury requests the Governor-general to reconsider his legislation, especially upon two points. These are the maintenance of the import duty on manufactured cotton and the imposition of a new duty on raw cotton of the finer sorts. The latter duty is to be abolished at once; the former is to be abolished as quickly as may consist with guarding the Indian Treasury from financial embarrassment. "The entire removal of the duty, should, however, not be adjourned for an indefinite period, but provision should be made for it within a fixed terms of years."

HAVING told last week the story of Shaik Paltu's reappearance, as reported by the Pioneer, we give with pleasure the corrections since furnished to a contemporary by Colonel Baugh himself—the best authority on the subject, since he was the Adjutant whose life the brave Sepoy virtually saved. There is no ground whatever for supposing that Shaikh Paltu was neglected by those whom he had served. Sir John Hearsey, who risked his own life so nobly at the time of Mangal Pandi's outbreak, made Paltu a Havildar or sergeant on the spot, and obtained for him a third-class Order of Merit, which remained in the Adjutant's charge for two years. On coming out of hospital, where he had been treated for a bad sword-cut on his hand, Paltu went home on two months' leave to Hamirpur, with a present of money from his Adjutant to help him on his way. He never came back, although, writes Colonel Baugh, "for nearly two years I was in correspondence with him, begging him to rejoin, telling him that I had the Order of Merit for him in my possession, to be presented to him by the general on parade. I also wrote to the late Mr. Freeling, the collector of Hamirpur, and Captain (now Major) Hennessey, of my regiment, who was commanding a levy there; but it was of no avail; his excuses were that he had no money, or was ill. I sent him forty rupees out of my own pocket through Captain (now Major) Hennessy, to enable him to join, but it was of no use; and at last I was obliged to strike him off the rolls and return the Order to Government. He was given, I believe, the piece of land he is now in possession of by the late Mr. Freeling, at the solicitation of Major Hennessy." It is evident, therefore, that Paltu purposely kept out of the way for reasons best known to himself, probably preferring a quiet life at home on his own bit of ground to the chance of further honours and advancement in the public service.

SOME of our readers will be glad to see that Lord G. Hamilton has obtained a select committee to inquire into the causes of the present fall in the value of silver, and its effects upon the rate of exchange between England and India. With the rupee growing yearly less valuable, it is time that such an inquiry should be thoroughly carried out. A better president than Mr. Goschen could not have been selected.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE INDIAN COUNCILS PROFESSIONAL APPOINTMENTS BILL.

OUR last issue contained some remarks, from an independent source, on the new Bill for increasing, as it were, the legal strength of the Indian Council, by means of pensions to those lawyers who might be induced to enter it. It is hardly necessary to say that the writer's opinions were his own, not ours. In his defence of the Bill last Thursday against Mr. Fawcett, Lord George Hamilton gave, we think, satisfactory reasons for a measure which will enable the Secretary for India to get over the difficulty of ensuring due help from his Council on matters of legal importance. Hitherto he has had to go outside his Council for help which might be more cheaply and conveniently furnished from within. If two or three "gentlemen of legal attainments" can be induced to offer their services for fifteen years, with the choice of a pension of £500 yearly after ten years, it is likely that the Indian Treasury, as well as the Government, will gain rather than lose by the substitution of a fixed salary for fluctuating but always heavy fees. Last year, according to Lord G. Hamilton, the law-charges of the India Office did not exceed £2,500; but if it is true that in 1856 they amounted to £19,000, the former sum must fall a good way short of the average figure for the last twenty years.

KHELAT AND THE SIND FRONTIER.

AN interesting letter in the Bombay Gazette throws some timely light on the state of things which has just led to a change of political agents on the Sind frontier. By the end of January last it was known in Bombay that Colonel Munro and Captain Sandeman had arrived at Jacobabad in order to relieve Colonel Loch of his political duties on the Sind frontier, and that Sir W. Merewether, the Commissioner in Sind, would henceforth cease to take any part in the politics of Khelat. This announcement, as the writer justly remarks, will surprise no one who has followed the course of events in Upper Sind for a few years past. It certainly gives new significance to the disagreement which resulted in Colonel Phayre's removal from the post he held under Sir W. Merewether.

For some time before Lord Mayo's death the troubled state of affairs in Khelat had fixed the attention of the Indian Government, and various measures were taken by the late Viceroy to restore something like a good understanding between the Khan and his barons, and to maintain peace among the unruly frontier tribes. But his efforts in this way appear to have been not a little hampered by the want of a good understanding between the Political officers on the Sind frontier. The views of Sir W. Merewether as to the true relations between the Khan of Khelat and his nobles were not those of some who acted under him, especially Colonel Phayre. While the Commissioner treated the Khan as sovereign of his own kingdom, his agents on the frontier urged that the Khan was merely the first among his fellow-chiefs. Acting on his own view, Sir William strengthened the Khan's hands against his nobles to such effect that the latter, goaded on by the Khan's persistent tyranny, have several times broken out into rebellion, while the Marri and Bhugti tribes on the Sind frontier have thrown off all show of obedience to his rule. On both classes of offenders Sir William brought to bear a policy of stern repression, which seems only to have aggravated the evils it aimed to cure. Colonel Phayre on the other hand maintained that the nobles of Khelat formed the true governing body in that State, and that the only way to preserve the peace of the frontier was to combine conciliation with a vigilant system of police. So well did he succeed in dealing with the frontier tribes, that before his departure from Sind all outrages along his portion of the frontier had ceased. It was evident however that two officers acting on such different views could not long continue working together, and at last in 1872 Colonel Phayre was removed from his post by the Government of Bombay, and the supreme control of Sind frontier politics was taken over by the Viceroy himself. The whirligig of Time however brings in its revenges, and the move now made by the Supreme Government lends strong colour to the belief that the policy upheld by Colonel Phayre has at length prevailed over that of which he so strongly disapproved. It appears at any rate that Captain Sandeman, as Deputy Commissioner of Dera Gházi Khán, was one of Colonel Phayre's stoutest supporters during his term of office in Sind; and if it be true, as the telegraph reported, that Sir W. Merewether has himself been removed from his post, the tables would seem to have been entirely turned in favour of his old opponent.

THE PHILLIPS TESTIMONIAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I feel sure that you will aid me with your powerful influence in urging on officers who have received, or who may receive, bonus compensation, to come forward generously and contribute their quota to the testimonials which are being got up for Colonels Jervis, Rathbone, and Phillips, more especially the latter, whose claims are paramount. Appeals have been forwarded to nearly six hundred officers, and I am ashamed to say that not the sixth part of those have even been acknowledged. These gentlemen cannot plead ignorance of Colonel Phillips's claims on their generosity; it is useless to recapitulate his great services in the Bonus cause, and if officers were ignorant of them before, they have been clearly explained in the circulars which have been transmitted. Surely it would be a more manly proceeding on their part, not to say more polite, to acknowledge at least the receipt of the appeals which have reached them, and, if they have reasons for doing so, either decline or agree to contribute their mite.

It would, indeed, be a cruel irony of fate if Colonel Phillips, by whose unflagging perseverance and pluck the Bonus question was finally settled, should be permitted to be a loser by those who made use of him to snatch the chesnuts out of the fire, and that he should not only have to "bear the insolence of office, and the spurns that patient merit of the unworthy takes," but be also the victim of the blackest ingratitude at the hands of his brother officers. A RETIRED OFFICER.

WASTE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

The waste in the grain allotments in the whole of Bengal and Behar was accordingly 12,065,000 maunds, or 435,000 tons, worth £4,271,750. —Page 62 of the "Black Pamphlet of Calcutta, 1876."

SIR,—The "Black Pamphlet," in which the arguments are founded on the official Reports published by the Government of India, has recently created intense feeling in Calcutta. The writer attributes the waste of upwards of seven million pounds sterling to the reckless ambition and extravagance of the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, and to the ignorance of the condition of the people displayed by the great majority of the European officers of Government.

I venture to suggest that this reckless expenditure would never have been incurred but for causes working at home, in this country, in the good city of London. Can we forget the letters from distinguished Indian statesmen in the Times, and in other influential newspapers? Can we forget the ignorant cry all over England that there must be a famine? As early as the 22nd of December, 1873, your readers were warned to beware of exaggerated statements.

Ought we not to attribute the waste of seven millions sterling partly to the partiality of old ladies in London for Indian Four per Cents.? English ladies do not like English Three per Cents. because the interest is so low; they prefer to patronise the Indian Government, which offers handsomer interest. They feel confident that England will never permit India to repudiate its debts, or to offer, like Turkey, only one-half of the promised interest.

Good credit has its disadvantages; unlimited credit may entice a nation to its ruin; borrowers are apt to be extravagant when lenders are importunate in offering them money. As national wealth increases, the supply of Government Stock in the Money Market is not always equal to the demand; an economical Government may wish to pay off part of its debts just at the time when its subjects may wish to invest large savings; on the other hand, an extravagant Government will be tempted to borrow to meet imaginery wants; thus Turkey has borrowed enormous sums, which have been wasted.

The Indian Government has been in like manner tempted by finding that it enjoys excellent credit; it knows by experience that it will be allowed to expend borowed money without any efficient control; it fears not that the disaffection prevalent among the natives of India will ripen into rebellion as long as it refrains from increasing the taxes; as the great majority of the native capitalists do not trust Government with their money, it matters not to them what becomes of the Loans.

The borrowing propensities of the Indian Government in 1874 were pleasing not only to the old ladies, to the stock-brokers, and to the Ministry, but they also satisfied Manchester and the Europeans in India who wished to remit money home. By meeting five millions of the expenses of the India Office by a loan negotiated in London, the rate of remittance from India was prevented from falling very low.

When in 1875 two-and-a-half millions were borrowed in India instead of in London, it appeared that the wishes of certain Exchange brokers clashed with the interests of Manchester and of persons remitting from India.

Let us not blame Lord Northbrook, who faced death in order that he might do his duty to his Indian subjects. Let us remember how in 1838 public opinion was wrong in attributing the foolish Affghan war to the Edens. Sensible people soon perceived that a quiet shy gentleman like Lord Auckland was incapable of originating the Affghan war; they, therefore, denounced his advisers in India, who, they averred, were prompted by ambition. It was not until long after that the President of the Board of Control admitted that he was the author of the war. It may hereafter be possible to obtain evidence that the loss of seven millions sterling, which has aroused the indignation of the author of the "Black Pamphlet," has been caused by crude ideas of finance in London.

The author of the pamphlet alluded to has omitted to notice what was stated in your Paper of May 15th last; that between September and November, 1873, some 200,000 tons of food were exported from the vicinity of the distressed districts, and the Times published the fact that this was going on at the same moment as the import of rice by Government. I have known Government send great quantities of treasure from Ferozepoor to Lahore as fast as the native bankers could return it from Lahore to Ferozepoor; but the cost of executing this folly was a trifle in comparison with the expense of transporting 200,000 tons of food backwards and forwards, paying for such carriage at least four and often eight times as much cart-hire as would be paid in ordinary times (see p. 74 of the "Black Pamphlet").
—Your obedient servant, T.

THE FALL IN THE VALUE OF SILVER.

The Englishman, while thinking that its contemporary, the Statesman, somewhat under-estimates the potency of the permanent, as compared with the temporary, causes of the present depreciation of silver, entirely concurs with him in his recommendation that the Secretary of State should provide for the Home charges by opening a sterling loan, instead of by drawing, at a ruinous loss, on the Local Government, leaving the latter to apply the amount with which it would otherwise have had to meet his bills, in providing for Public Works charges, or, so far as it may not be required for that purpose, in the redemption of rupee stock. Indeed, we would go further than this. It has become a question whether it is not advisable, on both financial and political grounds, that a portion of the public debt of India should be transferred to England, by opening a sterling loan there, and remitting the proceeds to this country in silver, for the redemption of a corresponding amount of rupee paper. Not only would the balance of exchange be thus redressed, but the increased demand for silver would raise the price of that metal in a very appreciable degree. It is true that the operation would result in a permanent addition to the Home charges, in the shape of interest which would otherwise have had to be paid in India; but the evils of the present sudden and disastrous fall in exchange would be averted. The key of the position is in the hands of the Secretary of State, and it will show, not only a heartless disregard of immediate interests, but inexplicable want of foresight, if he neglects to use it.

The Times of India remarks that the fall in the value of silver continuing, it is vain to hope that the rupee will recover from the depression which is so costly to the State as well as to all who have to make remittances to Europe for business or other purposes. When we first drew attention to the crisis that was approaching bar silver was 55½d. per ounce; it is now—when "quoted"—down to 54⅞d. We stated in June last that low as the rates then were they had not yet reached their lowest, but we confess we hardly anticipated that the fall which from the nature of the causes at work we foresaw was inevitable would be so heavy in so brief a period. Will any one venture to affirm that silver has even now reached its lowest point? Assuredly not. The production of silver is steadily increasing, while that of gold is as steadily diminishing. That broad fact underlies the whole of the present difficulty, which is, however, very seriously complicated by other facts. Nearly all the great States have a gold instead of a silver standard, while India retains her silver standard, and Germany is at this moment engaged in the demonetisation of her silver, thus adding to the displacement which so injuriously affects this country. Then in addition to these sources of disturbance we have the fact that the drawings for Home charges are £700,000 a fortnight—an enormous sum in itself, but one that does not stand alone. The remittances by Government for payment of railway material and on account of public works have reached a grand total stated to be about half the amount of the regular charges! If there was nothing else to turn the rate of exchange disastrously against us, such drastic drawings as these would suffice to do so. Of course, abundance of suggestions are volunteered on all sides for the mitigation of the evil. Our Calcutta commercial correspondent some days ago proposed as a remedy the stoppage, at least for a year, of the State remittances to England, the Secretary of State's disbursements to be met by a loan raised in London. As the amount of the loan—which would have to be some £15,000,000 or £16,000,000, at least, it may be presumed—would not be required at once, the cash could be applied to buying up the scrip of the Five-and-a-half per cent. loan, which will mature for payment in May, 1879. The money that should be otherwise remitted from India should be, according to this plan, "judiciously invested as a reserve for the above-named loan." The interest saved by the investments more than a set-off for the new interest charge created in London. The large Government balances in the Presidency Banks to be reduced to a safe minimum, not merely to augment the investments, but to check the stimulation of prices of stock by preventing the continuation of unduly cheap money. Trade balance demand will be again thrown upon silver; if the stoppage of the drawings last only for a year, to that extent the London silver market would have relief, and prices rally. In the interval the present system of financing the home charges could undergo a strict revision, with a view to diminishing renewed drawings to a minimum. As to the additional interest charge created in London, it would be more than covered by the investments here for the time being. And as to the eventual addition to the home drawings which that additional charge would cause, if the present system is to be continued, the grave necessities of the moment must override that. But with reference to the renewal of those drawings, remedies can and must be found to reduce them permanently to one-third of their present dimensions." A plan similar to this, if not the same, we find adopted and advocated with considerable force in the Calcutta Statesman. But whereas our Calcutta correspondent expresly grounded his hopes upon the permanent reduction of the Home charges to a third of their present amount, the Calcutta paper looks to the absorption of the present superabundance of silver amongst the different nations of the world as the certain means of setting everything on a sound basis in the future. The loan in London and the financing with regard to the Five-and-a-half per cent. scrip would be resorted to in the one case as a means of getting temporary relief, while the Home charges were being revised and cut down by two-thirds; and, in the other, as a means of tiding over what is assumed to be a temporary depression due mainly to a fall in the value of silver consequent on the demonetisation of that metal in Germany. We are afraid that the hope in one case is too sanguine, and in the other is founded upon a complete misapprehension of the tendency of silver, which is not towards recovery but towards further depreciation.

THE SALT REVENUE.

The Indian Daily News holds that a necessary of life should not be unnecessarily taxed; but of the necessity, the responsible Government of India must perhaps be acknowledged to be as good a judge as an irresponsible journalist. Still, it must be said that the duty as at present enforced is so far an injudicious one that it in some places represses consumption; and even the more stupid class of his advocates, who shout out its praises, and insist on its beauty whenever that is rudely questioned, must perceive in their less excited moments that there is room for reduction up to the point at which the maximum consumption and the minimum oppression will meet. For another source of revenue, at which much inconsiderate fun has been poked, since a Bombay Government strove to prove how easily some men can cast the shadow of their own incapacity on the greatest truths, we must hunt about amongst those social prejudices of our native fellow-subjects which usually air themselves in various kinds of more or less religious tamashas. At marriages, on successions, and on some of those other occurrences about which some of our native friends have been making such good-natured blunders in their denunciation of the Majority Act, it is the delight of the true Oriental to let money flow from him like water. What if the tax-gatherer, or any other man, held the public basin under the spout for a moment on each such occasion? It would hardly be an undignified occupation; and the taxing officer would be spared all trouble, and be conveniently deprived of all opportunities of extortion, by the curious native pride which exults in expenditure on such occasions, which glories in the renown to be obtained by reckless extravagance, and which may therefore be quite safely allowed to assess itself in money. Even if it be incorrect to hope that a sumptuary law would, for the first time in history, popularise extortion by making it voluntary, it is safe to say that the Government would gain by the experiment.

INDIAN WINES.

The Indian Daily News thinks that the doubtful wisdom which prompted the Legislature, when rightly enough increasing the duty on spirits, to shut up the tap from which many persons of moderate income were before in the habit of drinking light and wholesome foreign wines, may possibly tend in the end to create an Indian industry, to which reference has off and on been made in these columns for some years, but which has all this time contrived to remain in the background from want of a little encouragement. This is no other than the wine-producing industry of India, which, it must be confessed, does not at present occupy a very prominent position in commercial lists, and indeed has to be looked for, as it were, with a miscroscope. However, various kinds of indigenous wine and spirit have been discovered and manufactured in India, in the analysis of which by professional persons of established reputation, it has been made clear that the liquors have been quite free from deleterious properties. Not to make out a puffing advertisement, where the object aimed at is rather higher, nothing more need be said on this occasion about these discoveries and manufactures, than that they have solved a question of much interest and some importance, in establishing the practicability of placing within the reach of natives of this country some cheap and wholesome drinks. If civilised natives were much addicted to sobriety, our satisfaction would of course be somewhat crossed. As it is, however, with a thirst for strong waters being fast developed by civilisation on one side, and with natives taking to them on the other with a manifest belief in destiny, it is perhaps as well that so much fire-water as they care to drink should be as pure as possible. From this view of the matter, which we commend to the attention of importers, the invention of pure light wholesome indigenous wines and spirits would, it seems to us, be an advantage not to be despised. If the new duty on imports of this kind should produce the anticipated result, one serious objection to the tariff will have been washed out of it by accident. On the chances of the new industrial game we are not in a position to speak. Lang in one of his excellent Indian books makes some German baron, while travelling through India on a pleasure tour, indulge in one or two grand prophecies, which at all events made rather pleasant reading twenty years ago, and do not now seem much the worse for the fulfilment which seems to be overtaking them. It takes a long time for any industry to fight its way into the upper air, through all the undergrowths of rival interests; but the external assistance which Indian wines might require to strengthen the argument of their intrinsic worth, they may perhaps receive from one of the least judicious customs tariff ever hatched in India. Lord Northbrook, innocently turning protectionist in regard to wines, while honestly denouncing the guilt of protection in regard to cotton, would prove a spectacle from the ludicrousness of which his simple honesty ought to have protected him.

MR. JULAND DANVERS.—We understand from the Lahor paper that Mr. Juland Danvers, after spending a short time at Lahor, proceeds on a tour of inspection of the Punjab Northern State Railway, and will visit Peshawur. He will then return to Lahor, and take a run down over the Indus Valley Railway as far as he can, and finally will go down the Indus to Kurrachee. It is not improbable that one of the results of Mr. Danvers's trip will be the decision of the question of working the Indus Valley and Peshawur lines. We noticed a short time ago that the chairman of the S.P. and Delhi Railway had stated that the matter was almost a fait accompli as far as the Indus Valley Railway is concerned. Such being the case, we see no valid reason why the S.P. and D. Railway Company should not have the working of the Peshawur line when it is constructed on the broad gauge. The days of mismanagement on this line are apparently ended, and as far as we can gather, such a measure would be productive of an immense saving to the State, both in rolling-stock and in establishment, and be conducive to the comfort of passengers, inasmuch as there would not be those difficulties which so often attend interchange of traffic.

THE CAVALRY BRIGADE AT DELHI.—It must have been a grand sight then to have seen these troopers and their officers, drawn up in battle array, stern and immovable, to face the deadly fire of the enemy. There they sate, firm in their saddles, "ghastly motionless as if they slept," whilst the unerring grape-shot streamed upon them and made dreadful openings in their ranks. There was scarcely a man who had not caught the noble spirit of their commanders, Hope Grant, Drysdale of the Lancers, Tombs of the Artillery, Watson and Probyn of the Punjab Horse. The courage of the 9th Lancers was never surpassed. Not only were they under the immediate command of an intrepid soldier, but their own colonel commanded the brigade. When Grant commended their sturdy gallantry under fire, they replied that they were ready to take as much more of it as he liked. Forty-two men and six officers were struck down. Rosser of the Carabineers, who had been so eager to carry to Delhi the first tidings of the revolt at Meerut, and who now was acting as Hope Grant's aide-de-camp, fell with a bullet in his forehead, which all regarded as his death-wound. Others were slightly wounded. Eleven officers of the Lancers had their horses killed under them. Nor were the Artillery under Tombs less exposed or less steadfast under their exposure. Animated by the noble example of their commander they were equal to any daring and ready to face any danger. The Punjabees, to whom the situation was new, for they were not familiar with grape-shot, lacked nothing of the steadfastness of their white comrades, and never flinched from the merciless fire. Watson's Cavalry lost few men, for they were clothed in slate-coloured uniform, and the neutral tint was of good service to them, placed as they were between the white jackets of the Lancers and the scarlet uniform of Probyn's Horse. For two long hours the brigade stood firm as a rock, and as one after another fell riddled with grape or canister there was no wavering in the ranks. Every man pressed his knees more tightly on his saddle and took a firmer grip of his reins. There was nothing else in their demeanour to distinguish this grand scene of defiance and endurance from an ordinary Cavalry parade. I may be wrong, but I think that this heroism of patience is grander far than the active gallantry displayed in a perilous charge. It is far easier to rush at an enemy in the fine enthusiasm of battle, than to stand steadfast on a given spot, for an ungiven period, waiting for the order or the opportunity to move, whilst swept by the fire of a hidden enemy. It is the waiting that tries the man. And never were men more tried, or more patient under trial, than the troopers of Hope Grant's Brigade. After a while the enemy's fire began to slacken. Those within the works were, perhaps, diverted by other emergencies, and those in the open were kept back by the guns of Tombs and Campbell, afterwards reinforced by Bourchier. The Brigadier had made a requisition for some infantry to aid him; but only from the picket at Hindoo Rao's house could any footmen be obtained. A party of two hundred and eighty of the Guides and Goorkahs—staunch as Europeans—were then placed at his disposal, and his nephew, Frank Grant, brought them down to the points where they were most needed. But there was not much for them to do. The enemy were ceasing to prevail against us, and the General gave orders conditionally to the cavalry brigadier to withdraw to the neighbourhood of Ludlow Castle. Grant had done a good morning's work. The presence of the Cavalry Brigade alone prevented the enemy, who had driven back the Fourth Column, from advancing along the open ground between the Ridge and the City, and taking the whole of our left attack in flank.—Kaye's "Sepoy War," Vol. III.

STATION TALK.

AGRA, Jan. 28.—For the evening it was announced that "the Taj gardens and buildings" would be illuminated, from which it was supposed by many that the Taj itself would be illuminated. Those who expected this must have been much disappointed. It is true a row of men on the upper parapet of the "Jawab" lighted magnesium lights, or something of the kind, thus bringing out one side of the Taj in a poor imitation of daylight; but, so far from the sight being remarkable, it was voted that the men themselves were the real spectacle of the evening. For an imitation of a frieze from the Parthenon, it was simply perfect. As they stood in a row along the parapet, every fold of their drapery and every naked limb standing out in clearest profile of black shadow and white light, they looked exactly like a Greek procession, and, as they stooped to replace their burnt out flambeaux, or changed places, the whole diorama of the Trojan war passed before you. But for these men, the Taj illumination would have been to many—certainly to all those who saw it illuminated when a Viceroy (was it Lord Mayo or Lord Northbrook?) was here, two or three years ago—a failure. The buildings on either side, however, were fairly good, and the gateway was very beautiful indeed. The gardens missed being perfection by the want of taste of some one who had constructed hen-coop kind of erections, on which oil-lamps were pyramidally arranged, and which were regularly placed in straight rows wherever space was available. A clumsier error was impossible; and, if it had been avoided, the gardens, in spite of that "Mabille" appearance which coloured lamps among trees, combined with music in the distance, must always present, would have realised exactly the wonderful vision of Aladdin. Lamps of talc, either red or green, were hung in profligate profusion amongst the foliage of the trees, not only on the lower branches, but so high up as forty feet, staining the leaves all round them wine-red or bright green. The result was exactly "The Garden of all Delights." On the trees that met overhead were clustered just the same great ruby and emerald fruits that Aladdin saw. There was the same dim-coloured light, the same plashing of fountains, and the same luxuriant profusion of flowers and strange tropical plants. A stroll among the long aisles of lamp-laden trees (if only everybody else could have been expelled) would have been a splendid treat and a memory for ever. As it was, it was a really beautiful sight. The Prince arrived, a cheer announcing his arrival, at about eleven, and, passing up the central walk, came to the marble platform, and, after seeing the "illumination" of the outside, went inside the Tomb. While the usual limelights were being burnt, one of the party chanted, in order to bring out the beautiful echo of the dome. It is in a place that, with the same accompaniments, no one can be in without emotion, and the Prince was very manifestly moved by the wonderful beauty of the scene. The outside of the Taj always looks best when left alone, but the interior has certainly a charm added to it by illumination. About one o'clock the Prince left, and then came a scramble for carriages.—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

AFGHANISTAN.—The Peshawar correspondent of the Lahor paper reports that Yahyah Khan, the father-in-law of Yakub Khan, has been sent to Noman, and that the Amir is determined not to pardon him for his connection with the late conspiracy.

THE "BLACK PAMPHLET."—Sir Richard Temple's inexhaustible energy is now engaged upon a voluminous reply to the "Black Pamphlet." We believe that there is no truth in the report that the pamphlet owes its existence to the fertile brain of the Lieutenant-governor himself, who, in answering it, will thus find another opportunity of bringing his famine before the public.—Indian Daily News.

THE PERAK EXPEDITION.—We fear that disease is likely to prove a more formidable foe than the enemy in the Perak expedition. We learn that Lieut. T. F. C. Armstrong, of the Buffs, with several men of the regiment, have died of dysentery. The s.s. Arratoon Apcar brought Sub.-lieut. G. H. Chippendale to Calcutta, on Monday, and Lieut. A. E. Ommaney will arrive by the next steamer. Both these officers have been invalided, and have been sent here to appear before a medical board.—Indian Daily News, Feb. 4.

TRADE AND NAVIGATION.—From the accounts of the Trade and Navigation of British India for the first seven months of the current financial year, as compared with those of the corresponding period of last year, we see that the total value of imports was Rs. 20,30,40,717, as against Rs. 19,96,63,617; and that of exports, Rs. 32,08,38,146, as against Rs. 30,75,84,114. The value of treasure imported was Rs. 3,31,57,285, as against Rs. 4,29,40,423, and of treasure exported Rs. 1,16,35,221, as against Rs. 99,18,562. The gross amount of import duty collected was Rs. 2,43,65,528, as against Rs. 2,48,77,361, and of export duty, Rs. 38,00,113, as against Rs. 27,93,866.

LEGISLATIVE.—The new Abkari Bill has at last received the assent of his Excellency the Viceroy. Considerable delay has occurred in this matter, owing to a doubt being entertained in the Legislative Department of the Government of India whether an Act of the Bengal Legislative Council could alter the jurisdiction of the High Court.

MR. NEY ELIAS.—A contemporary says:—We are glad to learn that Mr. Ney Elias is to be provided for. He will sooner or later succeed Lieutenant C. B. Cooke as Officiating Political Agent at Bhamo. Lieutenant Cooke does not, however, go on furlough just at present, but remains at his post till after business connected with the escort to meet Mr. Grosvenor's party has been disposed of.

THE DELHI MANŒUVRES.—The American officers who were at the Camp of Exercise at Delhi speak highly of the courtesy shown to them in the Camp. Their praises of military politeness, however, carefully exclude Puna, whence a most discourteous letter written in bad English was sent to them; it will be included in the official report of the officers as a sample of discourtesy.

THE METRE GAUGE.—Our Delhi correspondent, writing on the 4th Feb., says:—The metre gauge was tried yesterday; it is totally unsuited for military purposes. No waggon can be used with more than three horses, and the vehicles are not strong enough for even field guns. The metre gauge might be useful for the transport of Infantry, but certainly not for Artillery or Cavalry. There can be but one opinion about it amongst military men.—Times of India.

MILITARY STAFF.—Colonel C. C. Johnson, Deputy Quarter-Master General, proceeds home in March; Major Heathcote, at present with the Perak Force, officiates for him. Captain Boyes, 12th Foot, fills the temporary vacancy in the department. Captain R. G. Kennedy and Lieutenant Roberts, 72nd Highlanders, enter the department in the vacancies caused by Majors Collett and Pearson, proceeding on furlough.

MILITARY.—We hear from Mhow that the 108th Regiment, under the command of Major Loch, marched from Nasirabad on the morning of the 30th January, having been relieved by the 68th Dunbar Light Infantry under command of Colonel Trent. The 68th had a pleasant march from Mhow, and the weather was cool and pleasant. The 108th will reach Mhow at the end of the month, but their stay will only be until November, as they are under orders for England next relief season.

KARPURTHALA.—A correspondent writing from Kapurthala to a Bombay paper on the 6th Feb. says:—Mr. Lepel Griffin, who is in charge of this State, goes on to Lahor to officiate for Mr. Thornton on Tuesday next, 8th. Professor Monier Williams, with his wife and daughter, left this yesterday for Umritsur. After staying there a couple of days he goes to Lahor, when he holds a meeting of the Lahor Anjuman to invite its support of his Institute. He then goes on to Jummu to spend a day or two with the Maharajah, after which he visits Mattra and its vicinity en route to Bombay. Mr. Eastwick is, I believe, still at Lahor.

CLERICAL.—The Agra paper informs us that, owing to ill-health, the Rev. A. Robinson is unable to join his appointment to Mussoorie; it is said that this chaplaincy will be filled by the Rev. W. D. Cowley, now stationed at Seetapore. For the same reason the Rev. J. W. Adams is unable to take up the work at Meerut, to which he had been appointed. Mr. Robinson, we learn, goes to England, Mr. Adams to the Hills. Dr. Mazuchelli, Chaplain of Hazareebaugh, goes home in the spring, and his place will be supplied by the Rev. A. O. Hardy, from Barrackpore; and it is supposed that Mr. Popham-Blyth will return thither, thus leaving Nynee Tal vacant for Mr. Adams.

THE EXPLOSION AT JAIPUR.—The gunpowder explosion at Jaipur was a most serious affair. The massive stone buildings, sixty yards long, and ten yards wide, with walls three feet thick, in which the explosion occurred, is all in ruins. It had been divided into four compartments, each containing a mill for grinding powder. The fire from the first one communicated to the others. Only ten men were killed, not sixteen as first reported. Nine bodies have been buried, one was so dismembered that all the fragments could not be recovered. Five men are seriously injured, and are now in the hospital. A portion of the body of one man was lodged in the top of a tree near the arsenal. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by one of the workmen smoking.

THE CALCUTTA GENERAL HOSPITAL.—On Monday afternoon the Hon. Chief Justice Sir Richard Garth visited the collection of snakes in the Presidency General Hospital, and had an opportunity of seeing how fatal the bite of reptiles is, and how soon the poison operates. A fowl was subjected to the test, and almost instantly expired. Afterwards Sir Richard, accompanied by Surgeon-Major Ewart, made a tour of the wards, and expressed much gratification at the arrangements of the hospital. Yesterday morning his Lordship the Bishop of Calcutta visited the hospital, and was attended through the various wards, library, chapel, and other out-buildings, by the medical staff of the establishment. His Lordship during his visit appeared much pleased with all he saw; the excellence of the sanitary arrangements; and especially with the cheerful aspect which the presence of flowers and shrubs, both in the hospital and the grounds, gave to the institution. He was particularly strong in his commendation of the entire economy.—Indian Daily News, Feb. 4.

THE AGRA ADDRESS TO THE PRINCE.—Jan. 27.—In my letter of yesterday I forgot to mention that the Municipality presented an address to the Prince just before the levée commenced—an omission the more reprehensible as the address in question differs from all that I have read of late in being, as to style, really well written, and, in tone, absolutely unparochial. The following is the address:—

May it please your Royal Highness,—We, the Municipal Commissioners of Agra, on behalf of our fellow-citizens beg permission respectfully to approach your Royal Highness with a cordial address of welcome.

We desire to express our fervent loyalty and devotion to her most gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, our Sovereign, and our great joy on the occasion of this visit with which your Royal Highness has been pleased to honour our city, Within sight of the walls of that ancient fortress which bears witness to the magnificence of former Emperors, we welcome in your Royal Highness the representative of a Sovereign whose empire extends far beyond the limits of the sway of the mightiest monarch ever enthroned at Agra.

We gratefully recognise in the justice and tolerant impartiality of our Empress her Most Gracious Majesty's rule, the imperial qualities which especially distinguished the wisest of the house of Timur, the founder of this city which welcomes you to-day—the Emperor Akbar.

The joy and pride which we now feel would have been complete had it been possible for her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales to honour us with her gracious presence on this auspicious occasion.

We believe and trust that the tour of your Royal Highness through India will tend to draw closer the ties which bind her to England, and will be a source of benefit to this country, as well as of pleasure and interest to yourself; and, especially, we hope that all the remembrances which your Royal Highness may carry away of your visit to Agra may be pleasing. —Englishman Correspondent.

THE LATE CAPTAIN BUTLER.—We regret to hear that an accident occurred on the river Hooghly on Thursday evening, which resulted in the death of Captain Butler, the officiating Master Attendant of this port. A shooting party, consisting of officers from the Serapis, were returning from the Sunderbands on Thursday evening in a steam launch, in company with Captain Butler. On nearing the King of Oudh's palace, at Garden Reach, a steamer was observed approaching on the starboard bow. The helm was at once ported, but a collision occurred, and several of the party were precipitated into the water. After the collision Captain Butler was missed; and it is supposed that he must have been amongst those who fell overboard, and that he must have been stunned and drowned. The rest of those who were in the water were happily saved. The flat was so severely damaged by the collision that it was necessary to run her ashore. The vessel with which the steam launch collided is said to have been the Challenger. We are indebted to the courtesy of the Bankshall authorities for the following particulars of the career of the deceased, who was widely known, and much respected in Calcutta, and leaves a wife and numerous family:—Captain Butler joined the Government Service in September, 1854, as third officer of the Proserpine, and served in various vessels and grades, until April, 1857, when he received his first command, that of the Minx; he successively afterwards had command of the Deva, Krishna, Guide, and the Tubal Cain. In May, 1866, he was appointed Officiating Extra Assistant Master Attendant, from which he rose by various steps to First Assistant Master Attendant in April, 1872, and after that to Officiating Deputy Master Attendant in March, 1873. He also acted as Deputy Master Attendant in charge of the Marine Department for three months in 1874, during the absence of Captain Baker. Captain Butler rendered valuable service to Government during the famine in Orissa, as also during the late famine in Bengal. He has received at various times the thanks of Government.—Englishman, Feb. 7.

COLONEL HYDE.—On Friday night Colonel Henry Hyde, Royal Engineers, left Calcutta, probably for good, en route to Bombay and England. Coming to India early in 1846, he served at first in the Punjab. He was transferred to Calcutta a few years after the mutiny, and on Colonel Baird Smith's death, in 1862, was appointed to be Master of the Calcutta Mint. Every one familiar with that institution knows what improvements he has made by the introduction of various scientific appliances which promote efficiency; and at the present moment the Calcutta Mint is, in some important respects, in advance of that in London. Colonel Hyde has also been extremely active in other directions, and has been a member of numerous committees connected with material progress. One of the last committees on which he sat had for its object the improvement of the river communication with Assam. A more important matter could hardly be named, yet at the last moment Government declined to spend for the advancement of that province a sum less than the cost of ten miles of broad gauge railway, with payments spread over five years. His advice was always against the makeshifts too commonly recommended in India by narrow-minded men, which he regarded as wasteful and extravagant in the extreme. And his loss to the community would be very serious in this matter alone, that he stemmed, in some measure, the tide of vague criticisms with which the "idle and irresponsible reviewers," too much encouraged by the Financial Department, endeavour to swamp every new proposal, however beneficial, or cramp every scheme, however well worked, which involves any expenditure of money. His sterling character and kindness of disposition earned for him the warm regard of his brother officers, who, to show their respect for him, entertained him recently at dinner, with Lord Napier as President. He takes up, at the India-office, a new appointment, in connection with machinery for Indian railways, which he is admirably suited to fill; and he carries with him, we venture to say, the good wishes of a large section of the community of Calcutta, both English and foreign, and of men of every profession.—Englishman, Feb. 4.

Madras.

THE GOVERNOR.—His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and suite were to leave Madras on the evening of Feb. 13, in the steamer Duke of Sutherland, on his Grace's proposed visit to Calcutta.

CAPTAIN TAYLOR.—We learn from a Madras paper that the Prince of Wales forwarded to Madras, by Sir W. Robinson, a pair of solitaires, set with brilliants in the form of an anchor, as a gift from his Royal Highness to Captain Taylor, the Master Attendant, in recognition of the arrangements made for the comfort of his Royal Highness when he left Madras.

SIR N. CHAMBERLAIN.—Our new Commander-in-Chief, Sir Neville Chamberlain, held a Levee in the Banqueting Hall yesterday evening, which was largely attended by the military officers resident in Madras, the Mount, Palaveram and other places in the neighbourhood. A fair sprinkling of the Civilian element also put in an appearance to pay their respects to his Excellency.—Madras Athenæum, Feb. 5.

MILITARY.—The second wing and head-quarters of the 89th Regiment embarked at Madras on Tuesday, Feb. 8, on board the Tenasserim, to proceed to Thyetmyo and Tonghoo. The guard duty in the Fort, a local paper states, will, until the arrival of H.M.'s 67th Foot, be performed by a company of H.M.'s 67th Foot, which has already arrived, the battery of artillery in garrison, and a party of veterans who have come in from Palaveram.

THE NIZAM AND THE PRINCE.—The rumour which was current last week to the effect that the young Nizam of Hyderabad would probably pay a visit to the Prince of Wales, should H.R.H. make a tour to the Caves of Ellora on his return from the north of India, en route to Bombay, is contradicted. Whether or not H.R.H. pays his talked of visit to Ellora, which has been included in the programme of his return journey, the young Nizam will not, it is now reported, visit the Prince.—Madras Athenæum, Feb. 12.

THE BEST SHOT IN THE NATIVE ARMY.—A very interesting ceremony took place on the general parade ground on the morning of Monday last. All the troops in garrison were out to witness the presentation of the gold medal given by Lord Napier of Magdala to the best shot amongst the Native regiments throughout India, the fortunate winner of which is Havildar Jugganaikaloo, of the 36th M.N.I. The troops having been formed into a hollow square, General Elmhirst, and staff rode up, and the General dismounting, the Havildar was called up, and after Colonel Mesham had read out Lord Napier's order, General Elmhirst pinned on the medal to the breast of the recipient, to whom the General spoke a few words of kindness and encouragement. The troops then marched past, and returned to quarters.—Bangalor Examiner, Feb. 4.

A JEMADAR OF MADRAS CAVALRY.—Jemadar Adjutant Mahommed Oosman, of the 1st Madras Light Cavalry, who was present at the late Camp of Exercise at Delhi as the sole native representative of the Madras Cavalry, in fact of the Madras Army, has received the following letter from Colonel Dillon, Military Secretary to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief:—"Sir,—The Commander-in-Chief in India desires me to convey to you his best acknowledgments for your services as an Extra Aide-de-Camp on his Excellency's personal Staff during the Camp of Exercise at Delhi. It was very gratifying to Lord Napier of Magdala that Field Marshal the Prince of Wales should have done you the honour of nominating you one of his Royal Highness's orderly officers while present with the troops at Delhi. The Commander-in-Chief desires me to forward a copy of this letter to your commanding officer."

THE WAINAAD GOLD FIELDS.—A mining engineer writes to the Madras Mail on the Wainaad Gold Fields:—I know quite enough of the reefs in the Wynad to offer the following remarks:—It is my opinion that all the reefs that I have seen are payable. Though the yield of gold at surface might not be sufficient to warrant the success of any enterprise, yet, in my belief, this is the strongest ground for concluding that auriferous quartz will be found at a greater depth, it being an acknowledged fact that reefs giving good yields at surface do not prove to be good or payable at any great depth, for the reason that these reefs have thrown off their gold; whereas reefs that do not give good yields at surface generally turn out rich, or more productive, by having payable quartz some distance below surface. Another reason why the Alpha and other reefs in Wynaad will prove successful is that the strata through which they run are such as to give decidedly good indications of gold, being the same sort of sandstone or gneiss as the richest reefs in Australia. The Wynaad gneiss, however, possesses the advantage of being much softer in nature than the Australian, so that there is no possible chance of the reef being cut off or disjoined by other hard formations, but rather every reasonable chance that they run to a considerable length and to a very great depth uninterrupted; not, I think, at the same angle as exposed at surface, which is about 29 or 30 degrees, but growing gradually steeper.

HAIDARABAD.—We are indebted to a correspondent for a very racy account of some recent events at Haidarabad. Writing on the 8th instant he says:—There is great weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth going on at present within the sacred precincts of the Haidarabad Residency. The Assistant Residents are weeping for their present billets, and refuse to be comforted because these pleasant billets are not—to be prolonged to them. The officials connected with this Residency have no occasion to sing or shout "God Bless the Prince of Wales," and his visit to India. Our royal neighbour, the Nizam, was invited to pay his respects to the Heir Apparent of all the Indies at Bombay; but the youthful Nizam did not go, and the way in which his successful refusal was managed has played the very dickens with every body in authority hereabouts. The Viceroy has sworn a solemn oath that Mr. Saunders shall never again darken the Residency door, and the Council have vowed that the whole remaining lot, root, stem and branch, shall be cleared out, pulled up, thrown down and scattered generally to the four winds of heaven. Major Tweedie, the First Assistant, received the following curt telegram from Lord Northbrook on Saturday last—"You quit Haidarabad"—short, but emphatic and unmistakable in its sententious brevity. This disclosure serves to explain the recent Government order that "Major Euan Smith is appointed First Assistant at Haidarabad." Nobody here could understand it before. Captain Trevor, the Second Assistant, is passed over for his promotion, and I fully expect to hear that even the humblest peon on the establishment has been deprived of his magnificent salary of eight rupees (Halli Sicca) a month.—Times of India, Feb. 14.

IRON IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.—Many years ago the Porto Novo Iron Works were spoken of as a rather successful venture. In 1825 an officer of the Madras Civil Service formed a company, with the help of the Government, to carry on the manufacture of iron. At the outset everything went off well; the best results were expected, and a pretty large sum of money was spent upon a work which, it was thought, would give its enterprising promoters a large return. But the crash soon came. The enterprise was fairly afloat in 1830; a fair amount of business was done; but in three years' time the Porto Novo Iron Works were abandoned, and the company went to the wall. There were, however, a few enterprising people who came forward to work the company on their own "hook." Even here there was failure, and to this day may be seen the remnants of the company's shops at the old town of Porto Novo. A few years after the establishment and fall of this company, under State encouragement, an effort was made to form the Madras Iron Company, the scene of operations being fixed in the Salem district. The efforts of the promoters were not successful, and the company did not even see the light of day. It appears that some most remarkable deposits of magnetic iron ore are to be found in the Salem district. The ore is found in immense beds, fifty to 100 feet thick, the out crop of which may be traced for many miles. One hill, six miles from Salem, possesses five bands of magnetic ore, from twenty to fifty feet thick. Other parts of the Salem district are said to contain valuable iron ores, and even gold. Kistnagherry is a taluq rich with iron and gold, and when an application was a short time ago made to the Government for the grant of land to carry out explorations, no encouragement was held out to the venturesome individual who made the offer, on the ground, probably, that even this attempt, like all others previously made, would end in a fiasco. It is admitted that iron has been manufactured in India from time immemorial, and that the work is performed by the poorest classes who manage, after eight or ten hours' smelting, to obtain ten or twenty pounds' weight of iron. The metal thus obtained is converted into agricultural implements; but such a process is only carried on in parts of the Central Provinces and Dharwar, while the wants of other parts of the country are met by the importation of iron from Europe. The work which was carried on in the Nerbudda valley in 1864 for manufacturing iron received much assistance from the public funds; the total expenditure was £75,000. When the enterprise proved a failure the works were offered for sale at a very low price, but did not attract purchasers. It is evident that all these failures have convinced the Government that the manufacture of iron in this presidency is an impossibility, and past experience will doubtless induce the authorities to turn a deaf ear to the entreaties that may be hereafter made for starting any project for the manufacture of iron.—Madras Standard.

THE FLYING SQUADRON.—Four vessels of the Flying Squadron, the Narcissus (Captain Lord Charles Scott), Immortalite (Captain Hume), Topaze (Captain Thrupp), and Newcastle (Captain Douglas), are under orders to proceed to China. They will leave the harbour within the next ten days. The Raleigh and Doris will most likely remain here until the departure of the Prince of Wales next month. —Times of India, Feb. 14.

NEWS FROM ADEN.—Aden news report, up to 2nd February, is as follows:—Redwan Pasha has returned to Berbera from the East African Coast in the Egyptian corvette Latif. McKillop Pasha was daily expected there. His flagship had touched on the Myjertyne Coast to obtain firewood, as coal had run short. There is no authentic news from Hurrar. It is rumoured that reinforcements have reached Raoof Pasha after severe fighting with the Gallas. Abdool Kadur Pasha has marched from Zeyla to Hurrar, as it is said communication with that place is closed. H.M.S. ships Briton and Teazer returned to Aden on the 30th January. H.M.S. Diamond arrived from the East African Coast on the 29th of the same month.

GALLANT ACT OF A BRITISH OFFICER.—On the immersion of the taboots in the river Moola Moota on Monday last, the 7th inst., about five o'clock in the afternoon, when the banks of the river were crowded with a large number of spectators to witness the immersion, a cry was raised that somebody was drowning. The shouts and cries from the crowds proceeded from a place in the vicinity of the left bank, close to Baron De H. Larpent's house. Major Fosberry, V.C., who had only that moment arrived, plunged at once from his boat into the river, and after diving four times brought up the body of a native lad of about fifteen years of age. It was with great difficulty that the gallant major struggled on to the bank with his load, which was greatly enhanced by the weight of the clothing. The courage displayed by this gallant officer and his skill in diving will no doubt be appreciated to its full extent when it is known that at the place where the accident happened the river's bottom is dark and tangled with weeds. Shortly after the lad was taken out he died. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon this gallant act of Major Fosberry. The lad it appears went into the river to bring narras that were thrown into the river.—Puna Observer, Feb. 10.

THE SIND FRONTIER.—An important telegram from Karachi we have received states that Colonel Loch is relieved of all his political duties on the Frontier, Upper Sind. Colonel Munro and Captain Sandeman have arrived there. In future the Commissioner in Sind will cease to interest himself in Khelat politics. Sir William Merewether will not feel it a great loss to be deprived of the control of affairs on this frontier, for during the last twelve months he has been restrained from doing anything. The Government of India has since Christmas 1874 taken the direct management of political affairs on the Sind frontier into its own hands, and has insisted on absolute quiescence till now, when it suddenly despatches two Punjab officers to do (it is supposed) something vigorous. We do not care whether the motive power comes from Bombay or Bengal, so long as some appreciation is shown of India's responsibility for the effectual control of the border States; but we look upon the separation of the Sind frontier from the political domain of the Commissioner at Karachi as a great mistake. Commercially, all the relations of Beloochistan with India belong to Sind and Bombay, not to the Punjab and the North-West Provinces; and in race and history the connection has been equally close. Karachi, too, must always be the base for military operations beyond the Bolan Pass. If, therefore, Lord Northbrook disapproved of the policy of Sir W. Merewether he should have appointed a new Commissioner at Karachi, instead of trying to shift the political centre of gravity for the Sind frontier from Karachi to Lahor. The Viceroy seems to think that, with the electric telegraph, a country may be governed from anywhere. But the telegraph will not supply the want of local experience and knowledge of men. —Bombay Gazette.

THE OUTBREAK OF SMALL-POX.—Something like an epidemic of small-pox appears to have broken out in Bombay. The number of deaths has now risen to an average of twenty-five or thirty per diem. The disease is not confined to Bombay. We have heard of cases at Matheran, and some are reported from the Harbour. On Sunday three men died in the European General Hospital, of whom one had been brought ashore from H.M.S. Undaunted. The second officer of the British ship Choice died of the disease. It is said that the outbreak is due to the influx of returning pilgrims from Arabia, but that notion appears to have little foundation in fact. So far as the European community is concerned there is little to be apprehended; every European has been at least once vaccinated, and the comparative salubrity of the quarters in which people of the ruling race congregate ensures them against the worst effects of any epidemic. Still we are glad to learn that already Europeans are in many instances taking the precaution to have themselves re-vaccinated. When small-pox broke out in London some four or five years ago re-vaccination was resorted to by almost every adult, and with the best results. It is generally believed that after the lapse of seven years the preservative influence of vaccination wears off, and that re-vaccination—if possible with lymph from the cow—is necessary for further safety. Re-vaccination does not invariably protect those who resort to it from an attack of small-pox, but it was found in London to reduce the virulence of the malady to the lowest point. Hardly anyone who was re-vaccinated was disfigured by small-pox afterwards, and there were, we believe, no deaths in such cases. The best advice that can be given to all who care to reduce to a minimum the chances of their being attacked and to guarantee themselves against a severe attack is to re-vaccinate without delay. The victims of the present outbreak are for the most part Hindoos and Mussulmans of the lower classes.—Times of India, Feb. 14.

THE CAVES OF ELLORA.—It is believed probable that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will visit the Caves of Ellora on his way back to Bombay. These famous caves, which are considered by many superior to the Elephanta Caves at Bombay, are situated at the foot of a detached ghaut, and Roza, the place where the Prince's Camp would no doubt be pitched, is charmingly situated above the ghaut on a plain which must be at least six square miles in extent. When Lord Northbrook visited Ellora in 1873 Sir Salar Jung not only improved the road from Naundgaum, through which the railroad passes, to Ellora, but made an altogether new road from the plateau on the ghaut to the village of Ellora, and another from Roza to Dowlatabad, a distance of seven miles. These roads have since very largely been made use of by tourists and visitors, as the district abounds in objects and places of interest, well worthy the time and attention of those who can afford to visit them. Aurangabad, for instance, can boast of water works which have not been repaired for centuries, and it is still matter for surprise that the water, which is excellent, is derived from a source which no investigation has been able to discover. The famous old fortress of Dowlatabad, which has not inappropriately been compared with Gibraltar, is also close by, and its origin is apparently as much a matter of speculation and mystery as the source of the Aurangabad water. The fortress can boast of 129 old-fashioned guns, which are kept in fair order, and are still used, not without considerable risk to the gunners, however, in firing salutes on State occasions. Altogether the neighbourhood is one which, not only on account of the many objects of historical interest of which it can boast, but also of its accessibility, his Royal Highness is likely to visit, and to derive considerable pleasure from doing so. As it is within the Haidarabad dominions it would not be at all improbable that the young Nizam should take the opportunity, if his health permitted, of meeting and paying his respects to the Prince at Roza, or some other suitable place, before his Royal Highness's departure from India.

THE BOMBAY WATERWORKS.—The meeting held at Dr. Blaney's bungalow last Tuesday evening to consider the proposal to hand over the Bombay Waterworks to a London Company pronounced very decidedly and with entire unanimity against the scheme. Composed, as it for the most part was, of representative ratepayers, the meeting will doubtless have considerable influence in directing the current of public opinion against Mr. Clogg's project, and may cause those members of the Government who are understood to regard it with some favour to reconsider the question before pressing it on the attention of the Corporation. Of course it was not pretended that the resolution come to by the meeting would necessarily bind those who concurred in it in a sort of league and covenant against the proposed transaction with the projected Water Company. If further information tends to show that it would be for the advantage of the city to sell to strangers at cost price the water-works which it has constructed and bind itself to send to London for ever the water rate which will have to be raised to make the transaction profitable to the purchasers, those who joined in the timely demonstration last evening will be free to act as they may judge best; the right of private judgment under such altered circumstances was expressly conceded by Dr. Blaney himself in response to a suggestion from Mr. Kemp. Those of our readers who desire to satisfy themselves as to the probability of the offer of the company being ever considered acceptable have only to study the exhaustive speech on the subject by Dr. Blaney in connection with the figures given by Mr. Bapty.—Times of India, Feb. 5. —The Town Council came to the unanimous resolution on Tuesday last not to accept the offer of the Tansa Water Company; but at the same time the intervention of the Company has had one good result, for it has made the Council put on record a formal acknowledgment of its responsibility to provide Bombay at whatever cost with a sufficient and cheap supply of water, and took a solemn pledge to recommend the corporation to construct the Ewoor reservoir, if Toolsee with Vehar do not meet all the requirements of the service. This resolution of course is only a resolution, but still it is better than nothing, and it should greatly strengthen the hands of the Municipal Commissioner in dealing with the question of the water supply.—Bombay Gazette, Feb. 14.

Gen. Sir Charles Yorke, G.C.B., by his Royal Highness Commanding-in-Chief.

Admiral Sir Hastings Yelverton, by the First Lord of the Admiralty.

ARRIVAL.—Mr. James Ashbury, M.P., has arrived in town from India.

WEEKLY EXPORTS OF BULLION.—The following are the latest reported Specie Exports to India by the steamers of the P. and O. S.N. Company, from Southampton, since Feb. 24:—Per Cathay, Feb. 24:—To Bombay, Silver £80,000. Per Assam, March 2:—To Bombay, Silver £45,000. The exports of Gold were nominal.

THE EAST INDIA AND CHINA ASSOCIATION of Liverpool, which was founded in 1817, has now found itself so short of members that it has not the means to pay its working expenses. At a meeting of the members a few days since it was unanimously resolved to dissolve the Association; and thus, after a useful existence of nearly sixty years, one of the oldest—if not the oldest—of the commercial bodies in Liverpool disappears from view.

TRADE OF INDIA.—A Blue-book respecting the trade of British India, which has been issued by the Statistics and Commerce Department of the India Office, states that the aggregate value of the sea-borne trade of India for the year ended March 31, 1874, amounted, exclusive of store and treasure on account of Government, to £128,707,272, against £121,012,648 in the year 1872-73. The value of the foreign trade amounted to £94,277,080, and of the interportal trade to £34,430,192.

BILLS ON INDIA.—No allotment of bills has been made by the India Council this week, which brings the aggregate amount of remittances withdrawn from the market up to £1,700,000. The attempt to give a fictitious support to the silver market by withholding these bills appears so far to have been unsuccessful. Whether silver, which is quoted to-day 52¾d. "sellers," continues to be depressed as much by apprehension as by other causes, which is not improbable, the course pursued by the India Council is evidently of no avail in present circumstances, and the difficulty of procuring remittances to the East is being met in part by transmitting rupee paper. The India Council Bills to be offered at the Bank of England on the 15th inst. will again amount to 5,000,000 rupees.

DEPARTURE OF LORD LYTTON.—On March 1 Lord and Lady Lytton left London on their way to India, accompanied by Lieut.-colonel and the Hon. Mrs. Burne, Colonel Colley, C.B., and Mr. F. Liddell. After spending some days in Paris as the guests of Lord Lyons, they will proceed to Naples to join the Orontes on the 15th, and expect to arrive at Bombay about the 7th of April. His Excellency's staff is composed as follows:—Private Secretary, Lieut.-col. O. T. Burne, C.S.I., who served in the same capacity with Lord Mayo, and is at present Political Secretary at the India-office; Military Secretary, Colonel Colley, C.B., who took part in the Ashantee campaign, and was, till he received the present appointment, deputy-quartermaster-general at Aldershot. Aides-de-camp: Capt. the Hon. George Villiers, Grenadier Guards; Lieut. Augustus Frederick Liddell, of the Royal Artillery; Lord Marcus Beresford, at present on the staff of Lord Northbrook; and Lieut. Harcourt Rose, 34th Regiment, at present serving in India.

THE BANK OF BENGAL.—The Bank of Bengal has advanced its rate of discount 2 per cent., now charging 8½ per cent. for bills of one month, and 9½ per cent. for bills of longer date. This (says the Echo of Friday evening) is the first serious effort to grapple with the grave consequences which are resulting from the unexampled decline in the Indian exchanges. Its effect was to moderate in some degree the downward course of silver. Business was done in this metal to-day at 52⅝d., which is a decline of ⅛d. since yesterday, a movement so moderate as to really cause congratulation. This remedy can, however, only be temporary, and it is, besides, only less distressing to the mercantile classes of India than what it is designed to alleviate. Meanwhile, trade with the East is paralysed. Shipments are suspended, since it is impossible to ascertain what will be the value of the rupee payments. (By reference to our Parliamentary page it will be seen that Lord George Hamilton has moved for a select committee on the causes of the depreciation of the price of silver, and the effects of such depreciation upon the exchanges between India and England.)

INDIAN APPEAL.—RAJA HUIPUASHAD, RAMSAHOY, AND BAHNOKUND v. SHEODYAL.—These appeals, which have been consolidated by order of her Majesty in Council, came before their Lordships on Thursday, Feb. 17, and the hearing was finally concluded on Thursday last. The properties in dispute lay in the contiguous districts of Oude and the North-Western Provinces, and the object of the suit was to settle the rights of the different members of the family to large estates, that in Oude consisting of 166 villages. The Oude Courts had differed in the shares which they assigned to each litigant, and so had the native judge of Cawnpore and the High Court of the North-Western Provinces. Before the Judicial Committee there were three appeals from the Oude decision, and one from the High Court decision. Mr. J. D. Mayne and Mr. J. H. W. Arathoon, for the first appellant, contended that he and his brother were entitled to the whole of the estates in Oude in accordance with the Sunnud or Firman of Lord Canning, and also under laws passed specially for the Province of Oude, and that, at all events, he and his brother were entitled to a larger share than that which had been given them by the Oude Courts. Mr. J. D. Bell, for Ram Sahoy, the second appellant, contended that he was entitled under Hindoo law to one-half of all the estates in Oude and in the North-Western Provinces. Mr. Cowie, Q.C., and Mr. Doyne, for Bahnokund, abandoned the appeal, but were heard in support of the judgment of the Courts below. Mr. Leith, Q.C., and Mr. C. Arathoon, for the respondent Sheodyal, supported both judgments of the Courts below. Mr. Mayne and Mr. Bell were heard in reply. Their lordships desired time to consider their judgment.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—The following papers were read on Monday evening in the theatre of the University of London, Burlington-gardens:—"On the Shueli Valley of Burmah," by Mr. Ney Elias, and "Afghan Biography," by Mr. Markham. General Sir H. C. Rawlinson presided. There was a very large attendance. The Chairman opened the proceedings. He regretted to state that the Society had no certain news about Captain Cameron. All that was known was that the commander of the West African Station despatched the gunboat Scrious, to be held at Captain Cameron's disposal. That officer had not received special instructions from the Admiralty. It was, therefore, all the more praiseworthy of him to have acted up to the spirit of the Admiralty's general instructions, without waiting for special instructions. It was to be feared that the gunboat would arrive too late at Loanda to be of any service to Captain Cameron, as the Serious did not leave Ascension until the 15th of January, and it could not reach Loanda until the end of the month, whereas Captain Cameron had telegraphed his intention of starting about the middle of the month. He was, in fact, at the last accounts, only waiting for the provisioning and repairs of his vessel to despatch it to the Cape, and immediately after its departure he would start for England. He hoped to have more definite information to communicate at their next meeting. Mr. Markham then proceeded to read the paper of Mr. Ney Elias, which described an alternative route into China to that which Mr. Margary had unfortunately taken. Colonel Yule reminded the meeting that Mr. Elias had obtained the gold medal of the Society some years since for one of the longest and most hazardous journeys ever taken by an individual. He thought the paper was a most interesting one for science. In introducing the second paper, on "Afghan Geography," Mr. Markham stated that the materials had been collected from journals of the late General Lynch, compiled in Afghanistan, the country through which lay the two most important highways on the continent of Asia—the highways which lead to the great mountain bulwarks of our Indian Empire. The paper gave full details of the history, geography, and antiquity of Afghanistan. Col. M'Gregor, of the Quartermaster-General's Department, deplored the general ignorance that prevailed in this country respecting so important a neighbour of our Indian Empire as Afghanistan. Sir H. Rawlinson complimented Mr. Markham in a few brief sentences, and said that he looked upon his paper as a valuable contribution to their proceedings.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, Feb. 28.—THE CAMPAIGN IN MALAGA. — Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY called attention to the state of things in the Malay Peninsula, and strongly condemned the conduct of Government in reference to the proceedings which had of late occurred in that Peninsula. Animadverting in warm terms on the deeds of cruelty which, he alleged, had accompanied the warfare carried on in that part of the world, he inquired whether the military operations had been undertaken in consequence of orders from the Home Government, or by the direction of the authorities of the Straits. He disapproved the appointment of Residents, and, quoting a despatch from Lord Kimberley deprecating unnecessary interference in the internal affairs of the Straits, he argued that such a line of policy ought never to have been departed from. He concluded by moving for papers relating to the affairs of the Malay Peninsula.—Lord CARNARVON pointed out that all the papers necessary for the proper understanding of the case were not yet before Parliament, and nevertheless Lord Stanley of Alderley had insisted on prematurely bringing forward the subject. With regard to the system of Residents, his responsibility consisted only in maintaining that system which had been previously established. He could not allow the strictures passed on the troops and military officers, who had performed their duty with great moderation and forbearance, to go forth uncontradicted, and he energetically protested against the observations made use of by Lord Stanley of Alderley. With regard to the policy of the Government, he contented himself with saying that he had no doubt that the course pursued within the last few months had been the means of saving this country from one of those little wars so much to be lamented.—Lord KIMBERLEY admitted that it was premature to discuss the subject until the requisite papers were presented to the House, but, with respect to the appointment of Residents, he observed that this step was taken without his authority by Sir Andrew Clarke. He quite agreed in thinking that the manner in which the military operations had been carried on reflected the highest credit on all engaged.—Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY, in reply, disclaimed any intention of accusing the Queen's Regular Forces of acts of cruelty.—The motion for papers was negatived.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, March 2.—THE ARMY ESTIMATES.—Mr. HARDY made his annual exposition of the Army Estimates. He regretted at the outset that it was his fate to ask for enlarged estimates, but he pleaded in extenuation that he had hitherto kept within the votes granted him by the House and had never asked for supplementary estimates. Dealing first with topics not strictly relevant to the effective services, Mr. Hardy mentioned that promotion and retirement were still being carefully considered, with a strict regard to the pledge given when purchase was abolished that the flow of promotion should be kept up. The Purchase Commissioners would require £172,770 less this year than last year, and, with the exception of the last fort at Spithead, it was hoped that the fortifications erected under the Fortifications Loan Act will be completed by the end of 1876-77, and within the original estimate. Next he explained in detail the New Medical Warrant which it is proposed to issue. To return to the Regimental system, he said, was impossible, and he therefore retained the Staff and General Hospital system. The Medical Officers would have £250 a year for ten years, and, on retirement, would receive £1,000 down; but the Medical Department would have power to retain a sufficient number of men to fill the higher ranks. From this point the pay would go on gradually increasing, but the age of retirement would be fixed at sixty, without any exceptions. This scheme, Mr. Hardy contended, would secure a flow of promotion, and would, in the long run, save money; and in 1912, when it would be fully developed, the normal cost would be £154,000. Passing to the Auxiliary Forces, Mr. Hardy said he had followed the recommendations of the Committee of last year to convert the Yeomanry force into Light Cavalry, and in the Volunteer force there was an increase in the vote of £20,000 caused by an increase in the number of efficients. With regard to the reserve men, he held that they should be regarded as soldiers on furlough, and should be forthcoming when wanted. He proposed, therefore, to add £2 a year, which, instead of being paid in advance, should be paid every twelve months, when they would be required also to present themselves for medical examination. He intended, as far as he could, to make them a real force, and a considerable number would be called up for this year's mobilisation, though they would only be retained a short time. The cost this year would be very small, and when the whole 84,000 were got together the cost would only be £255,000. On the votes for the Militia, of whose efficiency he again spoke in terms of commendation, Mr. Hardy explained the reason for the delay in building barracks, and mentioned that a large tract of land had been bought at Aldershot for the purposes of training. After pointing out that there are increases in the votes for provisions, forage, clothing, stores (though in the last there were various items more apparent than real), he approached what he called the great question—How are we to keep up our regular army? Before explaining his proposals, he gave the Committee some interesting statistics, proving that the height, age, and calibre of the average recruits are much superior to what is commonly represented. In the first place, he proposed that the eighteen regiments first for foreign colonial service should be recruited up to 820. By this means not only would there be no necessity to call for volunteers when a regiment was ordered abroad, but we should be able to put an Army Corps in the field whenever it may be required. To get the necessary men, Mr. Hardy proposes to give the private soldier deferred pay of 2d. a day, or £3 a year, so that at the end of his six years' service he will receive £18, not payable at once, but in two or three payments by Post-office order at the place where the man reports himself. Furlough pay is to be raised to 1s. 6d. per day, but desertion is to operate as a forfeiture of all accumulations. The pay of the Guards is to be raised one penny a day, which will cost £8,000, and the whole cost of this addition, though only £4,000 now, will, in 1890, amount to £325,000. As to the non-commissioned officers, he proposed to add 6d. per day to the pay of sergeant-majors; to the sergeants 2d. a day now and 2d. a day in two years; and to the corporals 1d. a day. Lance-corporals and lance-sergeants are to have the pay of their substantive rank, and there is to be an addition to the pay of the staff-sergeants. Finally, he touched briefly on the Mobilisation Scheme, which, he said, was essentially a defensive scheme. It was the fruit of great labour, but its authors were open to any suggestions for its improvement. In concluding a much-applauded speech, Mr. Hardy claimed for himself the credit of having treated the Committee with perfect frankness. He did not conceal that his plans would lead to additional expenditure, but he had kept efficiency strictly in view, and aimed at securing for the country an army which would maintain its position in the world and enable us to fulfil all our engagements.

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE CANDIDATES.—Lord G. HAMILTON, replying to Mr. PLAYFAIR, stated that a voluminous correspondence on the selection and education of candidates had gone on between the Secretary of State for India, the Civil Service Commission, and the Government of India, and would shortly be in the hands of members.

COUNCIL OF INDIA (PROFESSIONAL APPOINTMENTS) BILL.—Lord G. HAMILTON moved the second reading of this Bill.—Mr. FAWCETT, in moving that it was inexpedient to pass the Bill, as it would throw an additional and unnecessary charge upon the revenues of India, said they had heard of a horse being resold with his colour changed, and that transaction represented with considerable accuracy what had been done with that Bill. He went on to give the history of the Bill, and showed that on the 25th of February, last Session, a Bill was introduced with the title of the East India Home Governments Pensions Bill. That Bill reached its third reading, but it was so ill drawn that it had to be withdrawn. Just about the last week in the Session another Bill was brought in, called the East India Home Government, not Pensions, but Appointments Bill. He found in that Bill that a clause to give pensions to some persons whom they could never discover was re-inserted. That also was defeated. Now it was again introduced for the third time as the Council of India (Professional Appointments) Bill. What was the reason for this ingenious device; what was the motive power of all this persistency; who was thus pressing forward for a pension; who asked for this Bill what would it do; why was it introduced? The Bill by a side wind tried to sweep away a clause in an Act passed in 1869, with the unanimous approval of both Houses, for improving the Home Government of India, which provided that in future members of the India Council should not be entitled to a pension. Yet members of the India Council appointed since 1869, on the express and specific condition that they should have no pension, were by this measure to have a pension. If they were thus careless in dealing with the revenues of India, what would the people of India think of their boasted guardianship of their interests?—Lord G. HAMILTON said the Bill was brought in persistently because the Government thought it absolutely necessary. There was no difficulty in getting old Indians to join the India Council, because they came home with a pension of £1,000 and, added to that £1,200 a year for ten years as members of the Council. But there was a difficulty in getting gentlemen of legal attainments not old Indians to come on the Council, because only £1,200 could be offered to them for ten years, with no pension. The Bill, therefore, simply proposed that the Secretary of State for India should have power to appoint certain gentlemen of professional attainments for fifteen years, with pensions of £500 after ten years' service, and it was believed that this was the cheapest way of obtaining legal advice. In 1856-7 the law charges of the East India Company amounted to upwards of £19,000, because they had no lawyer upon their establishment, while last year the law charges of the India-office were only £2,500. (Cheers.) If the hon. member for Hackney were successful in throwing out this Bill, he would not only prevent the Secretary of State from obtaining that assistance which he believed to be necessary, but would unquestionably in the long run place heavy additional charges on the revenues of India. (Hear, hear.)—The debate was continued by Sir G. CAMPBELL, Mr. HARDCASTLE, Mr. G. DUFF, Mr. E. SMITH, and Sir V. HARCOURT, after which the House divided. For the amendment, 41; against, 151—110. The Bill was then read a second time.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FRIDAY, March 3.—APPELLATE JURISDICTION BILL.—On the motion for going into Committee on the Appellate Jurisdiction Bill, Lord REDESDALE expressed his satisfaction at the position in which the question of the Appellate Jurisdiction now stood, and thought it desirable that the present Bill should receive general assent.—The House having resolved into Committee, Lord NAPIER and ETTRICK said that the Bill would, he believed, be well received in Scotland; but he thought that some provision ought to be made to secure special qualifications for the decision of Appeals from India.—Clause 7, having reference to Orders in relation to proceedings, was struck out of the Bill; and on Clause 15, relating to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, Lord POWIS asked whether any provision would be made to secure the attendance of some Judge of Indian experience on the Judicial Committee.—The LORD CHANCELLOR replied that for the hearing of Indian Appeals two Assessors, with Indian experience, might be appointed if Parliament should so think fit.—The clause was then agreed to, and the Bill passed through Committee.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, March 3.—THE FALL IN THE VALUE OF SILVER.—On the motion of Lord G. HAMILTON, a Select Committee was appointed to consider and report upon the causes of the depreciation of the price of silver and the effects of such depreciation upon the exchange between India and England.

LEGISLATIVE.—A meeting of the Legislative Council was held on Thursday, the 26th Jan., at which, among other matters, the proposed new Municipal Bill was warmly discussed, and many of the objections which have been raised against it answered. After a considerable and able opposition on the part of one of the Honourable Members of Council against the proposal that the Bill should be referred to a Select Committee for report, it was ultimately agreed to do so, seven members voting for and one against the motion.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a most simple form. Take some good compound, such as

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS,

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tasted by many thousands of persons, are found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

LAMPLOUGH'S

PYRETIC SALINE.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See article in the Civil Service Gazette.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, February 21; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, February 19; Calcutta, February 18.

SIR W. MUIR'S Indian Coinage Bill was referred to a select committee at the meeting of the Legislative Council on February 15. The diversity and consequent nuisance of Indian coinages are even greater than they were not long ago in Germany; and as Sir William Muir remarked, no one benefits by the present confusion except the shroff or money-lender. The Rajahs of Benares and Vizianagram, both members of the Council, approve of the Bill, which has already won the further support of Holkar, the Alwar Rajah, and the Nawab of Bhawalpur. Other chiefs will no doubt follow their example, seeing that the new project involves no attack upon their existing rights and privileges. Their feelings indeed are carefully considered in every way. The Bill is to be a kind of permissive Bill. No native chief need act upon it unless he likes, and whenever a chief accepts its provisions, the new coins, though minted by the Government of India only, will bear his own device. Each chief, moreover, will be free to revert to his own mint and his old ways after the lapse of a certain term of years. The main object of the Bill is to get rid of the existing chaos in the Indian currencies by establishing, if possible, one uniform standard of value throughout India; a coinage which, under whatever differences of outward token, may pass equally current in British and Native provinces. The new coins are to show by English inscriptions their value in the rupee currency of the Indian Government. Any Native State which accepts the new coinage must undertake to abstain during thirty years from coining in its own mint, gold, silver, bronze, or copper; after which time it may issue coins of the same value wherever it pleases on its own account.

AT the same sitting of Council Sir R. Temple obtained leave to introduce a Bill to extend the Criminal Tribes Act to the Lower Provinces of Bengal. Two or three other Bills of minor importance were advanced a stage.

Two public meetings have been held in Calcutta, the one by the British Indian Association, the other at the Town-hall by the Indian League, about Sir R. Temple's new Calcutta Municipality Bill. At the former the Bill was generally condemned; at the latter, whilst the principle of the Bill was approved, a memorial against several of the clauses was adopted. With regard to the qualifications of candidates the League bluntly affirms that "Wealth and intelligence do not often go hand-in-hand, and the electors should be free to choose their own representatives. If they have confidence in one not blessed with a superfluity of the comforts of life, "why should they not elect him?" Why not?

ON his recent visit to Khelat Captain Sandeman was warmly welcomed by the Khan, who declared himself willing to adopt measures for the protection of life and property in his dominions. Colonel Munro, who now holds full political charge of Khelat and the Sind frontier, was at Jacobabad pushing inquiries into the causes of the late disorders, and taking steps to establish a strong and friendly government throughout the Khan's territories. The Sarawan Brahuī Chiefs and the most powerful of the frontier tribes, the Marris, besought Colonel Munro to assure the Khan of their innocence with regard to the late attempt upon his life. It was rumoured at Karáchi that Colonel Merewether is coming home, and that Mr. Chapman will act as Commissioner until Mr. Havelock is appointed.

ACCORDING to the Pioneer the Government were considering whether the Nawab of Bhawalpur might be allowed to visit this country. The Panjab Government, who appear to favour the scheme, have forwarded the papers to the Government of India, with the expression of an opinion to that effect. If the needful sanction be obtained the young Nawab, accompanied by the Bhawalpur Sahibzadas and perhaps the young Nawab of Mandot, will start in April for Europe in charge of Mr. J. Crompton Doran and a political officer. A part of the plan which awaits the Viceroy's yes or no provides for the education of the Nawab and the Sahibzadas as day-scholars at either Rugby or Cheltenham College, a residence being procured for them in the immediate neighbourhood. Mr. Thornton, now acting as Foreign Secretary, is known to favour the plan, which will most likely be carried out.

A DESPATCH has been received by the Government of India, announcing the rate of exchange that has been fixed for financial transactions between the Imperial and Indian Government for the year 1876 77. The rate adopted is, as our readers may be already aware, 1s. 9$\frac{3}{4}$d. the rupee.

SIR CHARLES REID returned to Lahor, his divisional headquarters, on February 11 from Delhi, having completed his labours on the Committee which had lately been considering the improvements necessary in railway rolling-stock in order to fit it for the conveyance of Cavalry and Artillery. It is said that Sir Charles will shortly be relieved by Major-General D. Stuart, in which event Major-General Barwell will be confirmed in his present post in the Andaman Islands.

FROM Lahor we have a report that some Afridis have attacked and killed a European who was travelling from Kohat to Peshawar.

WE are sorry to learn that Colonel Bacon, Deputy Secretary to Government in the Military Department, has been compelled, by ill-health, to leave India at once, embarking from Calcutta on February 15. Colonel Bacon has for many years past held high administrative posts in India, and discharged his duties with signal devotion.

THE Duke of Buckingham had arrived at Calcutta, and Sir P. Wodehouse returned to Bombay.—Major Champain, Director General of the Indo-European Telegraph, was expected in Calcutta on February 17.—Mr. George Batten will probably act during Mr. Hume's absence as Secretary, Department of Agriculture, Revenue, and Commerce.—Some changes in the Bengal Commissionerships have followed upon Mr. J. F. Cockerell's appointment to the Legislative Council. Lord Ulick Browne takes Rajshahi and Kuch Bahar, Mr. Buckland the Presidency Division, and Mr. Horace Cockerell Bardwan. Mr. F. B. Peacock resumes the acting appointment at Dacca.

IT is understood that when Sir H. Norman comes home next year Sir E. Johnson and he will change places.

ONE touch of nature makes the whole world kin. It is a comfort to find that stupid people of the Aryan race exist in other countries besides our own. The stories we sometimes hear, for instance, about letters being consigned to pumps in mistake for pillar-posts are matched by like examples of blundering recorded in the last Report of the Indian Postmaster-General :—

> The stupidity exhibited by some natives entrusted with the posting of letters almost exceeds belief. It has not unfrequently happened that letter boxes sent for repair have been found to contain old letters not dropped into the proper orifices but stuffed into cracks and crevices, the result of age or warping. The Chief Superintendent, Travelling Post Office, when on tour, chanced to see a native at Hurda posting letters in the mouth of a cistern for the supply of water to first-class carriages on the Great Indian Peninsula Line. A precisely similar act was on another occasion witnessed by my assistant, Mr. Alpin. I cannot but fear that many covers never reach the Post-office at all through blunders on the part of the agency used to post them.

THE Indian Statesman, commenting on the failure of Indian tobacco to satisfy buyers in the home market, draws attention to the fact that "while Java, in the hands of the Dutch, is running Japan very hard for the first place in the supply of tobacco, as a substitute for the great American growths, our own produce is spoken of with almost bitter contempt. The last advices from London say, that our produce is quite unfit for home use in every respect, and that there is no chance of its being sold in England, until its character is altogether changed; while, instead of getting better, it appears to be getting worse. In former years, we are reminded, that some East India growths sold readily at fair prices, but the various sorts now imported have almost every possible defect, which even the low price does not redeem. Simultaneously we are told that the Dutch imports from Java into Holland have fetched enormous prices."

FROM the last Administration Report on the Indian Post-office it appears that the total percentage of increase on all kinds of correspondence was 6·30 per cent. The number of letters sent last year was 104,353,076, as compared with 98,531,628 in the year before; that of newspapers 9,365,586, as compared with 8,762,200; and that of books, patterns, and packets 1,608,107, as compared with 1,336,363. The number of letters registered rose from 2,230,819 to 2,442,447; an increase proportionally greater than that in the total number of letters. In the letters sent from India to this country there was a small increase of 2 per cent., against a fall of ·4 per cent. in the number of letters received in India. During the year India sent us four letters for every three she received from these islands. How far this disparity occurs in commercial, and how far in private correspondence, the returns, of course, do not help us to make out. It appears on the other hand that only 325,623 newspapers were despatched from India against 1,667,658 sent thither. The financial results of the year were very satisfactory; the purely postal revenue having improved to the extent of Rs. 341,793, against an increased outlay of only about a lakh and a half of rupees. If we deduct the value of service stamps sold, the deficit was only about seven lakhs of rupees, which represents the cost to the State of the transmission of official correspondence. Including the value of service stamps, the operations of the Department yielded a net surplus of Rs. 377,864. The bullock train also yielded a surplus of Rs. 207,966, and the Punjab Military Van Dák one of Rs. 30,212. Taking the number of letters and newspapers received for delivery in the year before the passing of the Indian Post-office Act as 100, that received in the year under review would be represented by 595. In other words, this class of correspondence has, during the interval, increased just six-fold. The number of new Post-offices opened during the year was 314, and that of new letter boxes opened 586, while 1,281 miles were added to the length of India's postal lines.

ON the 7th March the Prince of Wales arrived at Allahabad from Bareilly and was received with great ceremony at the station by the Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, the Judges and Law officers, and other high officials. On his Royal Highness alighting from the train an address from the Municipality was read. The Prince then drove to Government-house, and at noon he held a Chapter of the Star of India, when Major Generals Browne and Probyn and Dr. Fayrer were invested with the rank of Knight Commander, and Colonels Michael Earle and Ellis, Captains Glyn and Baring, and Majors Henderson and Bradford with the rank of Companions of this Order. The ceremony passed off well, but was comparatively private, it being held at Government-house.

ON the 9th the Prince of Wales arrived at Indor. He was met five miles from Indor by the Maharajah Holkar, who received him most cordially. The route was lined with troops, but the procession and the entry into the town formed but a poor display, and will bear no comparison with what has been witnessed at other places. There was a total absence of decorations, but the crowd received the Prince with cordiality and respect. The same afternoon his Royal Highness visited the Rajahs of Dhar, Dewar, Ratlam, and Jaura, and then drove through the city to Lalbagh, where a Darbar was held, and presents were exchanged. On the Prince's return the streets were illuminated. A grand banquet and ball were given that night at the Residency, and the Prince left the next day for Ellora.

ON the 11th March the Prince of Wales arrived at Bombay. His Royal Highness was received at the station by the Governor, Sir P. Wodehouse and staff, by the Chief Justice, Sir M. P. Westropp, and by Lieutenant General C. W. Stavely, and other officers of the Presidency. The Prince drove directly to the dockyard, the road being lined with troops. Having received a farewell address from the Municipality, his Royal Highness proceeded immediately on board the Serapis. This was the last State appearance of the Prince in India. From Calcutta, we learn that in order to commemorate the visit of the Prince of Wales to India, the Queen has appointed his Royal Highness honorary colonel of eight native regiments, four of which are in future to be designated "Queen's Own," and the other four "Prince of Wales's Own."

WE learn from a City Article in the Times that the question of the Indian cotton-duties has aroused the keenest interest in the North, and that "the present distressed or stagnant position of our cotton industries has given additional impetus to the struggle which Lancashire is making for the repeal of the duty." "It is strongly contended that the interests of Manchester are vitally concerned in maintaining the present average of cotton exports to India, inasmuch as other markets give no signs of an improved demand in this connection. The total exports of cotton goods and yarns to all parts except India have fallen off sensibly since 1872, and were lower in value last year than in 1870 by about 2½ millions sterling. This may be due partly to a glut of exports to China and Japan in 1872 and 1873, as well as to a lull in the demand from countries which have been living beyond their means. But other causes have been at work. The United States, Canada, Germany, Belgium, and France are all trying to manufacture cotton goods for themselves, and their efforts tell on the demand for our goods. It is further asserted that the products of Indian mills are supplanting those of our home mills. Certain kinds of goods that the former can make have been exported from this country to India in decreasing quantities year by year, while shirtings, which as yet India does not make, have been sent from here in ever increasing quantities.

FROM certain calculations of the relative cost of working Indian and English mills, it would appear that the balance of advantage on the side of an Indian mill of 60,000 spindles and 1,000 looms, under like conditions of production, must be £24,000 a year; an advantage against which Manchester cannot make head in the manufacture of coarse cotton goods. But in the case of the finer fabrics, the balance against Manchester is reckoned at only £4,500, a mere trifle which English energy might easily neutralise, but for the 5 per cent. duty which turns the scale at once in favour of India. What wonder, therefore, that mills in India have increased from eleven in 1870-71 to forty-one in 1874-5, and that the imports of machinery to India should be steadily growing? It does not appear to be contested that India must eventually win the day in the competition for the supply of cotton manufactures to the Indian Empire, but the men of Manchester argue that this triumph should not be hastened by artificial aids such as the import duty, which they do not consider a necessity for the Indian exchequer. If such be the right view of India's future, we do not see how the retention of the cotton import duties can materially affect the issue. It would be hardly fair to remove the duties of which Manchester complains, while similar duties were still levied on silks, woollens, and other imports in which other classes of merchants and manufacturers are interested. The whole of these duties ought to stand or fall together, and Manchester can claim no prior right to relief merely because her share of the burden is the largest, as compared with any other single interest.

IN removing the mystery which enshrouded the first reading of the Royal Titles Bill, Mr. Disraeli has only succeeded in raising up another mystery for our bewilderment. The Queen, he says, is to be called Empress of India, not because Empress really bears any higher significance than Queen, but because such an "amplification of titles" serves to "touch and satisfy the imagination of nations." Big words and sounding titles have no doubt a mysterious charm for certain minds; but if the Queen of England ranks as high as any Czar or Kaiser in Europe, and if, as Sir G. Campbell affirmed, Queen and Empress would alike be translated into the same Hindustani word, Padishah, what is the good of exchanging for Indian uses the good old English term denoting sovereignty for a title altogether strange to English ears, and in no way harmonising with English traditions? "Queen of India" would surely express as much as "Empress of India," in respect of her sovereign power, while Empress would to many minds suggest a rule upheld by armed force. If the new title must differ in some way from the old one, why not call her Mistress or Lady Paramount of India? The only sound plea for adding to the list of her Majesty's titles is the policy of declaring formally what occurred in fact, when in 1858 the last of the Moghal Emperors was banished to Burmah, and the Government of India transferred from the Company to the Crown. It may be well to keep constantly before the princes of India the fact of which they have long been aware, that the Crown of England represents the paramount sovereignty once wielded by the House of Akbar, and that every Native State in India owes allegiance, whether by force of conquest or of treaties, to the successor of the Moghals and the heir by reversion of the East India Company. As for the supposed eagerness of the natives at large for some such recognition of England's paramount rights, we must take the Ministerial assertions on trust, merely remarking that the Talukhdars of Oudh are not quite co-extensive with the peoples of India. To the bulk of those peoples the adoption of a new title must surely be a matter of the very smallest significance. For them the district officers and their underlings represent the "Sarkár" or Lord Sahib, whose orders must be obeyed, and in whose name the taxes are levied. Beyond that point, we take it, their imaginations seldom care to travel.

IT is possible also that the Royal Titles Bill may signify another step in the direction taken by the purchase of the Suez Canal shares. In other words, it may, we think, be interpreted as a renewal in behalf of our Indian Empire of the warning which Russia was meant to see in the measure which virtually transferred into our hands the control of the new waterway between England and India. If the Bill has any inner meaning, it means that England, as an Asiatic Power, is resolved to maintain her Indian Empire against all assailants whether from without or within.

WE understand that Sir Frederick Haines, the new Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Army, was, at the last moment, compelled to abandon the intention of going out with Lord Lytton in H.M.S. Orontes. His passage is now fixed by the steamer which leaves Brindisi on March 20. He will be accompanied by Lieutenant Colonel G. T. Gough, his Military Secretary.

LIEUT. COL. G. T. GOUGH, who has just been made Military Secretary to Sir Frederic Haines, entered the 3rd Light Dragoons as Cornet in April, 1846, and served with that famous regiment throughout the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, including the action of Ramnagar, passage of the Chenab, and battles of Sadulapur, Chilianwalla, and Gujarat. He served with the 12th Lancers in the Kaffir war of 1851-53, and was present in every engagement, including the action of Berea, where he commanded the detachments of cavalry with Sir George Cathcart's column, being mentioned in General Orders and despatches. Serving finally in the Crimea with the 12th Lancers from their landing in May, 1855, he was present at the siege and fall of Sebastopol, battle of the Chernaya, and operations near Upatoria, under General d'Allonville. On the break up of the Cavalry Depot at Canterbury in April, 1870, Major Gough was promoted to an unattached Lieutenant-Colonelcy, and proceeded in the following year to Madras as Military Secretary to the officer to whose Staff he has just been reappointed.

AN abridged edition in one volume of Mr. Marshman's well-known History of India has just been brought out by Messrs. Blackwood. In 544 pages of close but clear type Mr. Marshman has reproduced the substantial merits of his larger work. By compressing the narrative of the Mohammadan period into little more than a hundred pages, he has been able to give the bulk of his space to the rise and progress of the British power in India, bringing the story down to the death of Lord Mayo in 1872. It need hardly be said that the same thorough mastery of his subject, and the same close, simple, sober style which marked the former volumes are to be found here in equal degree. There is enough of detail in the volume to satisfy that class of readers for whom it is intended, while the author's name is a guarantee for general accuracy of statement, sound views, and impartial estimates of men and things. Those who wish to read an account of the Mohammadan period in India, less full and scholarly but more popular and "spicy" than Elphinstone's classical work, may turn with some profit to Sir Edward Sullivan's "Princes of India," the second edition of which was published a few months ago by Messrs. Stanford. Sir Edward's volume reads more like a romance than a genuine history; but that is owing rather to the romantic nature of his subject and his racy method of treatment, than to any marked absence of historic research, although it must be owned that his critical faculty hardly equals the extent of his general reading.

WYNAD.—Distress is said to threaten the Wynad planters. The Calicut Observer writes that "a sad tale of impending calamity and gloomy prospects reaches us from the Wynad, only to confirm the ill-defined rumours of distress that has been going abroad for some time past. We hear of disastrous droughts and ruinous failures of crops; of dearth of grain and doubled prices; of scarcity of water and intense suffering among man and beast. The Mysor District has experienced a total failure of crops, which has driven the grain merchants of that quarter into the Wynad markets, to offer prices too temptingly high to be met with prudent self-denial on the part of the more fortunate possessors of the precious commodity. We are assured that unless grain depots are formed at such places as Manantoddy, Vytherry, Sultan's Battery and Gudalor, before the October harvest is reaped, famine among the inhabitants of the Wynad estates may be looked forward to as no uncertain contingency."

MAHARAJAH HOLKAR.—The Indian Charivari has the following good-natured notice of Maharajah Holkar:—"Amongst the native chiefs lately assembled in Calcutta the stalwart figure of the Maharajah of Indore, his haughty mien, and the studied simplicity of his dress as compared with the bejewelled apparel of the other chiefs, caused him to be an object of general observation. And the Maharajah is worthy of observation, for he is undoubtedly one of the cleverest and most influential of our native feudatories. He does not devote his attention to military display like his near neighbour and great rival Scindhia, for his army does not much exce d ten thousand men, with twenty-four field guns. He possesses a more commercial spirit, which has induced him, with the able assistance of Sir Madava Row, to turn his attention to the improvement of his territories, and to encourage native manufactures. As an example of the latter we may notice his establishment of a cotton mill under European superintendence at Indore, the productions from which are of excellent quality, and command a ready sale. As an example of the former we may adduce the fact that he was the first Native Prince to accede to the Government's suggestion of a railway through his country, for the making of which he gave large sums of money. As owing to good management his revenues yield him a large annual surplus, his accumulated wealth is very large, but by appointing a European tutor for his eldest son he has shown that he appreciates the advantages of education as a preventative measure against future reckless extravagance. But the Maharajah is yet in his prime, and it is to be hoped that he may long live to foster the progress of his territories."

EDUCATION IN BENGAL.

THE Report on Public Instruction in Bengal for the year 1874-75 tells a satisfactory tale of progress made during the first year of Sir R. Temple's rule. In spite of the transfer of Silhet to Assam the number of schools rose that year from 15,926 to 17,940, and of scholars from 463,216 to 517,239. If we allow for the increase in unaided schools, the nett gain to the system of State education amounted to 1,050 schools and 35,015 pupils. Of the money spent on these schools the Government contributed Rs. 22,59,000, against Rs. 16,68,000 subscribed by the people. For the higher English schools the people paid as much as 69 per cent., while their share of the outlay on "schools devoted to special education" was only 28 per cent. The new system of cheap village schools, or patsháláas, set on foot by Sir G. Campbell in 1872, is bearing yearly more and more fruit. The number of these schools rose during the year from 9,645, with 231,323 scholars, to 10,638, with 257,310 scholars. Of primary schools of all kinds there were 13,145, containing in all 330,024 pupils, on whom the State expended Rs. 442,699, or an average of Rs. 29 for each new patshála, and of Rs. 5.4.8 for each of the older primary schools. In some districts, such as Midnapur, the State-aided patsháláas have done little more than replace the old unaided village-schools. But in Eastern Bengal, where very few of these existed a few years back, the new schools represent a clear increase of double the number found there three years ago. Many new patsháláas have also sprung up under private management in the hope of ultimately receiving State aid.

But the good already effected exceeds the mere increase in the number of schools and scholars. Primary education has for the first time been established on a regular system, embracing a fixed course of study, while village schoolmasters have begun to enjoy the advantages of a training in normal schools. Not only has the standard of teaching been raised, but new classes of the people have been attracted to the schools. There has been a marked increase in the number of Mohammedan scholars, 86 per cent. of whom are being taught in primary schools. The number of low-class girls now receiving instruction has also largely increased. The old unwillingness of the people to pay the village "gurus" or teachers their customary fees is fast disappearing, especially in the Presidency Division, where three-fifths, and in Bahar, where half the "gurus'" income is paid by the people themselves. Even in Orissa the objection to paying fees is clearly diminishing. In Midnapur district, thanks to its active Magistrate, Mr. Harrison, the new system seems to have specially prospered. The State outlay on each patsháláa in this district averaged only Rs. 9, while the fee incomes of the gurus were four times as much, and an energetic guru might earn Rs. 50 and more a-year.

So eager was the competition for primary scholarships in most parts of Bengal, that the task devolved upon the examiners became unusually difficult. In some districts boys of all ages were allowed to undergo examination, although the scholarships were everywhere closed against boys above fourteen years old. Sir R. Temple raises a fair objection to the different methods employed by different committees, some of whom gave certificates to all who passed the requisite standard, while others recorded "only the names of those who actually obtained scholarships." Uniformity of practice in this respect is certainly to be desired; but the rule which henceforth restricts the primary scholarships to candidates under eleven seems to carry the competitive principle rather too far even for the precocity of Bengali boys.

There were 486,734 pupils in the middle and higher schools, of whom 15,654 were girls. These figures represent a total increase of 8 per cent. in both classes of schools, and of 11 per cent. in the higher schools. While the Government English middle schools show no increase in number, and the Government vernacular schools were six fewer than in 1873, there was a compensating increase in the number of aided and unaided schools. Four-sevenths of the total outlay on middle schools were raised by local funds. Sir R. Temple is glad to find some improvement in the working of these schools; an improvement which the founding of intermediate scholarships, to bridge over the gulf between primary and middle schools, will doubtless help forward, especially as the teaching in the patsháláa will henceforth be made more directly preparative for that of the middle school.

Of higher English schools teaching up to the standard of entrance into the University the whole number was 125, with 20,030 pupils, showing an increase of 3 schools and 1,738 scholars on the year before. There were also 41 unaided schools, with 10,770 scholars. In the Government schools about one-third, and in aided schools a little more than one-fourth of the whole outlay was defrayed by the State. Fewer candidates went up for the University Entrance Examination, but the percentage of successful candidates, nearly 41 per cent., was a good deal higher. In this examination the Hindu and Hare Schools of Calcutta won the first place, but Bardwan and the Presidency Division also came out well. The colleges and high schools for University students showed a certain increase in the number of the latter, especially of those in the aided colleges. At the Government law schools there were 229 students on the rolls, whose cost is nearly covered by fees. At the Campbell Medical School at Sealdah the numbers of students rose to 818, to whose cost Government contributed two-fifths. The new Temple Medical School at Patna was opened in June 1874, and steps were taken to start a similar school at Dacca, which was opened in the following year with every promise of success. The decline in the numbers of the Civil Engineering Classes in the Presidency College calls forth an expression of natural regret from Sir R. Temple, who desires to know more about the causes of so "unfortunate" a result. The School of Arts on the other hand was doing well and attracting more students.

At the First Arts Examination, answering to the Oxford "Little-Go," only 144 out of 417 candidates passed. Of 183 candidates for the B.A. degree, 79 were successful; the bulk of the remainder failing in the literature course, while more than half of the science candidates got through. Comparing the results in Bengal with those in the London University, the Director of Public Instruction owns himself satisfied. Not so however Sir R. Temple, who regards the paucity of those who take degrees, as compared with those who matriculate, as "a grave blot in our educational results." In order to lessen or remove this blot, Sir Richard has lately ruled that none but graduates shall enter the upper class of the Native Civil Service, and only First Arts men be admitted into the lower class. As a further means to the same end he has taken steps to increase the number of preparatory colleges in different parts of Bengal.

In the Government and aided schools for girls the number of pupils rose from 7,586 to 7,977; while the unaided schools increased in number from 60, with 1,299, to 89, with 2,200 girls; and these figures include none of the girls now taught in mixed schools. The Lieutenant-Governor hopes to attract more girls to schools of the latter class by means of rewards both for the teachers and the girls themselves. Zenana teaching is said to be making some way among the higher classes, especially in Eastern Bengal. Of Mohammedan pupils in Government and aided schools the number increased during the year by 8 per cent., mainly in the higher and middle English schools. Compared however with the proportion of Mohammedans in Bengal, the numbers at school are still below the mark, and of the few Mohammedans who seek admission into the University still fewer succeed in the attempt. That they have no objection to English studies appears from the fact that many students at the Calcutta Madrassa would gladly exchange part of their Arabic course for English, and that nearly all the boys in the new Madrassa at Rájsháhi, being free to choose, have elected to learn English.

The forty Government normal schools sent out 1,542 certified teachers, of whom 1,373 were primary schoolmasters, and the remainder pandits for vernacular schools. To these may be added ten aided schools for masters, and five aided with one unaided school for mistresses. In a few last words on the whole subject Sir R. Temple lays much stress on the need of combining the study of practical science with the usual course of training in the secondary schools. Only in this way can employment be found, he thinks, for all the educated youth of Bengal, whose numbers are yearly increasing, while the old paths of wordly advancement are getting blocked up. By introducing a scientific element into the higher education, and establishing "several sorts of technical schools," Sir Richard hopes to encourage the wealthier and more enlightened classes to avail themselves of the new employments now multiplying in Bengal.

Correspondence.

CHIEF MAGISTRATES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

There is a total length of 257 miles of water-course. The number of cubic feet of earth that was excavated was 44,039,645, and 54 bunds were constructed, containing 3,552,843 cubic feet. The whole cost of the works to the district fund was Rs. 22,563, which will easily be recouped in five years. But the moral results are still more striking. All was done by the district officers, who displayed vigour and public spirit, and went through those laborious months with unflagging persistency and without a murmur. Never before had the Government been drawn into such close relations with the villagers; and the people have learnt for themselves what great things may be accomplished by systematic and combined efforts.—Mr. Clements Markham in the "Geographical Magazine" for March, 1876.

In the Sirhind Canal the total quantity excavated during the year was 49¼ million cubic feet.—Page 10 of "Blue-book for India," published in 1875.

SIR,—My first quotation refers to irrigation works in the district of Firozpur; my second to the progress made in constructing the Sirhind Canal, required for the purpose of fertilising the districts between the Sutlej and the Jumna.

One of the most momentous questions of the day now is, Are we to destroy the powers and usefulness of the chief magistrates of districts in order to centralise power in the heads of departments, who revolve like satellites round the Viceroy?

Previous to the Mutiny the Commander-in-Chief imbibed a love of the centralising principle, and consequently lost the army. If we imitate his example in the Civil Administration, can we retain India?

Year after year efforts have been made to lower the position of the Chief magistrates. As local representatives of her Majesty the Queen, many have become nonentities, so overwhelmed have they been with judicial and routine business, and so smothered by departments. In page 10 of the Blue-book, published in January, 1875, the Government boasts of Lord Mayo's measure, which was supposed by many to have a decentralising tendency, but the chief result appears to have been to tempt district officers to grind the faces of the poor by octroi extortions, while the Supreme Government can declare positively that it is not responsible.

I am rejoiced to find that Captain Grey, the chief magistrate of the district of Firozpur, has been able to free himself from the red tape handcuffs of the Department of Public Works, and to do at once a portion of the work, about which the Department has been writing for thirty-six years. I beg your readers to study carefully Pages 58 to 60 of the Geographical Magazine for this month; the article is written by Mr. Clements Markham, who, from his intimate connection with the India-office, may be considered an authority on the question of centralisation.

It is to be hoped that Sir Robert Davies will publicly acknowledge the excellent services of Captain Grey, and will liberally reward Mr. Barns, Mr. Fanshawe, and the two native engineers, Hurree Singh and Roshun Dass.

Probably, in none of the numerous Departments of the Government of India is procrastination as well as extravagance more disastrous than in that of the Public Works. Mr. Clements Markham remarks, regarding irrigation in the Firozpur District:—

This great need has been constantly represented ever since Mr. Brandreth made his Settlement Report in 1852, but the Public Works Department has always had too much to do elsewhere. Captain Grey, therefore, determined to see whether the people, under their own headmen, could not execute the work themselves; and the question has been most satisfactorily solved.—P. 58.

For ten years the Department has delayed making the railroad from Karachi to Multan, on which the existence of our Empire depends; and yet Government has entrusted to it all petty works which were formerly executed by local committees, composed partly of Europeans and partly of natives, and presided over by the Chief Magistrate. The income is derived from Road and Ferry Funds, and from Acreage Cesses; as for the expenditure, let Parliament call for the accounts and calculate how much money is wasted.

Now, in these times, the Magistrate or the District Committee have no power of spending a farthing of the funds raised in the district; it is all made over to the Department of Public Works, who dole out something for repairs, but nothing for original works.

Formerly work was done, not faultless, perhaps, but still there was constant progress; now the original work done is neither faulty nor faultless. It is Nil.

In August, 1874, the floods of the great Ganges did much mischief. That river changed its course and set dead against one of the towns on its banks. One hundred and twenty-one houses were swept away and 114 more were wrecked. When the district authorities first reported the danger, and the necessity for protective works, the Department thought that they were exaggerating, so delay took place. When works were commenced they were too late to be efficacious.

On the 19th of September, 1874, your readers were reminded that the Department had been writing about the project of the Sirhind Canal for thirty-four years. The Imperial Government appears to be rather proud of this project, but can only devote one short sentence to it in the latest Blue-book. That sentence I have quoted at the head of this letter; can anything be more disappointing? Three millions sterling are to be expended on the works; three great Chiefs of the Sikh nation have been called upon to co-operate with money and men, and yet during a whole year the Imperial Government with unlimited resources cannot do more than Captain Grey has done without any assistance from Government.

It does not require an array of skilled and highly paid engineers to dig up sand and clay.

Permit me to suggest to the India Office authorities the only means by which the Sirhind Canal is likely ever to be completed under the British dynasty. Imitate the example of the Governor general who took the task of constructing the Ganges Canal out of the hands of the Department of Public Works and entrusted it to the Hon. J. Thomason, Lieut.-governor of the North-West Provinces. Mr. Thomason, instead of trying to force actual expenditure to fit into imperfect estimates (by which the process called cooking is encouraged) relied upon the honour of the Engineer officers employed. He required prompt submission of accounts of money disbursed and of work done, and warned officers that he would dismiss any one who might abuse the confidence of Government and bring discredit on the noble corps of Engineers.—Your obedient servant, T.

Rig-veda Sanhitá, the First and Second Adhyáyas of the First Ashtaka, with Notes and Explanations, and an Introductory Essay on the Study of the Vedas. By the Rev. K. M. Banerjea, Hon. Mem. R.A.S., &c., &c. Calcutta: Thacker, Spink, and Co. 1875.

The Rig-veda has met with a new commentator in the person of the Rev. K. M. Banerjea, already well known for his many useful works. This gentleman has published the first two chapters of the Rig-veda, with an English commentary, for the purpose of facilitating the study of these ancient monuments. The notes carefully analyse the text, and supply a closely literal translation; having all the difficult words parsed, and the Vedic peculiarities of grammar pointed out. An introductory essay on the Study of the Vedas is prefixed to the analysis, in which Mr. Banerjea shows how the Cuneiform Inscriptions may be made to illustrate some of the most obscure allusions of the Rig-veda. This essay is singularly interesting, and shows a large amount of reading and thought on the part of the learned author. Its main point is to show that the authors of the Rig-veda were familiar with Assyrian names and places; and certainly a large number of remarkable coincidences, if nothing more, have been brought forward. If further research confirms these speculations, we shall have to abandon the theory that Indra, Vritra, Sambara, &c., are personifications of meteoric phenomena; and shall have to regard them as myths of actual people who performed exploits, the legendary tradition of which alone remains. The novelty of this view gives special interest to the book; and the care with which precise references are supplied for all the statements shows that the author anticipates criticism.

The book will be of very great assistance to those, and we hope there are many, who wish to read the ancient Vedas in the original language. It is a work which, both in conception and execution, reflects much credit on Mr. Banerjea, and it is to be hoped that the success of the work will be such as to induce him to continue his analysis of the ancient texts.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE VISIT OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The Samachar, referring to the entire cordiality of the welcome accorded to the Prince of Wales throughout his Indian tour up to date, remarks that it had been the custom with some, before his Royal Highness set foot on Indian soil, to represent the native character as incapable of realising and manifesting those sentiments of loyalty and devotion which spontaneously burst forth from the crowds that assemble to welcome the progress of Royalty in Western lands. The event, as we all know, has falsified those malignant forebodings, and the traducers of her Majesty's Indian subjects must admit that never before had the Heir Apparent been welcomed in any part of his vast colonial empire with greater warmth of feeling and demonstration and under circumstances of more telling grandeur than during his travels in this Peninsula. While in our midst, such was the interest and enthusiasm excited by his presence in this city, that the populace forgot for a moment their food, their sleep, and their comforts to obtain the smallest chance of beholding him with their own eyes and giving him a fitting welcome in their own persons.

EDUCATION IN BENGAL.

The Friend of India holds that while we should seek to encourage a certain degree of pressure upwards from the lowest strata towards the highest, our great aim should be to gradually train up an intelligent peasantry acquainted with the rudiments of knowledge, and, to accomplish this aim, it is not desirable that every young rustic who is gifted with brains should be lifted by our scholarship ladder into the sublime heights of University graduateship. This is one of the points where we think Sir Richard Temple shows a somewhat inaccurate conception of the true value of elementary education. It is not in our opinion a drawback that students who, were they a little wealthier, would have a successful educational career before them, are often obliged to leave school without entering a university, and to leave college without taking a degree. We think it rather a matter for congratulation that the number of such youths who are educated a little above their rank in life without being lifted out of it, is probably on the increase, and may be expected to increase very considerably. They will help to leaven the masses of Bengal, and as they take their place among the men of the next generation may be expected to show a more intelligent interest in the education of their offspring than their own parents manifest in theirs. It is in this incidental manner that there now and then escapes from the Lieutenant-Governor an utterance which seems to indicate that, notwithstanding all his good service in the cause of mass education which we so thankfully acknowledge, he values elementary education only as a stepping stone to the higher education; that he looks upon the primary school simply as a feeder of the secondary, the secondary of middle, and so on through zillah schools and high schools, up to the B.A. classes in the colleges. We are not so anxious to see the higher college classes crowded with students who have risen from the primary schools. When boys do rise thus far by the force of merit and a little Government aid, it is matter for rejoicing, and it is an excellent feature in our education system that it gives an opportunity of so rising. But we can well afford to wait for an increase in the number of graduates more patiently than Sir Richard is waiting, provided we are assured that the numbers on the lower stages of the ladder are gradually increasing, and that the pressure is constantly upwards. But for the consideration of those who would discountenance the higher education we may quote the following from his Honour's Resolution:—"It may perhaps be supposed by some, who observe the great attention given in Bengal to the subject, that high education has embraced large sections of the people. Such, however, is not the case. The number of persons undergoing a nominally high education is quite small, and the number of those whose education could be truly called high is smaller still. However much we may strive to diffuse a certain degree of education among the masses, we must at the same time endeavour to present, in the persons of highly educated youth, more and more examples of what can be accomplished by mental and moral training. It is therefore important that a fair share of the State funds should continue to be devoted to this most important object." Quite true, so far, but the admission immediately follows, that, as matters stand at present, more individuals obtain a University education than can elbow their way up the avenues that lead to employment. And while such is the case we think Sir Richard may moderate his anxiety to see the B.A. classes filled, and remember that education up to a much lower standard may be at present of greater service to the mass of the people.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

The Bombay Gazette remarks that the paragraph of the Speech relating to India contains the important announcement that the Queen will ask Parliament to confer upon her a formal addition to her style and titles, setting forth her rank as the greatest of Asiatic Sovereigns. We suppose the addition will take the now familiar form, "Empress of India," and probably the formal assumption of this title will be regarded as reasonable by the people of this country, and even taken as a compliment paid to themselves. We confess, however, that we do not like the change, and we doubt if it will not provoke fierce remonstrance in England. A free people have a natural and justifiable dislike to the name of Emperor; and very many Englishmen, while content to accept the English occupation of India as a fact, will object most strongly to any proposal to assume that that occupation must be permanent, and to proclaim the conversion of the Queen of England into an Oriental despot. There could be no better legend for the rupee than the simple words "Victoria Queen," and there is no grander or more glorious title in all history than that of Queen of England. Why, then, change it? The name of Empress substituted for that of Queen may gratify the Oriental love of fine titles, but it will not add to the real power of the Government. It will simply show that the English conquerors of India have lost their native strength, and are beginning, like the Moslems before them, to become quite Indianised. We believe that the formal record of her Majesty's titles now runs in this form:—"Victoria, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the Colonies and Dependencies thereof in Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and Australasia, Queen, Defender of the Faith; and surely this enumeration of earthly dignities is comprehensive enough to satisfy any ambition. Make her Majesty Empress of India, and we shall immediately have a host of uncomfortable questions about special titles raised by the various Colonies. It is a pity to disturb a settlement that gives no offence for the sake of a little ostentation.

The Madras Times observes that the only news contained in the Speech relates to India. Her Majesty the Queen, we understand from the announcement in the speech, intends formally to assume that title of Empress of Hindustan that has been popularly awarded to her in recognition of the fact that she does, in truth, exercise undisputed imperial sway over this great Peninsula. These are not days when great sovereigns are very solicitous about their titles. They are days in which the possessors of millions of money are content to be called Mister, and to wear a coat no better than that worn by a respectable clerk, and so are greatly different from those days of gold-laced clothes and diamond buttons, when a man's wealth and dignity could always be inferred from his garments. Two-hundred and fifty years ago, when the "Most High and Mighty Prince James" called himself King of France, as well as King of Great Britain and Ireland, although the English had long ceased to possess any power or authority in France, so glorious and substantial a dignity as that of Emperor of India would not long have remained out of the roll of princely titles. But in this case the dignity and authority have been possessed for twenty years without any formal addition being made to the style and titles of the sovereign. It cannot, therefore, be said that the Royal House of England has been in any hurry to enhance its titular glories by importations from the East, and we think that it will gratify the people of this country to find that the Queen now thinks fit to ask for a title that will formally identify her with her Eastern Empire. It will be a sort of political marriage ceremony between England and India; and it will tend, in some degree, to promote a sense of identity of interests between the countries. It is but natural that a pleasant interpretation should be put upon the demonstrations of respect that have been made in honour of the Prince of Wales's visit to India; but it might prove injurious were the Home Government to hold too decidedly that those demonstrations prove conclusively that "all classes and races" are happy and loyal under British rule. In one sense this is true enough. The condition of the people under British rule is far better than ever it was under the most enlightened native ruler, and we dare say that, whenever they think of their material interests, they are truly loyal to the British Government. But the natives of India are frequently as much governed by sentiment (often perverted) as by reason, and it would be a mistake to suppose that the level justice and quietly effective administration of the British greatly excite their affections.

Bengal, Upper India, &c.

THE ASIATIC SOCIETY.

At the last meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Dr. T. Oldham, President, in the Chair.

The Secretary read a letter from the Right Hon. Sir Bartle Frere stating that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales had directed a copy of the Mahabashya to be forwarded for presentation to the Society, with the hope that the Society would accept the book as a souvenir of his visit, and as a mark of his Royal Highness's high estimation of the great work the Society has done, and is doing, in promoting the study of all the important subjects to which the labours of the Society and its members have been for so many years directed.

The President drew the attention of members to this valuable and splendid work, consisting of six large volumes of photolithographed fac-similes of the Sanskrit text, and proposed that the special thanks of the meeting should be given to his Royal Highness for the consideration he had shown in presenting the Society with this important and rare work. The proposal was carried with acclamation. Colonel J. F. Tennant, R.E., and Mr. R. B. Shaw were elected ordinary members of the Society.

Mr. Blochmann read extracts from an account of the Mewar Bhils, by Dr. T. H. Hendley, Residency Surgeon, Jaipur, Rajputana, who gives a description of those members of the Bhil race who reside in the Hill Tracts of the Mewar (Uaidup), where they have perhaps best preserved their individuality. In the chapter on the religion of the Bhils Dr. Hendley notices the cairns or sthans, which are erected on the summits of high hills, and the curious reverence of the people for the horse which, as Sir J. Malcolm says, the Bhils worship and do not mount. Then follows a description of the customs observed at births, marriages, and deaths; of the government, and the agriculture of the tribe, and statistical tables containing race measurements. The Bhil skull is slightly dolico-cephalic, and differs very much from the long thin-walled cranium of the pure Hindu. The chapter on language contains an outline of Bhil grammar, a vocabulary, and a list of proper names, and the paper ends with specimens of Bhil songs.

Mr. Blochmann also read extracts from a paper by Mr. J. A. Smith, B.A., C.S., on the popular songs of the Hamipur District, N.W.P. This paper contains specimens of songs sung in Bundalkhand in honour of Hardal, a son of the notorious Bir Singh Deo Bundila, Rajah of Urcha, who was poisoned by his brother Jhajhar Sing. His ghost is worshipped in every village, and chiefly at weddings in Baisakh. Hardal is also propitiated with songs when storms appear.

Miscellaneous.

MUHAMMADAN MARRIAGES.—The Act for Voluntary Registration of Muhammadan Marriages is to come into force in the districts of Dhákā, Maimensingh, Bâkarganj, Rangpur, Bogra, and Chittagong on the 15th February.

DEATH OF MR. DOUGLAS.—A Mr. Douglas, attached to the office of the Thomason College, is reported to have deliberately committed suicide, on the evening of the 8th Feb., by taking a dose of cyanide of potassium. He has left a widow and two infant children destitute.

ACTS OF GALLANTRY.—A correspondent with the Perak expedition refers to "two blue jackets" deserving gold medals at the unfortunate affair of Kotha Lama, for having saved Surgeon Townsend's life. Their names are Harry Bennet, A.B., and William Thomson, A.B. There is a third able seaman, William Sloper, equally meriting distinction for his gallantry in defending Major Hawkins, already down, against the Malays, two of whom he shot.

A NEW WEEKLY.—Mr. H. W. Stainforth is about to start in Calcutta a new weekly paper to supply the place of the late Indian Observer, and to be called the True Reformer. He says that he has obtained the assistance of the contributors to the Observer, and he himself will edit the paper. The Reformer is likely to be a formidable opponent to the Friend of India, which has become very ancient and venerable lately.

THE FIREWORKS AT AMRITSAR.—We see it stated that the festivities and merry-makings on the occasion of the Prince's visit to the Punjab were marred by universal dissatisfaction amongst the Sikhs, caused by the discharge of fireworks from the temple at Amritsar, which was considered an act of sacrilege. It is also complained that Europeans approached the golden temple with their shoes on. The local authorities must be somewhat deficient in tact.

THE CHIEF COMMISSIONER'S KHANSAMAH AND THE PRINCE.—The Lucknow paper states that an old khansamah of the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, having been favourably spoken of and recommended to the Prince of Wales, was presented by his Royal Highness with a pair of shawls, a gold medal, and a watch. His Royal Highness is said to have also presented Rs. 500 in cash for distribution among the menial establishment of the Chief Commissioner.—Madras Times.

THE RESIDENT IN NEPAL.—We understand that Mr. Girdlestone, the Resident in Nepal, goes home for three months' privilege leave in the spring. Dr. Bellew will probably officiate as Resident during Mr. Girdlestone's absence, and we shall doubtless soon receive from his untiring pen a complete history of Nepal and the Nepalese, their past, present, and future. Dr. Bellew's mission in life seems to be that of recording very dry facts about very out-of-the-way people; but his contributions to the knowledge of the world are none the less valuable because they are not always put in a popular shape.

WEATHER AND CROPS.—The Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 10th February, 1876, that no rain is reported to have fallen during the week except a slight shower at Peshawar. No improvement is announced in prospects in Madras or Mysore. In Bombay the rabi harvest continues, and prospects are fair. Reports are good from the Central Provinces, Central India, Rajputana, and Berar. In Bengal the spring crops are progressing favourably, but require rain. In the North-Western Provinces rain is wanted in Rohilkhund and Meerut. In the Punjab more rain would be beneficial. Rain is also required in Assam.

THE SINDIA STATE RAILWAY.—Messrs. Glover and Co., contractors, of Bombay, have received a telegram from the Government of India informing them that their tender for the works of the Sindia State Railway has been accepted. The contract amounts to about 50 lakhs (half million sterling) and is for a broad gauge line, 75 miles in length, from Agra to Gwalior. Among other heavy works it includes a viaduct across the river Chambal, consisting of fourteen spans of 200 feet each, the piers being about 115 feet high. The river rises during the monsoon as much as 90 feet. Mr. Glover proceeds to Agra in the course of a day or two, to make arrangements to start the work at once.—Bombay Gazette, Feb. 21.

A NEW SOCIAL MOVEMENT.—Hindoo society, tottering under the blows of science, has at last bethought it of rescuing from fate so much of its social conservatism as may not be inseparably linked with superstition, and involved in a common ruin. A notice which we have been publishing invites orthodox Hindoos to meet together for the purpose of "adopting such resolutions as may be considered advisable for the protection of old Hindoo manners and customs" of the country; and thus far, no reason is apparent why good should not flow out of the gathering. The torrent of civilisation is of course resistless in a certain sense—that is to say, it, by a law of nature, sweeps away everything that opposes it; but the frail stems which stand in a rush of waters that wash away everything larger, may not inaptly represent some good customs and manners which it may be very desirable to preserve. So far as Hindoo society is hopelessly intertwined with religion, its chances of a survival in the struggle for existence are no doubt few; but whatever the views of the authors of the present movement may be, it appears to us that there is much in the simplicity of Eastern manners which might with advantage be preserved from the contamination of civilised "reserves;" and if the society which it is proposed to form should direct itself to a task of this kind, it may, one day, suddenly find itself famous in history. —Indian Daily News.

NARROW ESCAPE OF MR. EASTWICK.—A correspondent from Lahor says :—"On Thursday last Mr. Eastwick, in company with Kamru'd-din, nephew of Azizu'd-din and Motee Lal Pundit, our Assistant-Commissioner, examined the fort, and made copies of many of the inscriptions. When their work was finished, the party having entered a carriage, were driving off, when the horses took fright and ran down the steep descent that leads to the Roshenai Gate, dashed against the opposite archway, and upsetting the carriage, smashed it to pieces. Luckily all the gentlemen escaped without broken limbs. Both Mr. Eastwick and Azizu'd-din were considerably bruised and shaken, but they are not believed to be seriously hurt.—Delhi Gazette, Feb. 11.

A NEW CENSUS FOR CALCUTTA.—The proposal to take a new census of the city, which was strongly opposed by some justices at the previous meeting, was on Wednesday agreed to, as we think it ought to have been. On the former occasion the Chairman supported the proposition by convincing reasons. He said among other things :—"Upon accurate figures depends all statistical information of any value, and it is only with such figures before us that we can decide properly upon the sanitary arrangements which have been, or will have to be, carried out. They had many pressing questions to consider, and among others was the important questions of the bustees. If they possessed a correct census, prepared in the manner in which it was proposed to take this one, it would enable them to know the death-rate, and where remedial measures should be carried out."—Friend of India, Feb. 11.

THE KASHMIR HANDBOOK.—We welcome a third edition of Dr. Ince's excellent Guide to Cashmere. The plan of the work remains much the same as in the earlier editions, but a recent trip of the author's to the Happy Valley has enabled him to make many alterations and additions which bring the information it gives down to the latest dates, and thus double its usefulness to the tourist. Intending travellers will find within it ample details respecting the authorised routes from British territory to Cashmere, and a description of that beautiful country itself, with its various places and objects of interest. The rules to be observed by visitors during their stay are not forgotten, and a well-executed map, on the scale of four miles to an inch, faces the title-page. The steady annual increase in the number of visitors to this fairest of Indian provinces will doubtless secure for this edition of Dr. Ince's work a rapid sale.—Friend of India.

A NEW PAPER.—We have received the second number of The Aryan. The most noticeable article is one by a native convert on "Faith and Practice as Viewed by the Hindoo Mind," which endeavours to explain the singular inconsistency between the practice and profession of Hindoos, who nevertheless see no guilt in such inconsistency. The opening article, on the Prince of Wales's tour, is illustrated by a wood-cut representing a family group of the Prince, the Princess, and four of their children. The conductors of the paper are actuated by the noblest motives, and have brought to their task ability and judgment, but their task is a very difficult one. They deserve the generous support of all who desire to establish friendly relations and a mutual good understanding between Englishmen and natives, to enable them to make the serial not only substantially good, as it promises to be, but attractive enough to give it the degree of popularity which it must have in order to fulfil its mission.

DEATH OF AN OUDH PRINCESS.—The Lucknow paper records the death, from consumption, of Shahanshah Mahal, one of the wives of Wajid Ali Shah, ex-King of Oudh. She is supposed to have been the wealthiest of the thousand charming inmates of the royal zenana of Lucknow, and was the lawful wife of Wajid Ali Shah on a Mota of fifty years. After the mutiny she privately married her daroga ; and, renouncing him and the private ceremony, some five years ago she took up with a nephew of Nawab Sir Mohsinuddaula, and contracted a nika marriage with him. She has died without issue. It is said that she has left a million sterling worth of property, to which there is no legal heir ; it must therefore either go to her former and lawful husband, the ex-King, or lapse to the Government. The matter is likely to become the subject of litigation, and, if so, the case will prove a very interesting one. The property is under the protection of the police.

NARROW ESCAPE OF THE PRINCE.—A correspondent at Agra writes to the Railway Service Gazette the following account of a narrow escape of the Prince of Wales, of which we have heard nothing previously :—"The Prince narrowly escaped being thrown down a dangerous khud on his journey to Gwalior. The carriage was drawn by four artillery horses, the leaders shied at something and swerved, and were dragging the carriage to the edge of the khud, and in a few minutes more horses, carriage, and riders would have been rolled over. The artilleryman who rode one of the shaft horses, with great presence of mind, dug his spurs into his horse's side and, by sheer strength of arm, turned the horse's head in the right direction ; the impetus was so great that the two fractious leaders were literally dragged away from the direction of the khud, and the hind wheels of the carriage just shaved the edge of it, and the inmates were saved. I understand that his Royal Highness is fully aware of the danger he escaped, and he has shown his gratitude to the artilleryman by a present, and there can be no doubt that the Commander-in-Chief will also, in some way or other, reward the man for his courage and cool presence of mind."

DEATH of MR. W. G. WILLSON.—The Englishman regrets to have to record the sudden death of Mr. W. G. Willson, Professor of Natural Science in the Presidency College, and Meteorological Reporter to the Government of Bengal. Mr. Willson had been laid up with an attack of fever for a few days at the end of last, and at the beginning of the present, week. On Tuesday morning serious complications of the lungs and heart manifested themselves, under which he sank rapidly and died about midnight. Mr. Willson, who took a high degree in Mathematics at Dublin University, had been a member of the Educational Service for upwards of six years, during which time he was attached, first, to the Kishnagarh College, and subsequently, for the last three years, to the Presidency College. In May, 1874, he was appointed Officiating Meteorological Reporter to the Government of Bengal, and a few days before his death he was confirmed in that office. He also acted for some months as Registrar of the Calcutta University during the absence on leave of Mr. Sutcliffe. Mr. Willson's high mathematical and scientific attainments rendered him eminently qualified for the appointments he held. His report on the Midnapur and Bardwan cyclone of the 15th of October, 1874, was spoken of in terms of the highest praise by the Lieutenant-Governor, in a resolution published in the Supplement to the Calcutta Gazette of the 9th June, 1875, and it received the especial thanks of the Government. His death leaves a gap in the Educational Department which it will be no easy matter to fill ; while by his friends—and they were many in India—his loss will be heavily felt.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN GRAVES.—Captain J. H. Graves, Master Attendant at Kochin, died suddenly of apoplexy in Madras, where he was on leave the first week in February.

CHOLERA IN THE 76TH FOOT.—Cholera has broken out in the 76th Regiment stationed at Sikandrabad; three cases occurred on the 13th and 14th Feb. It is confidently expected that the progress of the disease will be arrested.

SECRETARIAT.—We understand that Colonel Michael has been appointed Secretary to the Government of Madras in the Military Department, in succession to Colonel Silver. This will surprise the friends of Colonel Scott Elliot, who was supposed to be the favoured candidate for the appointment.

SICKNESS AT MADRAS.—We have to report still more unfavourably this week regarding the public health. Cholera has been making further inroads in the town, and the death-returns received by the Municipal authorities from the several districts of the town show that there were no less than twenty-one fatal cases from this cause in a single day, last Tuesday, and many cases are daily reported. Indeed, the state of the public health at present is causing considerable anxiety. To add to the anxiety which the prevalence of cholera is occasioning, another epidemic has made its appearance, though as yet in a mild form, viz., an outbreak of small-pox, and several cases are reported.—Madras Times, Feb. 19.

IN MEMORIAM.—We learn from the Bangalor Spectator that the monument "erected to the memory of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates of the 16th Queen's Lancers, who died while serving their country in the East Indies between the years 1865 75," has been completed. It is an ornamental structure of granite and marble, standing opposite to the entrance to the new Protestant Cemetery. It is colossal in size, and on each of the four sides a brass plate is encased bearing the flags of the regiment and the letters "16th Lancers." A little below this, and on its four sides, a highly polished marble slab is imbedded, containing eighty-six names in all, ranging from private to captain, the dates of the decease of each being given opposite the name. Among the officers are the names of those of Captains W. P. Bagnal, T. Dynon, and C. A. Agnew.

THE MOVEMENTS OF THE GOVERNOR.—The chief event of the week has been the departure of the Governor to Calcutta. His Grace embarked last Sunday evening on board the steamer, the Duke of Sutherland, for that port, accompanied by Lady Anna Gore Langton, Captain Hankin, Colonel Michael, and Captain Aylmer. Several gentlemen were present on the pier to see him off, among them being our new Commander-in-Chief, Sir Neville Chamberlain, Sir William Robinson, the Hon. W. Huddleston, the Hon. D. Carmichael, Brigadier-General Raikes, and Major-General Walker; Captain Taylor, the Master Attendant, accompanying his Grace to the steamer. His Grace arrived at Calcutta on Thursday morning, landing at Prinsep's Ghat in the Viceroy's barge, and being received by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, Colonel Earl, the Military Secretary to the Viceroy, and other officials, with a guard of honour furnished by a native regiment. The party drove to Government House, escorted by the Viceroy's Body Guard, and were received at Government House by a guard of honour formed by the 12th Regiment, the usual salute being fired on the occasion. The main object of this visit of his Grace to Calcutta is said to be to see Lord Northbrook before his departure from India, but it is believed that there is also another object, and that is to take part in a consultation that is now being held in Calcutta regarding a re-organisation of the Native Army.—Madras Times, Feb. 19.

THE GOVERNOR'S RECEPTION.—The Governor's first annual reception in honour of the Queen's birth-day took place in the Banqueting Hall, and included Europeans, East Indians, and natives. His Grace, accompanied by the Lady Mary Grenville, and other members of his family, took his seat on the dais. His Grace made an occasional tour of the room, and in a frank, pleasant manner, shook hands with, and welcomed his guests. The scene was a gay and varied one. Officers in their handsome uniforms and ladies in their various coloured costumes, contributed to a brilliant coup d'œil. The Duke of Buckingham, the Governor of Malacca, and Captain Hankin, were in full Court dress or a blue cloth coat, embroidered with gold lace, white breeches, white silk stockings; shoes with buckles, cocked hat with a fringe of ostrich feathers, and sword. There was a pretty good attendance of native gentlemen, and among them a Burmese official of the Government of India now employed in Madras, accompanied by his wife, both dressed in their national costumes. This was, we believe, the first occasion of any Burmese subjects of her Majesty appearing as guests at the Banqueting Hall. The Governor's band played during the evening some rather too severely classical pieces, and anything like dance music was carefully avoided, probably as being too tantalising. At eleven o'clock there was a general movement to witness the fireworks, which had been arranged on the opposite bank of the river Cooum, and were seen to advantage through the avenue of trees from the north end of the Hall.

FAREWELL DINNER TO MR. SCOBLE.—The Hon. R. Scoble has accepted the invitation of the practising members of the Bar to a farewell dinner to be held at Mr. Marriott's bungalow on Saturday, the 26th February. Mr. Scoble leaves for England on the following Monday.

WRECK OF A BOMBAY SHIP.—The Bombay Arab ship Fathi Salam, 800 tons, from Calcutta, with a cargo of rice and fifty passengers for Jeddah, became a total wreck on the 13th of February, on the south coast of Ceylon. Twenty persons were landed, and the rest are missing.

DEATH OF COLONEL M. W. PARKER.—Lieutenant Colonel Montagu William Parker, of the Bombay Staff Corps, died at the European General Hospital, Bombay, of confluent small-pox, on Thursday afternoon, February 17. He was buried at the Sisri Cemetery on Friday morning. The deceased officer entered the army on the 11th December, 1849, was made a lieutenant in 1856, captain December, 1861, major 1869, and lieutenant colonel on the 11th December, 1875.

A SUCCESSFUL PILGRIMAGE TO MECCA.—Another European, Mr. Alfred H. Browne, has just returned to Bombay, after having successfully accomplished the pilgrimage to Mecca. It is rather a curious fact that Captain Burton, the first Christian who ever went on the pilgrimage, arrived in Bombay only a few days before. Mr. Browne, we understand, intends to publish an account of his pilgrimage.

THE SECRETARYSHIP OF THE BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—We regret to hear that a telegram was received in Bombay on Friday week last, announcing the sudden death of Mr. J. A. Baynes, the well-known and very able Secretary to the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway. The vacant post in London has been offered to and accepted by Mr. Currey, the Agent for the Railway in Bombay, who will at once hand over charge of the Agency to Mr. Matthew and go home to take up his new appointment. We congratulate Mr. Currey on his promotion. He will not only, in future, enjoy the advantage of having his salary paid in sterling instead of rupees, but he will escape from the clutches of the Government of India, who, at the dictation of General Sam Browne, have treated him with such cruelty and meanness lately.—Bombay Gazette, Feb. 21.

THE JAM OF LAS BAILA.—A memorial is about being submitted to the Bombay Government by the chieftains and people of Las Baila praying for the release of the ex-Jam of Las Baila and his restoration to his native country. The Jam has now been an exile for about six years, and the reason for keeping him a State prisoner is not so apparent. The Jam sought an asylum in British territory, and, in violation of the rites of hospitality, he was deported and sent to the Deccan. The treatment accorded to the Jam by our Government was disgraceful, and the motive prompting it altogether a mistaken one. The condition of Beluchistan has been rendered worse since the Jam left the country, and his deportation was, therefore, a false measure entirely, conceived as it was in utter ignorance of the causes in operation in producing the chaos of demoralisation that prevailed in it.—Sind News, Feb. 7.

KHELAT AFFAIRS.—The Sindian furnishes us with the following news from Khelat :—"Beluchistan would, from all accounts, appear to be in a disturbed state, and lawlessness to be exceedingly rife in it. On Gower Khan, the nephew of the late Nurdin Mengal, who was killed recently in a skirmish, being made acquainted with the death of his uncle, he attacked a village in which there were a number of mares, and a large quantity of grain belonging to the Khan of Khelat ; the people in charge of the property were put to the sword, and the property was carried away. The rumour in the town of Karachi is that the safety of the Khan is threatened, and that there will before long be a general rising against him. The Pathan traders here have received warning against sending their goods to Khorasan, as the caravan routes are very unsafe."—There are two sides to every story, and we hear of a new version of the "murder" of Sirdar Nurudeen at Khelat, which places the conduct of the Khan in a less unfavourable light than the version which represents his Highness as having put the Sirdar to death out of mere brutal wantonness, and to show his contempt for the British Government, which was supposed to be anxious to protect the Sirdars. The death of Nurudeen is now alleged to have been the result of his own intrigues against the Khan's Government. This Sirdar and certain of the Khan's officials had conspired to destroy the Khan and subvert his Government. They were to have put the Khan to death on the Eed, but his Highness got news of what was meditated, and the day before the Eed he attacked the conspirators, and killed Nurudeen and others. The affair can have had nothing, therefore, to do with Major Sandeman's mission to Khelat, and it seems unlikely that the Government of India can intend to take definitely the part of either the Khan or the Sirdars in a country which is the scene of such intrigues and violence. The Khan, too, is said to have been behaving himself better lately. He is trying to keep open the trade routes, and has sent, it is said, an armed expedition to coerce the Jhalawur Chief, Gour Khan, and to open the Mulla Pass. The Jhalawur faction, including the Jam of Lus Beyla's son, has been acting and negotiating directly with the Khan, and not in concert with the Teronan Sirdars.—Bombay Gazette.

"A MONSTER BLUE SAPPHIRE," says a Ratnapura (Ceylon) correspondent, "was bought by Idrus Lebbe Sego Lebbe for £300 from a party of Singhalese gem diggers. It weighs five pagodas, and is well shaped and flawless, bearing the best colour. Such a stone was never seen here before, and it is now valued at upwards of a thousand pounds sterling. The fortunate purchaser of this peerless gem started for Colombo by coach, intending to sell it there or in Galle."

THE WRECK OF THE "GENOA."—A correspondent of the Ceylon Times, writing on January 19th from Galle, gives the following additional particulars about the Genoa, which will be read with interest :—"The Italian steamer Genoa, bound from Calcutta to Marseilles with a cargo of rice, indigo, and other goods, was sighted yesterday afternoon. In passing by the port it was observed that she was apparently taking the same course as the ill-fated Arcturus, being in dangerous proximity to the shore. She was accordingly signalled to keep farther off, but before many minutes had elapsed the worst fears of those on shore were realised, as she went right on the Whale reef. This was at half-past five, and in response to the signals of distress several boats put off, and Mr. Blythe, the Master Attendant, proceeded on board without delay. A strict watch was kept on the native boats which surrounded the vessel, and during the night eight boat-loads of cargo were discharged. A portion of the crew landed last night. The captain, chief officer, and the remaining crew came on shore to-day. At seven this morning, the Trinity House steamer proceeded to the scene of the disaster, but returned at nine o'clock, as there was no possibility of rescuing the steamer from her fatal position. At the time of writing she is fast breaking up, only the masts and bow being visible above water. During the day strenuous endeavours have been made to save as much as possible of the cargo, but it is feared that only a small portion will be recovered. The sea has been very calm, both yesterday and to-day.

THIBET.

The theatre of the London Institution was well filled on the evening of March 2, on the occasion of a lecture on Thibet, by Mr. C. R. Markham, C.B., F.R.S. The subject was introduced by some remarks on the relations between cold regions of great elevation and the subjacent lowlands. On the American continent there was Peru, with the Amazon valley at its feet, and the most helpful mutual intercourse had always subsisted between the two. Such also, in spite of the Himalayas, with but few and formidable passes, was meant to be the friendly alliance of reciprocally advantageous commerce between the snowy plateau of Thibet and the parched plains of Bengal; and such in former times it had been. The fact that so many centuries ago Buddhism had penetrated from India to the Thibetan tableland, where it was now so firmly rooted, was the most decisive proof that anciently the great rampart of the Himalayas had not kept Thibet and India asunder. Hence the present barrier between them was not the natural one, but artificial, and Mr. Markham proceeded to show how it had been raised in comparatively modern times, and the necessity for its removal. Premised was a graphic description of Thibet, and of the passes into it, especially the Kuti or Nilan pass which connected it with Nepaul. This appalling passage, which equals in horror anything to be met with in the Andes, is only eighteen inches wide, a third of a mile long, and 1,500 ft. above the roaring torrent. But great though the physical difficulties of intercourse may be, they could easily be overcome by human energy and perseverance. Even the practicability of a railway was confidently spoken of. But the barbarous policy of men had created a moral obstruction far harder to deal with. The Thibetans had embraced the later Buddhist tenet, that the incarnate Buddhisatvas continue to exist for the good of mankind by passing through a succession of human beings from the cradle to the grave. The succession of perpetual incarnations, in the form of the Dalai Lami and the Teshu Lama, two two sacred personages of equal rank, began about the middle of the 15th century. Their monasteries, inhabited by thousands of holy ascetics, sprang up in every part of Thibet, especially at Lhasa, the chief town and centre of trade; and peace and toleration were the leading maxims of the Rulers. Unfortunately, the mild manners of the people, however beautiful, made them an easy prey to foreign invasion. Still, so far as any evidence exists, there was for centuries freedom of access between India and Thibet, and the incarnate Lamas encouraged trade and intercourse with neighbouring countries. On the southern slopes of the Himalaya there are tribes of kindred race in Nepaul, Bhutan, &c., who had also embraced Buddhism, and in Nepaul a native dynasty flourished for some centuries, which encouraged the arts, agriculture, and commerce. In the time of these Kings a thriving trade was carried on between Thibet and the plains of India. It is to this state of things that it should be the constant and vigilant endeavour of the rulers of India to return. It was only in the last century that the doors of communication were closed, as they still are, and this by two events —the first was the establishment of Chinese influence in Thibet, and the second was the overthrow of the Newar dynasty in Nepaul by the turbulent and warlike Ghoorkas in 1759, who still hold the supreme power to the destruction of commerce and the hindrance of all progress. The history of these two events was briefly sketched, with some interesting details, which were greeted with cheers. The Chinese Emperors 150 years ago established two Political Residents, called Ambas, at Lhasa, who gradually put a stop to all foreign intercourse. This Chinese exclusiveness the revolution in Nepaul eventually tended to strengthen, by cutting off the former commercial ties between that kingdom and Thibet. But there is the clearest evidence that this stoppage of intercourse with foreigners is distasteful to the Thibetans themselves. To show this Mr. Markham recapitulated the efforts made by Warren Hastings from 1772 to 1784 to reopen friendly communications between India and Thibet. A most interesting account was given of George Bogle's mission to the Teshu Lama in 1774. Mr. Markham has recently published an edition of Bogle's account of this mission. Bogle was the first Englishman who ever saw that spiritual potentate, with whose nephews and nieces he corresponded for years, as well as with his Holiness himself. A letter from the Grand Lama to Bogle was shown, and excited much interest. Bogle's death and Chinese interference put an end to the project. Captain Turner's mission in 1784 was also spoken of as well as the plan of Colonels Walker and Montgomery in our own days, for exploring Thibet by means of trained Indian pundits, disguised as Buddhist pilgrims.

Miscellaneous.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND THE NEW VICEROY.—Final arrangements have been made for the meeting of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales with the new Viceroy of India at Suez, where the Ormtes will await the arrival of the Serapis. Lord Lytton will then proceed to Bombay, where he will find the admiral in command of the East India squadron ready to receive him with the customary honours. Lord and Lady Lytton have left Paris for Naples and Brindisi, where they will embark for Alexandria.

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.—Lord Salisbury will draw attention in the House of Lords to the selection of candidates for the Indian Civil Service, March 17.

EXPORTS OF BULLION.—The Khedive took on Thursday £228,729, the whole of which was in silver, for India and China, excepting £41 in gold for Galle. Bar silver was much in request in the market last week, and the price advanced to 53⅛d. to 53¼d. per ounce.

THE CHANNEL PASSAGE.—We understand a new steamship on the twin principle is being constructed by Messrs. A. Leslie and Co., on the Tyne, for the English Channel Steamship Company (Limited). She is guaranteed to attain a speed of fourteen knots per hour, and is expected to be ready by October next. The Castalia will resume the service between Dover and Calais in the course of a few weeks.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—(DOWNING-STREET, March 9.)—The Queen has been pleased to appoint John Douglas, Esq., C.M.G., to be Colonial Secretary of the Straits Settlements.—(ADMIRALTY, March 9.)—The following promotions in her Majesty's Fleet have this day been made for services rendered during recent operations against Malays in the Straits of Malacca:—Commander F. Stirling to be captain in her Majesty's Fleet; Lieut. H. T. Wright to be commander; Sub-Lieutenants R. Poore and W. T. Warren to be lieutenants; Surgeon A. Gorham, M.D., will be promoted to the rank of staff surgeon, with seniority of this date, subject to his passing the qualifying examination; H. Thompson, A.B., H. Bonnett, A.B., and D. Sloper, A.B., will be awarded the medal for "conspicuous gallantry." The name of Lieutenant Robert Thomas Wood has been favourably noted for his services in the same operations.

INDIAN MISSIONS.—Towards the Winchester Diocesan Indian Missionary Bishopric Fund, £6,316, out of the £10,000 sought, has been already subscribed. At a meeting of the committee, recently held at the house of Sir Waltar Farquhar, in London, and under the presidency of the Bishop of Winchester, the following resolutions were carried:—"That the Missionary Bishop to be consecrated be appointed to a district situated without the jurisdiction of the Act of 1833, and that he be independent within his district, subject only to the Metropolitan of India." "That the Bishop of Winchester be requested to communicate with the Bishop of Calcutta, and others interested in Indian Missions, and to lay a scheme, in accordance with the foregoing resolution, before a future meeting of the committee." The expected arrival of the Bishop of Calcutta, and of others of high authority in Indian matters, in the course of the summer makes it important that the whole sum of £10,000 should be subscribed and ready. With the advantage of their counsel, nothing would be wanted for the completion of the scheme but that decision as to the district to be assigned, which the Primate, the Bishop of Winchester, and the committee of the fund would then be able to make.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, March 6.—INDIAN PAPERS.—The Duke of ARGYLL said that in a recent correspondence between his noble friend the Secretary for India and the Viceroy the noble Marquis referred to a despatch which he, when Secretary for India, addressed to Lord Mayo, then Governor-General, on the subject of the relations between the Home Government and the Government of India. He begged to move for that despatch.—The Marquis of SALISBURY said there was no objection to its production.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, March 6.—THE SUEZ CANAL.—Sir H. WOLFF gave notice that, on going into Committee of Supply on the 17th inst., he would move a humble Address be presented to her Majesty praying that her Majesty may be graciously pleased to take such steps as may enable her Majesty, in concert with her Allies, and with due regard to the rights of the Sublime Porte and of the Khedive of Egypt, and to the interests of the shareholders of the Suez Canal Company, to place the neutrality, control, and navigation of the Suez Canal under the provisions and guarantees of public international law.

ARMY ESTIMATES.—On the motion for going into Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates—Sir W. LAWSON, seconded by Mr. RICHARDS, moved as an amendment a resolution declaring that the interests of the nation do not demand an increased expenditure on the Land Forces. He repeated the question which, as he said, he had so often put to successive Ministers—What is the Army for? Admitting that economy was most unpopular, he appealed to the front Opposition Bench to support his motion, if only to show that there was something on which they differed from the other side.—Mr. HOLMS made some observations on the details of the Estimates; and Mr. HARDY replied to Sir W. Lawson that the Army was intended for the defence of India, of our colonies, and of our own country, and also for offence whenever it was required. Much of the expenditure, he pointed out, was intended to prevent panics and to form a basis for future improvements.—On a division, the resolution was negatived by 192 to 63, and the House went into Committee of Supply.—The usual discursive debate on the first vote, and the amendment to it proposed by Mr. PEASE on Thursday night—that the Army be reduced by 10,000 men—was pursued for some time.—Mr. ANDERSON, though he approved generally Mr. Hardy's proposals, thought all requirements might have been met without increasing the Estimates or the number of men.—Sir A. GORDON pointed out defects in the Mobilisation scheme.—Sir G. CAMPBELL returned again to the subject of Indian reliefs.—Colonel KENNARD recommended that the Army, like the Navy, should obtain recruits by training boys, and Mr. DUNBAR criticised Mr. Hardy's mode of dealing with the Medical Service.—Lord ELCHO, Colonel NORTH, Mr. MUNTZ, Sir G. BALFOUR, and Mr. SHAW LEFEVRE also spoke, and, after a comprehensive speeeh from Mr. HARDY, Mr. PEASE withdrew his amendment, and the first vote was agreed to.—Several other votes were agreed to, and at that for the Militia the Committee was adjourned.

COUNCIL OF INDIA PROFESSIONAL APPOINTMENTS BILL.—The Council of India (Professional Appointments) Bill passed through Committee.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, March 7.—INDIAN TARIFFS.—Mr. FAWCETT gave notice that he intended to call attention to the subject of Indian tariffs.

ARTILLERY OFFICERS.—In reply to Mr. W. HOLMS, Lord George HAMILTON said the additional papers connected with the memorials of Artillery officers, ordered on the 16th July, 1875, were on the table of the House, and would shortly be in the hands of members. The delay was occasioned by the fact that the papers moved for were scattered in different parts of India, and some delay was necessarily occasioned in collecting the papers. (Hear, hear.)

THE ROYAL TITLES.—Mr. SAMUELSON asked the First Lord of the Treasury whether he was now prepared to state what was the addition to the Royal titles which her Majesty's Ministers would advise in the event of the passing of the Royal Titles Bill.—Mr. DISRAELI: In answer to the hon. gentleman opposite, I beg to state that I am not "now prepared to state what is the addition to the Royal titles which her Majesty's Ministers will advise in the event of the passing of the Royal Titles Bill." (Hear.)—Mr. SAMUELSON gave notice that on the second reading of the Bill he would move:—"That this House should not be asked to read this Bill a second time until the addition proposed to be made to the Royal titles should have been stated by her Majesty's Ministers, and until full opportunity shall have been given for the consideration of such addition." (Hear.)

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, March 9.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Mr. DISRAELI, in moving the second reading of the Royal Titles Bill, combated the notion that the title of Emperor denotes military dominion, and denied altogether Mr. Lowe's contention that sentiment clothes it with bad associations. The Imperial title, Mr. Disraeli argued, was in no way superior to the title of Queen. Even in the time of the Holy Roman Empire the title of Emperor had conferred no supremacy over Kings, and when the Czars of Russia in the last century assumed the Imperial title, it was on the distinct understanding that it involved no superiority over the other Sovereigns of Europe. The equality of crowned heads, he maintained, was fully established; and, among other arguments in favour of the Imperial title, he reminded the House that Spenser had addressed Queen Elizabeth as Empress. The addition to the Royal title which her Majesty would adopt was "Empress of India." In reply to the complaint that the Colonies were omitted, Mr. Disraeli said there was no similitude between the cases of India and the Colonies. This measure was desired by the Princes and people of India, and he appealed, therefore, to the House to throw aside prejudice and pass the second reading without a division.—Mr. SAMUELSON objected that no evidence had been produced of the desire of the people of India that her Majesty should take the title of Empress. The title of Emperor was not consonant with the feelings of the people of this country, and in order that there might be further time for consideration he moved the adjournment of the debate.—Sir G. CAMPBELL repeated his satisfaction that the Queen was about to take a title which would mark her position in India; but as both titles would be translated in India by the same words it did not matter much whether it were Queen or Empress.—After some observations from Mr. NEVILL-GRENVILLE, Mr. GLADSTONE agreed with Mr. Disraeli, that if it were possible the House should be unanimous, but for that purpose it would be necessary for the Government to adduce arguments and reasons of much greater weight than had yet been heard. The proposal of the Government, he believed, had been received with much misgiving and mistrust in society, without distinction of party. If the people of India desired that the Queen should take this additional title, the House had the right to have the evidence of the fact before it; but, without greater warrant than was at present forthcoming, he hesitated to take a step which would virtually place on record the fact that we governed India arbitrarily. He insisted that the Act of 1858 only transferred to the Queen the territories formerly vested in the East India Company, and she had never been recognised by any judicial or legislative Act as Sovereign of the whole of India. What effect, he asked, would this assumption of a Sovereign Title have upon the political condition of the independent Princes of India? Mr. Gladstone further controverted Mr. Disraeli's assertion that the Imperial title had never presumed supremacy over Kings. When the two titles had come into competition the title of King had either been subordinated to or had been swallowed up in the title of Emperor. The title of Emperor, moreover, was elective, not hereditary, and it assumed absolute authority. Mr. Gladstone agreed also that the Colonies ought not to be passed over if there was to be any change in the Royal title, and, in conclusion, intimated that if more satisfactory explanations were not given he should oppose the Bill at a future stage.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER urged that this was a matter to be viewed from an Indian, and not an English point of view, and, in reply to Mr. Gladstone, he expressed a doubt whether he could have been serious in supposing that the Bill would have any effect on the position of the independent Princes. As to the evidence of the wishes of the Indian people, Sir Stafford Northcote mentioned that the Viceroy, in a formal letter to the Sovereign of Yarkand, had spoken of her Majesty as Empress of Hindustan, and read a petition from the Talukdars of Oudh praying the Queen to assume this title. If the Queen were to take a title associating her with India, it was of paramount importance that she should not take one which in the opinion of the natives of India would imply that she was inferior to other Sovereigns, more especially as the Emperor of Russia had assumed an Eastern title of the highest rank, and on this point Sir Stafford mentioned that Lord Palmerston, who was extremely jealous on such matters, had a long dispute with the Persian Ambassador, who had addressed the Queen by a title lower than she was entitled to.—Mr. FORSTER regretted that the Colonies were passed over.—Mr. ANDERSON supported the motion for adjournment; and Mr. SMOLLETT, from an experience of thirty years, assured the House that the assumption of a title by the Queen derived from India would give the greatest possible satisfaction to the natives.—Dr. KENEALY made some observations, and the Marquis of HARTINGTON, observing that there would be ample opportunity hereafter of taking the opinion of the House, should it be unfortunately necessary, advised Mr. Samuelson to withdraw his motion for adjournment.—Mr. SAMUELSON signified his willingness to take this course, but it was objected to by the gentlemen on his own side, who insisted on a division. This showed a majority of 253 against the adjournment—284 to 31.—On the main question being put, the House was cleared again, but ultimately the Bill was read a second time without division.—The Committee was fixed for next Thursday.

THE INDIAN TARIFF CORRESPONDENCE.—Mr. FAWCETT asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether any reply had been sent by the Government of India to the despatch of the Secretary of State for India, dated November 11, 1875, published in the correspondence recently issued in reference to the India Tariff Act of 1875.—Lord G. HAMILTON: No, Sir; I have received no reply.

COOLIE IMMIGRATION FROM INDIA.—Lord G. HAMILTON said that the French Foreign Minister had replied to a letter from Lord Derby on the evils attending the system of coolie immigration from India to French Guiana, that the complaints of the noble lord referred to a state of things that did not then exist in the French colony. All the papers had been forwarded to the Indian Government, with whom it would rest to decide in the first instance whether any further immigration would be allowed to that colony.

DEPRECIATION OF SILVER.—Lord G. HAMILTON nominated the Select Committee on this subject, to consist of Mr. Baxter, Mr. Christopher Beckett Denison, Mr. Goschen, Mr. Kirkman Hodgson, Mr. Hubbard, Lord G. Hamilton, Mr. Massey, Mr. Mulholland, Mr. Fawcett, Mr. Cave, Mr. Shaw, Mr. Hermon, and Sir Charles Mills.—Mr. GOSCHEN stated that the object of the Committee was merely to acquire information, and not to propose a remedy.—The motion was agreed to.

ARMY ESTIMATES.—Mr. STANLEY, in answer to remarks from Lord EMLYN, Lord PERCY, Lord C. HAMILTON, and Sir R. GILPIN, gave explanations as to the pay and allowances of Adjutants of Militia; Mr. GOSCHEN and Mr. SHAW-LEFEVRE made some observations on the cost of the Deferred Pay, and asked that information as to its effect in India should be laid before Parliament; after which the House went into Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates, when the votes for the Militia, Yeomanry, Volunteers, and several other votes were agreed to.

TEA PROSPECTS IN DARJILING.—The weather has improved during the last few days. Frost has taken the place of mist, and the sun, which had been absent without leave for several days, has once more put in an appearance. From what we have seen and heard, there is every probability of a very early tea season this year, if the weather be at all favourable.—Darjiling News.

THE ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.—Some more animals have lately arrived at the Zoological Gardens from Agra for his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Among these, we hear, are two tiger cubs, four gynees, and the most diminutive pony ever seen. Steady progress is being made with the works in the gardens, and Major Mant has been appointed an additional member of the managing committee.—Englishman.

THE PIANO-MÉCANIQUE.

DEBAIN Inventor.

A Piano on which any person, although unacquainted with Music, can perform the most difficult and elaborate Compositions with faultless execution and delicacy.

The Piano-Mécanique is actuated by means of planchettes (small boards), into which is pinned the Composition to be performed; and these planchettes are caused to travel on a metal plate which is fitted on the top of the Instrument. This metal plate is pierced in a straight line across its breadth by a series of small openings, up through which project the steel ends of the keys of a miniature keyboard, chromatically arranged. The pins of the planchette, coming in contact with the miniature keyboard, act on the keys in a similar manner as would the fingers of the hand.

The metal pins of the planchette vary in height according to the marks of expression, accent, etc., indicated by the composer, the highest producing the full force of blow from the hammer, and the lowest the most delicate. It will thus be seen that every conceit of the author can be copied, and afterwards mechanically rendered in all its integrity; in fact, execution quite beyond the manual dexterity of the most accomplished performer is, by this system, ensured.

The Piano-Mécanique, when compared with kindred Instruments, presents at once its advantages; notably:—Compositions can be played in their entirety, there being no necessity for mutilation to meet the capacities of the Instrument, nor curtailment to suit the circumference of a barrel; greater facility for selecting the Music to be performed, and its requiring much less space; its faultless execution and complete means of expression; the facility with which any single Composition may be obtained for it, and at small cost; its freedom from derangement, either by excessive use or from the extremes of climate; the advantage of a Seven-Octave Manual for ordinary use.

In proof of the success of the Piano-Mécanique, it may be stated that upwards of 3,000 Compositions, ranging from the simple Ballad or Dance to the difficult Fantasia, Overture, or Grand Symphony, have been arranged for it, and to these, additions are almost daily being made.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a most simple form. Take some good compound, such as

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tasted by many thousands of persons, are found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS
In use the last 76 years for INDIGESTION.
In boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, February 28; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, February 26; Calcutta, February 25; Colombo, February 23.

THE week in India was one of unusual quietude, with a dash of excitement at the close, owing to a telegram from London which summarised Lord Salisbury's despatch on the Indian Tariff. The Bombay Gazette infers that this despatch and the mission of Sir Louis Mallet which it announced, were the determining cause of the Viceroy's resignation; and declares that the principal object of the financial policy of the Secretary of State for India is to reduce the import duties on Manchester goods, and to fix "a date for their final entire abolition." Warming to its work, our contemporary goes on to say that "the English people should be clearly warned that the determination of the Secretary of State to remove the particular class of import duties that affects the trade of Manchester will, if it be persisted in, excite the greatest indignation and discontent throughout India." Further on the same journal loses its temper and tact altogether, when it accuses the Secretary of State of an intention "deliberately to sell India to Manchester," in return for the support his party received from Lancashire at the last General Election.

THE Duke of Buckingham, who had been spending a few days with Lord Northbrook, was to leave Calcutta on February 28 for Madras. His Grace dined with Sir Richard Temple on the evening of the 25th, attended Miss Baring's picnic in the Botanical Gardens the next afternoon, and afterwards accompanied the Viceregal party to Barrackpore.

SIR R. TEMPLE'S scheme of municipal reform fails to win much way with the Calcutta public. An important meeting of the Municipal Commissioners was held on Feb. 23, to protest against the haste shown in passing the new Municipal Bill without the Commissioners having an opportunity of expressing an opinion thereon. A resolution was unanimously passed, the chairman alone dissenting, in favour of appointing a Committee to obtain legal advice, to prepare a memorial against the Bill, and to apply for leave to appear before the Council by counsel.

A CALCUTTA telegram to the Bombay Gazette states that on the 26th February the new Calcutta Municipal Bill was referred back to a select committee after a long debate. With regard to the section bearing on Government control, Sir Richard Temple said that the elective system as promised by him must remain intact, as he could not give entire election. He instanced the municipalities of Bombay and Madras, where the system now proposed has been established with full success.

IT is settled that Major-General Donald Stuart will take over command of the Lahor Division from Sir C. Reid, Major-General Barwell taking the former's place in the Andamans. Sir D. Forsyth has resigned his seat in the Viceroy's Council, before setting out on his homeward journey by way of China, Japan, and America.

A CONFERENCE of officers connected with the Indian Railways has met in Allahabad to discuss a number of topics concerning their department. Mr. Roberts, the Officiating Agent, and Mr. Batchelor, the Traffic Manager, represent the East Indian Railway; Colonel Jenkins, the Agent, assisted by Messrs. Payne and Hederstedt, C.E., the Oudh and Rohilkand Railway; Colonel Williams, R.E., Director-General, and Captain Pye, Manager of the Rajputana line, attend on behalf of the State Railways; and Colonel A. Fraser, C.B., Major Thomason, and Captain Shepherd, R.E., represent the Provincial Light Railway system, the first-fruits of which, to judge by the Hatrass and Mattra experiment, are full of promise. Colonel Taylor, Major Staunton, and Major de Bourbel, R.E., are found among the officers of the consulting staff, and it was said that Mr. Rendel would shortly join them.

WE regret to hear that Mr. C. W. Carpenter, Commissioner of Nagpur, has been seriously injured by a fall from his horse, and by latest accounts was still lying insensible from concussion of the brain. Mr. Carpenter had for the last few months been engaged with his colleagues in preparing the Report of the Puna Riots' Commission; and only the other day resumed charge of the Nagpur Division.

FROM Allahabad we learn that Colonel Michell, C.B., Commanding the Artillery at Ambala, has obtained the Brigade command at Sialkot, in succession to Brigadier-General Biddulph, who is transferred to the Rohilkand District.—It is also stated that Captain Jackson, Aide-de-Camp to Lord Northbrook, will fill the same post for the new Viceroy.—Mr. Ward is appointed Judicial Commissioner of Assam.

WE learn from Bombay that the Marquis of Salisbury declines to accede to the petition of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce asking for the repeal of the Cotton Frauds Acts. His Lordship, however, considers that the Act is very faulty, and he has, therefore, directed that it should be considerably and immediately amended.

IF it is good to "see oursels as ithers see us," we ought to be obliged to a native Indian paper for the following reply to Dr. Duff's rather foolish attack on the amusements of the Prince of Wales in India:—

Then spectacles had been witnessed which we are told have "produced a painful feeling not only in the hearts of all Christian people in the land, but of secular minded people." We are not admirers of spectacles such as were witnessed by the Prince at Baroda. But are not pigeon-matches held in England and innocent birds sacrificed simply for the pleasure of gentlemen and ladies, patricians and plebeians? Then, again, the witnessing by the Prince of dances performed by nautch-girls seems, of all the unchristian incidents of his Highness's tour, to have been considered most shocking by the British public. But are the performances of ballet-girls and dancers, witnessed every day on the London stage, and occasionally performed by females almost in a state of nudity, a whit more decent or less shocking than the dances of nautch-girls? We detest nautches as much as any individual. But when indecent and amorous songs are avoided they are a much more decent affair than what is not unfrequently seen in London theatres.

It appears from the Assam Land-Revenue Report that the scheme of model-farms, planned by Mr. Hume in 1871, and of which great things were expected by Sir G. Campbell, has hitherto miscarried in a remarkable way. The late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal sanctioned the establishment of a model farm in the Kásia Hills for five years, at a cost of Rs. 31,500 for the entire period. A piece of ground of about 277 acres, near Shillong, was acquired in 1871, for this purpose, at a yearly rental of Rs. 50. In 1872 it was worked as a tree nursery under the superintendence of the Deputy Commissioner of the Kasia and Jaintiah Hills, but the English seeds sown never germinated. Australian seeds were next tried, but apparently with little more success. In January, 1874, Mr. W. B. Freeman, who had been appointed by the Bengal Government, took charge of the farm as Superintendent, and during that year he carried on experiments in the rearing of trees. Real farming operations were begun in 1875, but the Report states that "the progress made has been small." The actual cost of the farm in the year 1874-75 was Rs. 13,297, and the estimated expenditure for 1875-76 is Rs. 11,481. The cost far exceeds the original estimate, and the success is next to none.

It appears that the present value of the trade between British Sikhim and Thibet is about four and a-half lakhs of rupees. The cost of improving the route selected by Sir Richard Temple for this trade is estimated at Rs. 28,500, but Sir Richard and the Viceroy differ on the question who shall pay it. The Supreme Government insist on the money being provided by the Bengal Exchequer, although, as Sir Richard argues, the development of Central Asian trade would seem to be a matter for Imperial fostering.

The last report on the Assam plantations shows that the tea-industry in that province is steadily improving. Since the issue, in February, 1874, of the rules for the purchase of waste land, about 40,000 acres appear to have been taken up; but of the actual area already appropriated—a good deal more than 600,000 acres—there is only a sixth part under cultivation. One of the chief difficulties with which the planters have had to contend, has been the scarcity of labour; but this appears to have been greatly lessened by the late regulations regarding free immigration.

The Bengal Administration Report contains some interesting remarks on the amount of culturable waste in the Lower Provinces, and the possibility of colonising parts of it by emigration from Bahar. The basin of the river Kusi is first indicated as a promising field lying at the very door of Darbhanga. But nothing can induce the rayats to move there. Possibly they are influenced by a well-founded mistrust of that very erratic stream. Then there are great tracts of virgin soil in the Western Duars, but the climate would hardly suit the people of Bahar. Next we have the fine Pergunnah of Palamau. This is not very far from Gaya, and promises best for Hindustani immigrants. On the whole, it appears that Bengal can support, by its present cultivated area, ten millions more than it does now, and there are still in very many districts vast areas of fertile soil awaiting the necessary plough. Further inquiries are, it seems, being made to get precise figures and the latest information.

During the visit of the Prince of Wales to Indor on the 10th current, the Chiefs first and Holkar afterwards came to the Residency to pay their respects. The Prince also touched the swords of the troopers who charged, under Travers, on guns playing on the Residency on July 1, 1857, and inspected the surviving meritorious officers and non-commissioned officers of the Bhil Corps. A group of Bhil men and women—says the Times correspondent—"performed most graceful dances in the court below; the men, with bows and arrows, and green garlands in their hair, dancing together; the women, with their heads and faces covered, and their arms and legs ornamented with gold bands, also dancing in separate sets to the sound of rather harmonious native instruments." On leaving Indor the Prince was accompanied five miles by Holkar, who took a most friendly farewell, and sat in his chair to bid each member of the suite farewell. When the railway was reached a train was ready, which travelled all night with a break for dinner, which "afforded more amusement than nutriment, as there was an immense disproportion between the dishes set forth in the menu and those which could be put on the table." Lord Suffield proposed the health of the Princess, in honour of the anniversary of the day which had been the source of so much rejoicing to the country. The Prince, in reply, expressed his obligations to the members of his suite for all that they had done, and alluded in warm terms to the aid he had received from officers attached to his suite after his arrival in India. After his arrival next morning at Bombay the Prince went over to the Serapis with Admiral Macdonald, under salutes from the fleet in harbour. He dined with Sir Philip Wodehouse, whom he thanked for his hospitality, and said he should never cease to think with pleasure of the visit begun and ended at Bombay.

On the night of the 12th the Prince of Wales dined with Admiral Macdonald on board the Undaunted. Several cases of small-pox have appeared on board the Doris, and leave was stopped from all men-of-war's men some days back.

The Bombay address was presented to the Prince of Wales on board the Serapis on the 13th. At one o'clock Governor Wodehouse and his Staff, Admiral Macdonald, and General Staveley came on board and lunched with the Prince. The Serapis, amid a general salute from thirteen ships of war, sailed at four o'clock the same afternoon for England.

Two resaldars of the 12th Bengal Lancers, Mohammad Afzul and Anup Singh, accompany the Prince as native Aides-de-Camp. The former is said to be connected with the Amirs of Kabul; he was with Biddulph in Yarkand, and is a very gallant fellow. The second served under General Probyn; he had five horses killed under him and received six wounds.

The Times Correspondent prepares us to expect the arrival of many Native Princes in England, but he would have us remember that when the Prince of Wales visited them he and his suite were entertained by them, and that they paid for everything connected with the reception, not only of the Prince and his suite, but of hundreds of Europeans invited to meet him. He admits that the Indian Princes will have to undergo much opprobrium in breaking through the trammels of native prejudice, and must pay the Brahmans largely on their return before they can be readmitted to caste; but many of them, nevertheless, "look joyfully forward to such liberation, and are prepared to meet the results, expecting to acquire immense benefits to the country from the free intercourse with England." We thought the Pandits had lately ruled that a voyage across the "dark water" involved no loss of caste, at any rate for princes. But it may be that Brahman influence is still too strong even for the haughtiest Maharajahs to ignore with impunity.

Major-General Sir Samuel Browne, v.c., one of the newly made Knights of the Star of India, entered the Bengal Army in December, 1840, served with the 46th N.I. throughout the Punjab Campaign of 1848-49, including the actions of Ramnagar, Sadulapur, Chilianwála, and Gujarat. From 1850 to 1869 he commanded at one time the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, at another the Guide Corps, in various expeditions against the frontier tribes. During the Mutiny Campaign of 1858 Captain Browne served with the former regiment at the siege and capture of Lucknow, the capture of Bareilly, and in several minor engagements. As Brevet-major he commanded a small field force against the rebels whom he defeated at Mohanpur and Sirpura, losing on one occasion his left arm, which was severed by a sword-cut at the shoulder. These services, for which he was repeatedly mentioned in the despatches, gained him a Brevet Lieutenant-colonelcy, the Victoria Cross, and finally a Companionship of the Bath. He became a Major-general on the Bengal Staff Corps in 1870.

Another of the new Knights is Major-General D. M. Probyn, v.c., Equerry to the Prince of Wales, whose first commission in the Bengal Cavalry dates from October, 1849. From 1852 to 1857 Lieutenant Probyn served on the Punjab Frontier, especially in the Bozdar Campaign of March, 1857. During the Mutiny Campaign of 1857-58 Captain Probyn was present throughout the siege of Delhi, at the action of Najafgarh, and commanded the 2nd Punjab Cavalry at the assault and capture of Delhi. With the same regiment he served under Colonel Greathead at the actions of Bolandshahar, Agra, and Aligarh, was four times mentioned in despatches, and gained the Victoria Cross "for distinguished gallantry and daring throughout this campaign." He was afterwards present at the battle of Kanauj, the second relief of Lucknow, the battles of Cawnpore and Kali Nadi, and the final capture of Lucknow, services for which he obtained his brevet and the lowest Order of the Bath. In 1860 Major Probyn commanded the 1st Sikh Irregulars, since known as "Probyn's Horse," throughout Sir Hope Grant's campaign in China, winning fresh renown and the brevet of Lieutenant-Colonel. He became a Major-General in 1870, after only twenty-one years' service.

SURGEON-GENERAL JOSEPH FAYRER, M.D., another of the new Knights, was an Assistant-Surgeon of 1850 in Bengal. During the Mutiny he bore a distinguished part in the defence of the Lucknow Residency. In 1860 he became Professor of Surgery in the Medical College of Calcutta, and received medical charge of the Mysor Princes. Some years later he became a C.S.I., and was made Honorary Physician to the Queen. After the death of Sir Ranald Martin he was appointed Physician to the Council of India, and has since been placed on the Senate of the Army Medical School at Netley.

ACCORDING to a Calcutta telegram of March 14 the Pioneer states that the long-considered plan of reform of the Native Army was sent home by the last mail.

A CALCUTTA telegram of March 16 states that a public meeting has been held, at which it was resolved to erect a statue in commemoration of the services of Lord Napier of Magdala.

THE death of Dr. Milman, Bishop of Calcutta, at Rawal Pindi, has been announced by telegraph. The late Bishop, a nephew of Dean Milman, succeeded the lamented Bishop Cotton in 1867, when Lord Salisbury was Secretary of State. Under his Episcopate, the Church in India has made great progress among the natives, and the approaching consecration of two new bishops was mainly the result of his efforts and those of Bishop Douglas.

A LETTER from the Prince of Wales to Lord Northbrook, which was officially published in Calcutta yesterday, expresses in cordial terms the sincere pleasure which his Royal Highness has derived from his visit to India.

A DESPATCH from Achin, dated 10th March, announces that General Wiggers van Kerchen, the new Commander-in-Chief, has assumed command of the troops. The Imam of Tiade has submitted to the Netherlands authorities on condition of receiving protection.

A TELEGRAM from the Governor of the Straits Settlements has just been received at the Colonial-office announcing the capture of the Datu Sagor, the Chief who was present when Mr. Birch was murdered. Another telegram from Singapore states that Ismail and several other Malay chiefs, with 170 followers, have tendered their submission to the Rajah of Quedah.

AT last the old Uzbek Khanate of Khokan, the fatherland of the Emperor Babar, has ceased to exist as an independent or semi-independent State. The Official Gazette of the Empire publishes an Imperial ordinance decreeing that the newly-conquered territory, hitherto called the Khanate of Khokan, be incorporated with the Russian Empire; that it be formed into a province under the name of Ferghana; and that the Governor-general of Turkistan be entrusted with the task of organising the administration of the new territory. Ferghana was the name by which the Khanate was known in Babar's day. The absorption of Khokan by Russia began in 1865, after the capture of Tashkand, when a large part of the old Khanate was formed into the Russian Province of Turkistan. Three years later the adjoining Khanate of Bokhara virtually passed under the yoke of "the White Tzar," and in 1873 Khiva also underwent the same process. For the present, indeed, these two are only half swallowed; but their final absorption is only a question of time. Sooner or later they must go the way of Khokan, whose political extinction has been hastened by the shortsighted folly of its own people. Russia's last move has brought her up to the borders of Kashgar. Is that country also destined to undergo the process of absorption, or will Russia be content to keep on her own side of the Thian Shan Mountains?

WE hear that the Commission appointed by the Russian Government to consider the question of laying down a line of railway through Central Asia is busily engaged in preliminary inquiries as to cost, &c., and it has already arrived at some striking results. The length of the proposed railway, according to the plans of General Beshnossikoff, is about 3,300 versts, and its cost is estimated at upwards of £40,000,000. It would proceed from Ekaterinenburg through the towns of Cheljaba and Troitzk, and thence through Turkistan to Peshawar. Within Russian territory the cost would be 30,000 roubles a verst, and beyond it 80,000. Notwithstanding the enormous capital required, many Russian merchants are so strongly in favour of the plan that they offer to subscribe the amount among themselves.

INTELLIGENCE just received at Hong Kong from Mr. Grosvenor's party, to the 10th of February, states that all the members of the Yunnan Mission at that date were well.

THE Russian Invalide of March 14 announces that an Imperial Ordinance of that date appoints General Scobeleff as Military Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the newly-formed Government of Ferghana.

ON the night of March 16 Lord Lytton left Naples on board the Orontes for Suez.

ADMINISTRATION REPORT.—The general report for the past official year on the administration of the Bombay Presidency has just been issued. It is, we read, devoted to a rapid general retrospect of the administration in all its branches, in the course of which reference is made to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales's visit, and, in a marked manner, to the public rejoicings that notable event gave rise to. Then follows a glowing tribute to the memory of the late lamented Dr. Wilson, "intimately associated with the public and social affairs of this Presidency during upwards of half a century," and his Excellency the Governor's visit to Kattywar in the beginning of last year. Turning to the portion dealing with its relations with Tributary States and frontier affairs, we light upon the following:—"No event within the political cognisance of this Government attracted the attention that was given during the year to the attempt to poison the British Resident at Baroda in November, 1874, and to the subsequent deportation of the Gaekwar in the April following; but inasmuch as the superintendence of affairs at Baroda has since been conducted by the Government of India, further allusion to the subject is unnecessary. As, too, it has been found convenient that the Government of India should correspond direct with officers upon the Frontier on matters affecting the relations of the Empire with border tribes, external politics, except with respect to the Aden settlement, have ceased to be directed by this Government, and his Excellency has accordingly confined himself to a résumé of the progress made by the numerous Dependent and Tributary States of this Presidency in the various departments of a peaceful administration, avoiding, however, any allusion to debatable questions. The degree of authority exercised by the political officers attached to these States varies from an absolute control to the tendering of advice, and the extent of the interference of that authority is dependent upon the degree of civilisation and intelligence exhibited by the people. Measures that might be insisted on in the old-settled districts of the Southern Mahratta Country would be out of place among the rude hill tribes of Northern Guzerat, and a license that would be intolerable in the Konkan or the Deccan might be not altogether avoidable in Kattywar or Sind."

THE GOLD DISCOVERIES IN KOLAIR.—The first efforts at gold-mining in Southern India have not proved successful, nor do the proceedings of the Alpha Company, so far as disclosed to the public, hold out much encouragement to similar ventures. Nevertheless, we have it on the best authority that fresh discoveries have been made which give an altogether new complexion to this class of enterprise. A reef of gold-yielding quartz has been struck, and followed up for many miles; large concessions have been secretly, but conclusively, obtained from the Maisur Government; and an offer of £26,000 has been already made to the concessionaries for a single part of their grant. The whole affair has been transacted with a reticence and promptitude which speaks well for the practical capacity of the parties concerned, and looks as if they were very confident as to the value of their discovery. The quantity submitted in bulk for experiment yielded at the rate of 28¾ ounces of gold to the ton. This percentage has been reached by only one of the Australian mines; and it is stated that, at the local rates for labour, it would pay to extract the precious metal even if the yield were as low as half an ounce from the ton of crushed quartz. The concession lies in the Kolair district, and, like the rest of Maisur, is under the management of the Chief Commissioner, on behalf of the minor Prince. It forms the adjoining district to Bangalor, and its southern extremity is intersected by the railway from Madras. The concession lies about 180 miles from the Presidency town, and about fifty from Bangalor, the capital of the Maisur Province. We are informed that a well-known firm in Madras has entered into negotiations with the concessionaires on the basis of £10,000 down, and £16,000 in shares of a company to be formed for working a part of the grant. But as a condition is attached that the said firm shall have the right of pre-emption over the remainder of the grant, no arrangement has been come to, and the concessionaires are at present bringing over miners from Australia to commence experimental operations on a large scale for themselves. It is needless to enlarge on the importance of the discovery, if it should prove in any degree equal to the expectations which the grantees have formed. Easily accessible from Madras, and with a direct although more lengthy line of communication by rail with Bombay, Kolair District lies on the elevated Maisur plateau, within a few hours of Bangalor, and possesses one of the healthiest and pleasantest climates in India. The local labour-supply is quite adequate for operations on an ordinary scale, and can be increased from the Madras Districts. If anything like a rush took place, and gold mining developed on a great scale, it would alter, in more than one important respect, the existing basis of Indian trade. Such a discovery might arrest the further decline of silver, and, quite apart from the wealth which individuals obtained from the mining operations, it would place the Indian merchant in a permanently more favourable position as regards exchange than he has held for many years.—Englishman, Feb. 8.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE QUEEN'S TITLE IN INDIA.

By what title is the Queen to be known in documents intended for circulation among the natives of India and other Eastern countries? Shall it be Pádishah, or Málika, Maháráni or Adhirájni, Persian, Arabic, or Hindi? That is a point which seems to provoke as much discussion as the correlative question of Queen, Empress, or Sovereign Lady has done. Professor Max Müller contends stoutly for some Sanskrit form, such as Rájádhiráj, with its feminine Adhirájni, as best befitting the Paramount Ruler of many Native Indian States, and of peoples, the great bulk of whom are Aryan Hindus, alike by descent and language. To this it is objected that the very title he recommends has been used and therefore degraded by many a petty Rajah. But the same thing may be said of Málika, and of Pádishah, which turns up so often in the more familiar shape of Pasha. If numbers, wealth, and general culture count for anything, the Hindus, who outnumber the Mohammedans of India as four to one, might be allowed to choose the title that pleases them best. On the other hand, it is contended that no title would please Hindus and Mohammedans alike so well as Pádishah or Bádshah, the title always borne by the Moghal Emperors of Delhi, whose place has long been filled by the House of Hanover or its representatives. Can anyone tell us which is the right solution of this nice little problem? With regard to the Mussulmans there is no real difficulty, but who will answer for the Hindus? As to the proper English equivalent, we think it a pity that the question was ever stirred without some clear preliminary understanding between the two parties in the State. Our only comfort is that, whichever word be adopted, Mr. Gladstone will for the future cease to talk wildly about the independence of the Native Princes in any part of India between the Himalayas and Cape Comorin. Such talk surpasses even the "rubbish about the Antonines."

THE VICEROY AND THE INDIA OFFICE.

Two questions, one relating to the last Indian Tariff Act, the other to the proper limits of the control exercised by the India-office over the Indian Government, were raised by the debate of Tuesday last on Lord Halifax's motion for certain papers connected with the Indian tariff. With regard to the latter question Lord Salisbury, in his reply to Lord Halifax, went far to allay the uneasiness which his recent correspondence with Lord Northbrook had aroused in many quarters. He succeeded, we think, in making it pretty clear that, whatever fault might be found with the manner of his strictures on the Viceroy's conduct in the matter of the Tariff Act, his real aim was not that which the published letters seemed at first glance to indicate. It now appears that the despatch of March, 1874, proclaimed no new restriction of the Viceroy's legislative powers. Instead of seeking to render the Viceroy a mere mouthpiece or registrar of the India-office, Lord Salisbury merely "requested the Government of India, before they introduced a measure, to send it home first, in order that they might hear what suggestions I had to make upon it. In that there was no dictation; I did not indicate an intention to force them to accept any measure; I merely desired that I might know what it was, and that I might offer any suggestions which the experience of my Council, or which English and Imperial considerations might make it necessary to suggest. If, indeed, I had used that power for the purpose of ordering them to pass measures which had been arranged in the India-office, that would have been undoubtedly undertaking in England the legislation of India; but nothing of the kind was ever done or intended. It was only intended we should have an opportunity of offering our suggestions on any particular part of a law before that law was passed and was sent home for disavowal or approval." Looking at the question from the practical point of view, we may admit with his Lordship that it is "a much more simple, courteous, and dignified course to have the opportunity of pointing out to the Government of India what portions of a law you might object to than to wait until it is passed, placed on the statute-book, proclaimed in India, and then when it comes home to disavow it." Under the old system of passing a Bill first and then sending it home for the final judgment of the Secretary of State, it was likely enough that the Secretary's veto would be very sparingly used, and that of such likelihood the Indian Government might be tempted to take a little too much advantage. It appears, indeed, from the Duke of Argyll's own showing, that the Despatch of 1874 merely re-asserted the principles laid down by the Indian Government in 1863. His Grace denied that it "was conceived in terms objectionable to the Government of India, and it laid down a rule that may be of great use in the conduct of his Department. In fact it was merely enforcing a rule that was volunteered by the Indian Government many years ago, and which was practically to a large extent acted upon during the time I was in office, and, I believe, also under other Secretaries of State. I believe it was a wise rule, and that, on the whole, it will operate for the benefit of the Government both at home and in India." Nor can it be doubted that, in these days of telegraphs and weekly mails, the true way to the successful government of India lies, as Lord Salisbury holds, in "constant communication by the Government of India to the Home Government of all that they intend to do." At the same time no judicious Secretary of State will use his powers of interference so as to force the action of the Indian Government into slavish accordance with what he may consider the demands of English opinion. The time has not yet come when India can be properly governed from this country.

With regard to the Tariff question it must be admitted that Lord Northbrook laid himself open to criticism both as to the matter and the manner of his procedure. The Duke of Argyll indeed declares that "it has never been the custom of the Indian Government to send their Tariff Bills home for previous consideration." Lord Salisbury on the other hand pleads with much show of justice that a question of tariffs is an Imperial as well as a local question, and that the Indian Government has failed to show sufficient reason for hurrying through at Simla an Act which largely concerned the merchants of Calcutta and Bombay. We believe with him that Manchester will have none of the protection implied in an import duty on raw long-staple cotton; not because Manchester objects to the duty on principle, but rather because, to our thinking, she sees in such a move a new barrier to her assaults upon the old duty on piece-goods. But no fault can fairly be found with Lord Northbrook for the other changes made by him in the Tariff.

The removal of so many export duties was a greater boon to India than any reduction of the duties on Manchester goods could be. It is only to be regretted that he could not see his way to remove them all. By reducing a number of import duties to the level of those on cotton goods, the Viceroy showed a stronger sense of justice than if he had sacrificed the prospects of other industries to those of Manchester alone. The importers of silks and woollens, of tea, metals, and other goods have equal claims with Lancashire on the consideration of the Indian Government. Lord Salisbury himself admits that "it was an exaggeration on the part of the Lancashire manufacturers to imagine that the falling off in their trade was due to the 5 per cent. duty." We would gladly see the whole of these import duties swept away, if the Indian Government could afford to let them go. But, to adopt Lord Salisbury's principle, the fiscal question in India should be considered as a whole, with special reference to the interests of the Indian tax-payer. There are still, for instance, export duties on rice and sugar which bear away the palm for theoretic badness from the import duties on cotton goods; nor can any of these imposts be mentioned in the same page with the salt-duties which still debar vast numbers of men and cattle from consuming their proper share of a prime necessary of life.

ROYAL TITLES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As there appear strong objections to her Majesty's assumption of the title of Empress of India, I would suggest that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and successors should have some addition to his numerous titles having reference to India. Why should he not be styled the Grand Duke of Hindustan, or something reminding the native rajahs and nobles of his visit among them? I think this would be far more gratifying to the Oriental Princes and Chiefs than the Imperial title to the Sovereign. C. S.

UNDERGROUND TELEGRAPHS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I wish to remind the authorities at the India-office that without underground telegraphs in India our means of communication in that country may at any time be interrupted.

During the Mutiny, when the electric telegraph on the left bank of the Ganges had been destroyed, I was asked whether I could not establish a wire on the right bank. As the Hindoos on the right bank were in open rebellion for about forty miles of the river's course, I was compelled to reply in the negative.

Electric telegraphs hung upon poles can be destroyed in a few minutes, not only by successful swarms of rebels, but by roving bands of Pindaris and other robbers. In the most loyal provinces of India it will be impossible to preserve them during a time of anarchy and rebellion. The wires are constantly obtruding themselves on the notice of any one and every one who may be inclined to do mischief.

Out of sight out of mind. Underground telegraphic wires buried during a time of profound peace and ostentatious loyalty have some chance of not falling into the hands of rebels; the police in India will have some chance of detecting those who dig for them.

Underground telegraphs in India will no doubt be expensive, but the safety of our Empire may depend upon them.

They will be especially valuable in provinces where there is only one railway; I allude especially to the line passing eastward from Benares viâ Buxar, Arrah, Dinapore, and Patna, to the junction at Lukkee Serai. The authorities well know the trouble which the Ponwar Rajpoots of Bhojpoor and Jugdeespoor gave us during the Mutiny. Bengal is connected with the rest of India by the railway from Monghyr to Benares; an underground line of telegraph should at once be constructed from Monghyr, crossing the Ganges and passing through Ismaelpoor, Rajowly, Hajeepoor, Chuprah, Bulliah, and Ghazeepoor to Benares.—Your obedient servant, T.

THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

The Bombay Gazette thinks it would be unfair to say that military men do not make able political officers, for they do so, and as the rule, we think, rather than the exception; but the fact of their having talents in this line is no apology whatever for their employment in it, since this is done at the expense of the army to which they more particularly belong. Indeed, when we hear of some very able military political in civil employ, we only take him as a more than ordinary example of the evils of the present system. For his talents are lost to his proper profession, and the Native Army is debarred the services of a class of officer it much needs—the class to which Outram belonged, in a word. The Native Army at present gets the dross of the Staff Corps for its regimental officers—at least, that is the arrangement the system plans, though we by no means think it is the case—and the system is a poor one which contemplates such an arrangement at all. Haply, perhaps, "interest" steps in to take some of the fools and to leave some of the wise, otherwise the idea of sacrificing the Army entirely to the Military Civil Service would be carried into effect. Of course, the present incumbents of civil appointments should be permitted to retain them; but from a certain date we would recommend the abolition of all civil employment in India for military officers, and the sooner that date is fixed the less will be the complications and expenses in the future. The Native Army cannot be reformed in any way worth mentioning without this most important step being taken first. Nor can the Staff Corps itself be either remodelled or abolished effectually until it is understood which of the two it is to be, a Military Staff Corps or a Civil Staff Corps. It might be made a useful public institution if it were to wash its hands of everything unprofessional and appertaining to the Civil Service. It might then be made to turn out some fine linguists, of whom we have very few just now, as well as that useful type of officer—such as Burton the traveller—whom competition can hardly supply us with. We have always thought the original notion of the Indian Staff Corps good, for it was calculated to give clever men without backstairs interest, or men too proud to toady their superiors, a fair chance of coming to the front; but the Staff Corps has been so spoiled and tinkered that its own mother would not know it now, and no wonder. It is, in fact, as a corps d'élite, totally demoralised, and, what between its connection with the Civil Service on one part and its tremendous weight of Field Officers on the other, it is perhaps the finest example of what officialism can do that was ever heard of. This time next year the numbers of Field Officers, as given above, will be largely increased at the expense of the Captains and Lieutenants, while the ninety annual retirements under special conditions must largely augment the host of General Officers now wandering about the British Isles, seeking nooks wherein to hide their half-pay shame and chop titles together. It has often struck us that something might be done to get rid of a number of the superior officers, so as to make way for reform, by giving a certain quantity of Government land, either in India or in the Colonies, along with a bonus or a pension; but, without stopping to discuss this supposition, we think it is quite clear that these same annual retirements of ninety Colonels a year will not do much towards preparing the Staff Corps for reform, while every year sees as many or more Captains promoted to Majors, and Majors to Colonels, Subalterns being absorbed altogether meanwhile. The Staff Corps is our White Elephant, and a sensible man would be eager to shoot the burden quickly and be done with the cost. A proprietor of a more timorous mind would hope to do something with it some fine day or other, and in the meantime would be ruined with the animal's expenses.

THE ARMIES OF THE NATIVE STATES.

The Pioneer holds that the new Coinage Bill is an indication of the silent, slow, and almost imperceptible transition of the native princes of India from their historic status to that of nobles and country gentlemen. Meanwhile, it is but too evident that the kind of state maintained by many of these chiefs is anything but consistent with mere nobility. What explanation have they to offer for the maintenance of their armies. A single coinage for the whole of India would be extremely convenient; so would a single army, namely, the British army, English and native, which alone is the instrument on which the peace and security of the continent depends. Sindia, for instance, does not want his admirably-equipped and drilled army of twelve thousand men for the preservation of the internal peace of his dominions; a body of well-drilled policemen could secure that. Nor for mere purposes of pomp and show, as for guards, escorts, and the like; for which one or two hundred men would be amply sufficient. Sindia acting the general, whilst the infantry, cavalry, and artillery of Gawlior were reviewed before the Prince of Wales, strikes one as being in many respects the most singular and suggestive of the tumashas got up for his Royal Highness. Most likely the reason—and it is one which the reader will fully appreciate—of the indifference with which Sindia's soldiering is generally regarded, is the confidence of his loyalty, and the consequent unwillingness to interfere with his peculiar weakness. But Sindia's loyalty—about which nobody need doubt—has nothing to do with the question. In another revolt of the sepoys, Sindia might be forced to go with the wrong side, or run away—as he did nineteen years ago—from his own men. And the same would of course hold with respect to any and all of the other chiefs who waste on their armies so much of the wealth that might be devoted to road-making, education, and the general material improvement of their territories.

EAST INDIANS AS SOLDIERS AND SEAMEN.

The Madras Athenæum thinks that now that his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has had an opportunity of seeing Eurasians at home and has met some of them in the character of heroes who assisted England in her hour of need, surely there need be no further hesitation about organising Eurasian regiments at once. We must have soldiers, and why not a proportion of Eurasians among them? As to the Navy, that branch of her Majesty's service would perhaps be the better branch in which to employ Eurasians, and a few training ships stationed along the coasts ought to provide a large number of trained recruits ready for employment in her Majesty's ships on the Indian Station or elsewhere as might be required. The men born in the country would suffer less from the tropical climate than men from home, and there is no lack of vessels in which they could be thoroughly trained. There are the two turret vessels in Bombay Harbour and Butcher's Island, with its fine barracks still unoccupied, which at one time was used for the training of seamen in John Company's days, and might be so used again. Those great ships are lying there manned only by a few native callassees, and with ample accommodation for a large crew each, doing nothing but expending paint and other stores instead of being utilised for the training of a body of seamen to work and fight them if required. Were those two ships called on to go into action their crews would either have to be drafted from the Indian fleet or sent out specially from England, where there would in such a case be a much greater dearth of hands than at present. The only question appears to be who is to pay the piper. If crews were put on board these ships and others to be trained for the Navy, the chances are that the cost would be thrown on the Indian revenues, and therefore probably the powers that be are backward to adopt so obviously wise an expedient for manning the Indian portion of the navy. But India has to pay for her naval defences as it is, and there appears to be no just reason why some of the money thus expended should not go to provide her sons with an honourable career. Why, it may be asked, should we not have a thorough Naval organisation in India? There need be no such distinction as an Indian fleet separate from the Navy as a whole, and both seamen and officers could be provided in plenty. There was no lack of Eurasians in the Company's Navy, why, then, should there be in her Majesty's? Are Eurasians less suitable now for seamen and officers than they were twenty years ago? Or is it that all these good things are to be kept for those at home, to the exclusion of the more distant parts of the Empire?

VILLAGE COMMUNITIES.

The Pioneer admits it is quite true that village communities in their present state are close corporations, and that entrance into the brotherhood is barred to outsiders. None the less are they instructive examples of socialistic societies, and of the fate which awaits attempts to reorganise industry on a socialistic basis. There was a time in the history of village communities when a stranger found no difficulty in gaining admission into them by the mere fact of his settling in the village. He became one of the co-proprietors in virtue of a fiction of blood relationship to the original settlers. He was admitted to a share in the profits of the village lands. In the same way there was a period in the history of each mediæval guild when outsiders who were willing to follow the handicraft of the local guild had no difficulty in becoming members of it and sharing its privileges. But in the village community, and in the guild, the socialistic spirit of its infancy soon disappeared. Not only was entrance denied to new-comers, but among the members of the society itself individual rights began to grow up. The association took the form of a close corporation, which, if it wanted the services of more men, either hired them or placed them on an inferior footing. This is the invariable end of all societies which start on socialistic theories. Practice soon ceases to correspond with theory, and theory evaporates with success, till at last the society becomes as close a corporation as is the village community of to-day. The Rochdale Pioneers at the outset offered the full benefits arising from their co-operative society to any one wishing to join and willing to conform to its rules. The business prospered, and the members then refused to admit more members. The profits they preferred to monopolise for themselves, and it was by hired labour that they extended the business as opportunity offered. An intelligent traveller recently went the round of the communistic societies in the United States, and has published the result of his observations. He found in every case the tendency which we have mentioned at work. Those societies which had prospered no longer professed the principles on which they had been originally founded. In theory, every man who worked for them was entitled to a share in the profits of the Industrial undertaking. The test of membership was theoretically labour. In reality, the original members had ceased to work themselves. The work, whether agricultural or manufacturing, was carried on by labourers, receiving the ordinary market wages, and having no proprietary interest in the undertaking. There was little or nothing to distinguish many of the so-called communistic bodies from an ordinary trading company or business firm. The advocates for socialism are usually reasoners of such an advanced type that they refuse to accept the lessons of experience. A priori arguments as to the adaptability of human nature to socialistic arrangements will alone satisfy them. The past, however, teaches us that socialism has attractions for poor men alone, and these cease to believe in it as soon as they get a share in the good things of the world.

THE LATE WAR IN MALAYA.

QUALLAH KANGSA, Jan. 29.—There has been no fighting since I last wrote. After the surprise the Kotha Lama Malays got on the 20th they shifted their quarters about twelve miles higher up the river. They must have been sadly scared, as they left several bodies behind, bearing on them the deadly effects of the shell and rockets. There has been no cutting off of servants and police since the exodus, and families who were frightened away are rapidly returning.

On the 22nd, the Quartermaster-General, with an escort of twenty men under Lieutenant Colvill, of the Buffs, went up the right bank of the river to a distance of about six miles, and found all peaceful on the opposite bank. A strong stockade has been constructed opposite to Kotha Lama, and is occupied by some of Speedy's Sikhs and the Mantri's police. On the 23rd the E-Company of the Buffs marched from this to Kampong Boyah and Gapes's stockade to relieve G Company, which had garrisoned these stockades since the arrival of the troops at Bukit Gantang. The S-Company, under command of Captain Graham, reached Quallah Kangsa in the evening.

On the 25th, our Political, Mr. Maxwell, with his Malays, went up the right bank of the river, and found the left side still deserted.

On the 26th, 200 Goorkhas, under the command of Colonel Clay, arrived at Matang, en route to Quallah Kangsa; they came from Malacca. Fifty Buffs, under Captain Kelly, are under orders for Blanja, to relieve the detachment of the 10th Regiment there.

On the 28th the Rajah Muda paid General Ross a visit of ceremony in the forenoon. In the afternoon General Ross returned the visit. He expected to see a good collection of the industrial products of the district, but was disappointed at their paucity. The Malays appear to be skilful in the manufacture of krises and limlings (spears). The women produce mats covered with a coarse sort of gold embroidery. The men also manufacture gold trinkets, and execute some rough castings in tin in the form of crocodiles and Malayan cocks. The wants of the Malays are few: a few yards of checked cotton, some rice, and fish. They are continually fishing on the Perak river, even by torchlight at night. Their method of fishing is ingenious. They construct a square of rattans with a very narrow entrance, about 20 feet out in the stream; a rattan fence reaches from this to the bank. They put a rope about 300 or 400 yards long, having pieces of heavy yellow wood attached at short intervals, into a dugout. Two men pole the dugout about half a mile up the edge of the river. A man walks along the bank; he catches hold of one end of the rope and wades a little way into the water. Meantime the men in the boat cross the river, paying out the rope. When they are three parts across, they pole down the river, the man with the end of the rope keeping up with them until both meet at the rattan square. The rope is then hauled into the boat, and the circle formed, gradually contracting as the rope shortens, frightens the fish into the trap, where they are all secured. They sometimes get very large takes, and all not required for present consumption are dried in the sun and stored.

On the 28th word reached that Lieutenant Armstrong, of the Buffs, who had been suffering from dysentery, and sent for change of air to Penang, had died at Penang on the 23rd. Mr. Chippindall, who was also suffering from dysentery, and who accompanied Mr. Armstrong to Penang, has been sent on to Calcutta. The climate here has been trying to the Buffs, and a large proportion of them have suffered from diarrhœa, and a considerable number from dysentery. There have been several fatal cases of the latter disease. As the military exigencies do not now require the troops to work between the hours of half-past eight A.M. and half-past three P.M., dysentery and diarrhœa have greatly abated. I may state that the Goorkhas and Madras Sappers here have suffered in even larger proportion than the Buffs. As, relatively speaking, the Buffs have experienced two hot weathers running, I think it would only be just to send them on return to India to some station reported more healthy than Cawnpore, say Sealkote or Jullundhur, in the Punjab.

Although everything is quiet, the measures for strengthening the position have not been relaxed. The troops under covering parties are clearing jungle and cutting wood for pallisading. The Madras

Sappers have nearly completed a substantial bridge across the Kangsa, and the road from that to Matang is now in fair order.

A great many of the soldiers employ their spare time in fishing, and they are encouraged in this pastime by the large number they manage to kill.

On arrival of the 80th at Malacca it is stated that the 10th Regiment will proceed in the Himalaya to Gibraltar. One hundred Goorkhas arrived here yesterday, and 100 more are expected to-day. This scarcely looks like leaving the country, but we all sincerely hope that it is the first step towards it.—Pioneer Correspondent.

STATION TALK.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 14.—The difficulties that beset Indian legislators were well instanced the other day in the case of the Abkarree Act passed by the Bengal Council. A clause is inserted in this Act, modelled on those of the Tippling Acts at home, to prevent sellers of spirits and intoxicating drugs giving credit for small sums. The Bengal Act says that if they do so they shall not be able to sue in any court of law for the amount. When the Act came up to be confirmed by the Governor-General, the question arose as to whether the clause referred to was not ultra vires, on the ground that it interfered with the jurisdiction of the High Court. Forthwith the opinion of four great legal luminaries was taken on this point, to wit, Mr. Hobhouse, Mr. Whiteley Stokes, the Advocate-General, and the Standing Counsel, and they have all recorded notes on this subject, which is one of great difficulty. There was the Indian Councils Act, the High Courts Act, and the Letters Patent to be carefully considered and reconciled, if possible. The lawyers also found themselves compelled to go into the question as to whether the Governor-General's Council could interfere with the jurisdiction of the High Courts. This, some of your readers may remember, had been decided in the affirmative by the late Chief Justice of Bengal in the famous Meares' case; but the decision I believe was never unanimously accepted by the profession. The matter is, of course, of too technical a character for discussion in the columns of a newspaper; but the opinion of the law officers consulted shows how obscure and doubtful the question is. Two of the legal gentlemen agreed that the Governor-General's Council and the Bengal Council could affect the jurisdiction of the High Court, while they denied that the disputed section did so affect it; while the two others were, on the other hand, unanimous that this section did affect the High Court jurisdiction, and that the Bengal Council had no power to pass it. One of the latter also contended that it would have been equally beyond the power of the Governor-General's Council to enact it. The Viceroy, I may mention, has been guided by the opinion of the first two gentlemen, and has assented to the Act. In neither view of the case is the result entirely satisfactory. If the view endorsed by the Viceroy be right, the Bengal Council is armed with enormous powers hitherto unsuspected by the community. If the opposite view be the correct one, on the other hand, the difficulty of framing laws in this country must be greatly increased, and the question whether such or such Act is ultra vires be constantly raised in these Courts.—The new Municipal Bill has been made the subject-matter of consideration at two important meetings on Saturday afternoon. The first, by the British Indian Association, where the speakers indulged at great length in an examination of the sections of the new Bill. As might have been supposed, sections twenty-two and fifty eight, by which the local Government attempt to secure an absolute control over the acts of the proposed commissioners, were freely discussed, and universally condemned. In my last letter I described with some minuteness the main provisions of the Bill, and am glad to find that my views are shared by the majority of the speakers, European and native, who addressed the meeting. The chairman of the meeting is plain spoken enough in his comments, and does not hesitate to brand the Bill as a delusion and a gigantic snare. The present justices are for the most part men who have been appointed to the office on account of the weighty interests they represent in this city, and it is only too apparent that the present dissatisfaction with the conduct of municipal affairs arises for the most part from the well-grounded feeling of irritation against the manner and extent of Government interference. The most able apologist for the Government scheme must acknowledge that the new Bill, if passed, practically leaves all the power in the hands of the authorities. The commissioners at best are mere puppets, controlled absolutely by supreme will. It is small consolation to be told that this power will only be used on rare occasions. The very fact of its existence, or its present arbitrary form must in itself be a continuous cause of apprehension to the new commissioners, and cannot fail to paralyse their best efforts at independent action, while the first attempt at the exercise of such power would infallibly be a signal for a general resignation.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIR JOHN STRACHEY.—The Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces has returned to Allahabad from Agra, after inspecting the new Mattra and Hattras Railway, and the inscriptions of the temple at Brindaban, on the way.

THE CALCUTTA CENSUS.—The Justices have resolved to take the census of Calcutta in March. The superintendence of the Census operations has been placed in the hands of Mr. Beverley, who took the general census of Bengal on a consolidated salary of Rs. 1,500.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.—In December last 994 emigrants left the port of Calcutta for Demerara and the French West Indian Colonies, there having been no emigration to Trinidad, Jamaica, Natal, or Mauritius during the month. Nearly all the emigrants came from Behar, the North-Western Provinces, and Oudh, 846 of them being Hindus, and 148 Mohammedans.

THE MINT.—It appears that during the last few months a pretty large amount of small silver coins, viz., four-anna and two-anna pieces, which are generally in great demand in the market, have been issued by Government. We now read that instructions have lately been issued to the Calcutta Mint authorities to strike off half-rupee pieces to the extent of about seven lakhs of rupees.

KUCH BAHAR.—Advices from Kuch Bahar, dated February 10, state that both Captain T. H. Lewin, the Deputy Commissioner, and the State Surgeon, intend shortly to proceed on leave, the former for six months, and the latter for two years; and that the Assistant Surgeon is talked of as likely to be appointed to officiate as State Surgeon during the absence of the permanent incumbent.

LEGISLATIVE.—At the meeting of the Bengal Council on Saturday, February 12, Babu Ram Sankar Sen took his seat as member. The report of the Committee on the Registration of Possessory Titles Bill was presented, and after some discussion, the Bill was ordered to be republished as amended. The report on the Mufasal Municipalities Bill was also presented, but the consideration of it was postponed, as the members had not had time to consider the alterations.

JUDICIAL.—Sir Richard Temple proposes to do away with ameens as the agents of civil courts in local investigations. He would have additional munsiffs for work of this kind, which is eminently judicial in character, and at present very badly performed. Only for the investigation of accounts would he permit the employment of non-judicial commissioners. A licensed class of accountants, such as flourishes in connection with the Scotch Bar, is what we want in India. These suggestions are deserving of much consideration.—Pioneer.

CIVIL PROCEDURE.—One of the proposals made by Sir Richard Temple in his recent Administration Report in connection with Civil Procedure is, that the English practice of taking evidence by affidavit before some official other than the judge of the Court should be extended to the mofussil. This may be convenient at times; but looking to the well-known habits of native judges who, even to this day, frequently leave the examination of witnesses to their amlah, and carry on thus two or three cases at a time, the temptation of demanding affidavits would, we fear, be serious. Oral examination would be unduly shirked.

A NEW INVENTION.—The capacity of the natives for invention is usually considered to be not very great; but the Madras Times says a native weaver in Bengal has just made an invention, which bespeaks considerable ingenuity. It is "a sort of a loom in which he can sew coats and pantaloons, and other dresses whatever," and the process by which this is done is thus described by one who has personally inspected the invention:—"At first he cuts the cloth into shapes, and puts them into his loom; and they come out well sewed; and the seams are quite unperceivable unless we touch them by our hands, and they are like thick threads. The cloths are sooner and better sewed into than in the sewing machines."

DEATH OF COLONEL LEEDS.—We regret to hear of the death of Colonel Sir Edward Leeds, Bart., of the Bengal Staff Corps, and Executive Engineer, Public Works Department, at Kalka, on the 16th Feb. The deceased officer joined the Bengal Army in 1844, being posted to the 47th Regiment N.I., and was present with his corps throughout the Satlaj campaign of 1845-46, including the affair at Baddiwal and the actions of Aliwal and Sobraon, for which he had the medal and clasp. His remains were interred at Kussowlie cemetery with military honours on the 17th Feb. Lady Leeds is left with a youthful family, the eldest son succeeding to the baronetcy.

FORTUNE-TELLING.—An exceedingly curious instance of fortune-telling by a fakir, known as Jan Sahib, well known to the superstitious of Calcutta as well as Howrah, appears in the columns of the Englishman. A person who had lost sundry gold ornaments was advised to go to Jan Sahib, with a view to discovering the person who had stolen the articles, as also the whereabouts of the lost property itself. The fakir, upon being informed of the case, consulted a chart, on which were traced, in representation of the heavenly bodies and the signs of the zodiac, a number of stars, rudely painted figures, and hieroglyphics; then, turning to the person who had come to seek his aid, deliberately, and in a most confident manner, informed him that the person who had committed the theft was in his employ, and would be known by a particular mark on his back, bearing similarity to one of those represented upon the chart. As to the lost property, it was shown as being mortgaged in the shop of a certain poddar. Strange to say, the information thus received, at the small cost of two pice, was in every particular found to be correct, and the property was easily recovered.

BENGAL COUNCIL.—The Englishman states that Mr. Fitzgerald, barrister-at-law, a nephew and pupil of Sir Henry Thring, the well known parliamentary draftsman (not Mr. Fitzpatrick, as stated by the Indian Daily News), has been offered the appointment of Secretary to the Bengal Legislative Council, with the promise of the reversion of the appointment of Secretary to the Government of India in the Legislative Department should Mr. Whitley Stokes go on leave, or retire. The object of the appointment is said to be to provide a competent successor to Mr. Stokes, when that gentleman relinquishes his post, as a draftsman brought straight out from England would necessarily be deficient in Indian experience, which Mr. Fitzgerald will gain by his connection with the Bengal Council.

DESTRUCTION OF TIMBER.—We (Darjiling News) must enter a protest against what we cannot help calling the utterly wanton destruction of ornamental forest and jungle in this district. A few years ago there were many roads in this district which were noted for the picturesque beauty and striking luxuriance of the vegetation which bordered them and afforded grateful shelter to passengers; amongst others might have been noted the road from Kurseong to Punkabaree, and a portion of the Eastern Lebong road. Unfortunately, the land on, at all events, one side of each of these roads is owned by tea companies; and as these corporate bodies have neither a soul to be saved, a corpus vile to be punished, or an eye for the picturesque, everything has been sacrificed, and we think without any reason, to tea, or either to charcoal and tea combined.

WEATHER AND CROPS.—The Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 17th February, 1876, that the only rain reported during the week is a light fall in Delhi, Umballa, Jullunder, Lahore and Rawulpindi in the Punjab, slight showers in Bhurtpore, Ajmere and Jeypore, and a few drops in Sylhet. In Madras and Mysore prospects continue unimproved. In Bombay the rabi harvest is in progress; the outturn is expected to be fair. The rabi harvest has also commenced in the Central Provinces and Berar; prospects are good. In Rajpootana and Central India the crops promise well. In Bengal the rice crop is now all reaped, and the harvesting of the rabi has begun; rain is much required for such crops as remain on the ground. Rain is said to be urgently wanted in Upper Assam. Prospects are reported good from the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, but rain is required, and in the Punjab more rain would also be beneficial.

PRESIDENCY BANKS BILL.—We (Indian Daily News) have good reason for stating that the Presidency Banks Bill has been finally considered in Select Committee, and will be passed into law at the next sitting of the Council. The new Bill does not appear to have attracted much notice, or to have caused much discussion, and yet there are points connected with the extension of business of these banks which deserve looking into. In reference to them the practical remarks and suggestions of the Hon. Rajah Narendra Krishna Bahadoor, in his speech when the Bill was introduced into the Council, are very suggestive. There is no doubt there should be a Government element associated with the management of these banks. We have good reason for stating that such an association would be satisfactory to the non-official classes connected with their management. The Bill is now passing through the Select Committee of the Legislative Council, and will, we believe, be passed into law at an early date. If the Rajah's suggestion is to have the support it merits, those interested have no time to lose.

RAILWAY CONFERENCE.—A somewhat important conference of officers concerned in the administration of Indian railways was to assemble in Allahabad on Wednesday last, the local paper says, to discuss a variety of subjects of interest in connection therewith. Mr. Roberts, the Officiating Agent, and Mr. Batchelor, the Traffic Manager, will represent the East Indian Railway. Colonel Jenkins, the Agent, assisted by Messrs. Payne and Hederstedt, C.E., the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway. Colonel Williams, R.E., Director-General, and Captain Pye, Manager of the Rajpootana line, will attend on behalf of the State Railways, and Colonel A. Fraser, C.B., Major Thomason, and Captain Shepherd, R.E., as exponents of the provincial Light Railway system, the first fruits of which are represented by the Hatrass and Muttra experiment, of good promise. Colonel Taylor, Major Staunton, and Major de Bourbel, R.E., will be among the officers of the consulting staff present; and there is a prospect of Mr. Rendel also joining the fray.—Bombay Gazette, Feb. 28.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE'S COUNCIL.—The Lieutenant-Governor is not obliged to select all his Councillors from any particular class of the people, and no special objection, therefore, can be taken to his Honour's last nominee, Babu Ramsanker Rao, a Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector in the 24-Pergunnahs. But, we apprehend, the Bengal Legislative Council, as at present constituted, is not strictly in accordance with the law under which it is established. The Indian Councils Act of 1867 distinctly provides that not less than one-third of the number of Councillors of the Provincial Legislature shall be non-officials, and the term "non-official" is described elsewhere in the Act as meaning a person who is not in the Civil or Military service of the Crown in India. Of the eleven members who now compose the Council only three are non-officials, and, therefore, it may be a question whether the proceedings of last Saturday's Council are valid. Fortunately, however, no Bill was passed last Saturday—in fact, only one was provisionally considered—otherwise the Government might have found itself in a rather awkward predicament.—Englishman.

HANDBOOK OF LAHOR.—One of the novelties on the occasion of the Prince's visit—how very stale that phrase has become—was a handbook of Lahor, published the day before the arrival of the illustrious guests, and of which a copy was presented to each on arrival. It is partly a reprint of a little work published some ten years ago by Mr. Thornton, the Secretary to the Punjab Government; but it is edited and continued up to the present day in a manner of which it is hard to speak too highly. A book of the sort cannot be reviewed; it can only be praised or blamed—more generally the latter. Guide-books in general, and more especially local guide-books, seem to contain a maximum of what you do not, nor could possibly want to know, and an almost imperceptible minimum of what you do. Now, the present little volume in the brief compass of eighty pages, entitled "Lahore as it Is," seems to give all the information that could be interesting, not only to a traveller, but even to a resident, about Lahor; nor am I aware that a single object of interest is left unnoticed. Sixty pages more, entitled "Lahore as it Was," gives a succinct epitome of the history of the city and of the province, while some twenty introductory pages on vernacular literature, verses, and proverbs, deserve more extended notice, and I hope to return to it at some future time.

PRESENTATION OF A TESTIMONIAL TO DR. F. N. MACNAMARA, F.R.G.S., F.C.C., &C., ON HIS LEAVING CALCUTTA.—The students and graduates of the Medical College, Calcutta, presented Dr. Macnamara, on the occasion of his retiring from the service, with an address and testimonial, in remembrance of his long connection with the college. In the address allusion is made to the deep sorrow which they feel at the prospect of his final departure from India, and to his long and useful career in the country, and they express their admiration and gratitude at the very high tone of morality, and the heartfelt sympathy and kindness which have uniformly characterised all his actions towards them. Reference is also made to the Doctor's high qualifications as a chemist, and to his thorough devotion to the welfare and progress of the College, as well as to his able report on the utilisation of the Sealdah Pauper Hospital for the chemical instruction of the vernacular class, which has resulted in the establishment of the Campbell Medical School and Hospital, to the introduction by Dr. Macnamara of a systematic course of analysis of drinking waters, which has gradually led to better supplies, and thus effected improvements in one of the primary necessaries of life, and to the use of his filter by the Government for barracks and hospitals, which has not only contributed to the comfort of the inmates, but, by stopping preventible diseases, has been the means of saving thousands of human lives. The address concludes by hoping that Dr. Macnamara's memory will be inseparably connected with the institution in which he has worked so long and so admirably, by his permitting them to found an annual medal for chemistry in his name; and as another act of favour, the acceptance of a remembrance in the shape of a small silver tea-service. Dr. Macnamara made a suitable reply, thanking the students and graduates for their kind and flattering address, and for their beautiful present, which would remind him most pleasantly of them all; and he also expressed his gratification at their intention to connect the occasion with a prize for first year's students in chemistry. He took leave of them all with many expressions of goodwill.

THE COLAR GOLD FIELDS.

The daily increasing demand for information respecting these gold-fields led us the other day to book ourselves per Madras Railway to Colar-road Station, which is no doubt in the future destined to become a very busy depot. The town of Colar is some twelve miles distant from the station, but there is a small village, Bowring Pett, close by. Leaving this place to the left we strike on to the Bangalore-road, which being very good nearly the whole way to the fields affords great facility for the transit of plant, machinery, timber, &c. In several places may be seen huge boulders piled up in majestic grandeur, evident proofs of the violent convulsions of nature, which in ages past have assisted in forming the different strata, of which we shall hereafter have occasion to speak. About five miles from Bowring Pett we leave the road, and crossing a wild and rugged country, which is mountainous and gully riven, we begin to find marked indications of the auriferous quartz reefs, which seem to form a perfect net-work extending in a N.W. direction as far as the Mulvagol range, a distance of nearly twenty miles. The large concession which the present company have been fortunate enough to obtain from the Mysor Government will find employment for a large party of prospectors for many years to come. About eight miles from the starting point we come to the spot selected by the Ooregum Gold Mining Company for the commencement of their operations. Here the tents of the mining engineers are pitched, and with the surrounding blacksmiths' shops, coolie huts, and other erections, form quite a lively picture in contrast to the barren and parched up appearance of the surrounding country, which from the recent drought looks literally scorched up.

The accumulation of machinery, timber, stores, &c., struck us as being indicative of the energetic manner in which the Company intend to carry out this undertaking. Three shafts are already being sunk, one main and two auxiliary; the main shaft will, it is expected, cut the reef at about sixty feet. The formation of this field was after the great upheaving of the chain of hills which now stand over the plains of the Carnatic. It is of an aquous formation, and was thrown into its present position by magnetic forces, the current passing from E. to W. until it met with a point of resistance in the granite, where it disrupted and threw up a slight barrier of hills. The auriferous quartz reef running parallel to the geological axis or zone of the field, which runs nearly N. and S., the dip of the reef being in all cases to the W. above the water line. The chloride spish slate strata is decomposed, and judging from the hills on the W. becomes very hard at a depth of eighty feet. The field contains magnetic iron ore, magnesium, lime stone, blue slate, and towards the N. boundary thin seams of bitumous shale, lying in the cleavage of sandstone, clearly showing that heavy foliage existed on the hills at some remote period, at a distance from the large lake, as the shale is found in regular layers of foliage in the sandstone, the shale being formed by the leaves and smaller branches which were brought down by the storm water with the debris from the hills each year.

These gold fields are not, as many people seem to imagine, a new discovery, for on tracing back the history of the gold fields of Mysor we find that in the year A.D. 1293 Allariddin, the commander of the Emperor of Delhi, in invading Mysor in that year, returned with his army to Delhi literally laden with gold, which incited him after, when Emperor of Delhi, to send a force to make a second incursion on Mysor, with similar results. It was on this very spot that the celebrated Hyder and his son Tippoo erected their mints, the ruins of which are to be seen to this day. The native workmen employed by these princes and their predecessors could never have worked to a greater depth than seventy feet. These natives worked without timbering or pumps in large open workings, keeping down the water by the passing of chatties from hand to hand, and in almost every case where they made an attempt to go to the depth of eighty feet, one or more fell a victim to their ignorance of mining. In one old shaft, called by the natives Iniagunning, lay the bones of two natives who were buried beneath by a fall of the foot or hanging walls of the reef. Only a short distance from this is another shaft, called Boodthy gunny, meaning alluvial shaft or pit, in which four natives were killed. In consequence of these and other fatalities General Sir Mark Cubbin, when commissioner of Mysor, issued a strict prohibition against any further subterraneous workings by the natives, but granted permission for alluvial washings and sweepings of the surface with brooms which is the only means which have been employed by the natives to collect gold for the past twenty-seven years; but still with this very primitive method of gold finding we hear of some natives who have amassed considerable quantities. In the village of Ooregum, which is only about a mile distant from the gold field, the wife of the former gowda of the village, the present Gowdsance is well-known to have in her possession an enormous amount of gold—the quantity is stated in maunds—and she is now the great sowcar or money-lender to the town of Colar. There is, therefore, every prospect that with thoroughly practically miners and an energetic manager this company will in a short time be paying a very handsome dividend. The works at present being only quite in their infancy it is almost impossible to form any idea as to the actual result of this speculation, but from the report of the Australian gold assayer to whom a portion of the quartz taken from this field was sent, there is every reason to believe the field is one of great richness; and the fact of its being 3,800 feet above the level of the sea makes the climate everything that could be desired for Europeans.—Madras Athenæum.

Miscellaneous.

FANCY BALL.—A fancy dress ball was given by Lady Grenville at the Banqueting Hall on the night of Feb. 25, which was numerously attended by the elite of Madras society.

TRIAL BY JURY.—The Chief Commissioner of Burmah has directed that in all trials by jury before the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon, and of the Judge of the town of Moulmein, the jury shall consist of five persons.

WOODS IN TENASSERIM.—Messrs. Lee and Whittal are at present engaged examining the Lenya District woods. The former gentleman is said to have collected specimens of 309 species of wood in and around the Tenasserim District.

THE BANK.—At a special general meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Madras, held at the Bank's offices in Popham's Broadway, on Wednesday last, Mr. Ernest Barclay was elected a director in the room of the late Mr. H. G. Prichard.—Madras Athenæum, Feb. 26.

BANGALOR BEER.—Bangalor beer, the Bangalor Examiner tells us, manufactured at that place, is finding favour with native consumers, and gradually though certainly displacing the consumption of date-toddy, which latter has hitherto yielded a large revenue to Government, while the former is very lightly taxed, namely, two annas a gallon. The toddy contractors of the Nundidroog Division, having at last awakened to the above fact, have applied for a licence to have a brewery of their own.

COCHIN.—Mr. Henry Hudson has been appointed Chief Engineer of Cochin, in succession to Mr. Macdonald, who held charge for a few years. The Cochin State, with a revenue of twelve or thirteen lakhs, spends Rs. 250,000 for public works in each year. The newly-appointed Engineer is likely to undertake some large works which are necessary for the improvement of communications between one part of the province and another.

THE GOVERNOR.—Madras is still without its Governor, who has now gone on a flying visit to Benares and Delhi. His Grace comes back to Calcutta, whence he returns to Madras by sea. Calcutta society is said to have received a great accession of strength in the arrival there of the Duke of Buckingham and Lady Anna Gore Langton, and it is a great time for local engineers, civil and military, for his Grace is partial to their profession and eager to receive information. Several dinners, an evening party, and a ball are to be given at Government House in his honour, and at these entertainments engineers are to muster strong. His Grace leaves Calcutta or Madras on Tuesday.—Madras Times, Feb. 26.

SANITARY.—The heat of the weather is sensibly increasing, and we shall not long enjoy even the cool mornings which we now have. There is no sign of rain, and a little just now to keep down the dust will be appreciated. Thursday was a remarkably hot day, and in the afternoon there was a dust storm. Regarding the public health we have still to report unfavourably. Small-pox is on the increase, and cholera continues to commit ravages; one of its victims during the week has been the young man Leigh, the accused in the Accountant-General's Office theft case, the prosecution in which has come to a sudden termination by his death. The case involved important interests, and the result was anxiously looked forward to by more than one party; but whether the investigations into the daring theft that has been committed will be allowed to thoroughly collapse with the death of Leigh we cannot say, though, as far as we can see at present, there seems to be no help for such a result.—Madras Times, Feb. 26.

CHURCH CONFERENCE.—An important as well as interesting event, which took place on Thursday evening, was the Madras Church Conference, at which the Right Reverend the Bishop presided, and several addresses were delivered by various clergymen. The first subject that was brought forward was, Caste in the Native Church, should it be ignored or tolerated? Dr. Bower read an able and elaborate essay on the subject, in which, after dwelling on the advantages and disadvantages of tolerating caste, he concluded by expressing his opinion in favour of toleration. Dr. Pope, who next addressed the Conference, took an opposite view, and was followed by other speakers, some of whom were for, and others against the toleration of caste in the native church; and the discussion on this subject ended in the Reverend Chairman coming to the conclusion that there were difficulties in connection with the question, and that it should be left to each person to use moral persuasion in putting down the evil; but his lordship could not see that, when a person embraced Christianity, he should at once be required to renounce caste. The next subject for consideration was Parochical Missions, and how they may be conducted with a view to reach the non-church-going classes of the English-speaking population. The Revds. Messrs. Fenn and Rivington spoke on the subject, and offered suggestions as to how the mission should be got up and conducted so as to prove successful. There was a third subject also for consideration, which, however, was put off for another meeting.—Madras Times, Feb. 26.

NATIONAL INDIAN ASSOCIATION.—On Monday, Feb. 14, a meeting of the National Indian Association was held in Bombay. The object of the Association is to aid in promoting social progress by spreading in England a knowledge of India, and introducing as far as possible English customs into India. Miss Carpenter explained its objects, after which a Bombay branch was formed, and an influential committee appointed.

CIVIL.—Our Berar correspondent informs us that the Secretary of State has just sanctioned the formation of the Bassein sub-division into a district, and Captain K. Mackenzie, Assistant Commissioner, has been appointed a Deputy Commissioner of the 3rd class. Captain Mackenzie is a very able and energetic officer, and of long standing in Berar. His promotion, we are informed, will be hailed with universal satisfaction in the province. Captain FitzGerald will officiate as Deputy Commissioner of Bassein during the time the former officer holds charge of the Oomrawuttee district.—Times of India.

MILITARY.—The 55th (Westmoreland) Regiment, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel J. R. Hume, embarked on Feb. 27th on board the troop-ship Euphrates for Aden, to relieve the 25th Regiment 2nd battalion proceeding on to England. The 55th landed in India in October, 1863, and has now completed its third tour of service in that country. Its last tour of service was in the Madras Presidency, from whence they served in the Coorg campaign in 1834, and afterwards went on to China, where they served in 1841-42, under the command of Colonel Sir James Schoodde. From Aden the 55th will proceed home next year.

PILGRIM VESSELS.—The Bombay Government is known to be very careful about the admission into its ports of pilgrim vessels from Mecca. It was perhaps owing to the prompt measures taken by it some months ago that western and south-western India escaped a visitation of the plague. But the letter recently published by the famous traveller, Captain Burton, seems to prove that a little more might be done in the way of inspecting vessels before they leave the Indian ports. In the first place, they appear to be, as a rule, by far too crowded. In the vessel mentioned by "Hajee" Burton, there were about 800 people in a ship fit only to accommodate a third of the number. The skippers and owners may very forcibly contend that the human cargo is always pretty sure to grow considerably lighter in the course of the voyage; and in the above-named vessel twenty-two persons, it seems, died in the space of about a fortnight,—a rather small number, however, considering the favourable conditions for high mortality.—Pioneer.

ARRIVAL OF THE "SERAPIS."—H.M.S. Serapis, Captain the Hon. Carr Glynn, arrived in harbour on Monday morning from Calcutta. She left Calcutta on Wednesday, the 9th of February, but remained at the Sandheads until Friday, the 11th, for the arrival of the captain. She left the Sandheads the following evening, accompanied by the Osborne as far as Trincomalee. She arrived there on Monday, the 14th, where the Osborne put in for coals, the Serapis proceeding on her way. On Wednesday evening she passed Galle, having been abreast of the P. and O. steamer from Calcutta all that day. On Friday night she passed the Narcissus, Immortalité, Newcastle, and Topaze, H.M.'s ships belonging to the Flying Squadron, standing southward, bound for China. On Sunday evening she arrived off the outer light vessel, and came into harbour on Monday morning. The Serapis has enjoyed beautiful weather all the way round. The Osborne left Trincomalee on Tuesday last, and arrived in harbour on Wednesday. The Serapis has on board a small menagerie, consisting of a couple of remarkably handsome young tigers, two elephants, some spotted deer, some peculiar specimens of the canine race in the shape of dogs without tails, also a fine fellow belonging to the same species from Bhotan. Besides these, there are on board a diminutive pony, some small Neilgherry bullocks, monkeys, and a host of other things, all presents to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales during his travels in India.—Times of India, Feb. 28.

NAVAL.—H.M.S. Diamond, Captain Bosanquet, arrived in Bombay on Wednesday last from England, having come out to take the place of H.M.S. Briton on the Indian station. The Briton recently returned home, after having spent five years on the station. The Diamond came out round the Cape, and had fair weather, and made a good voyage. Some little excitement was caused on her arrival, as she came under sail and seemed likely at one time to collide with some of the men-of-war at present in the harbour, but by excellent management she weathered her difficulties, and finally brought up in proximity to the buoy she aimed for. The Royal Yacht Osborne, which left Calcutta on the 11th inst. in company with the Serapis, but was detained at Trincomalee, in order to coal, arrived in Bombay Harbour at five o'clock on Thursday afternoon. The Osborne has on board a small menagerie, consisting of a full grown panther, two fine hog deer, two Burmese ponies, two cheetah cubs, and four couples of hounds; and it is expected that additions will be made to it before she leaves Bombay, which she is expected to do, with the Serapis, on the 12th of March. Malabar, 4,173 tons, Captain E. Kelly, arrived in harbour on Tuesday last from Portsmouth, which port she left on the 21st January, Malta 1st and Suez 7th instant. She experienced fine weather throughout the voyage, and during the voyage there were three deaths. She brought 72 officers, 13 ladies, and 10 children ; 1,053 men, 123 women, and 140 children.—Bombay Gazette, Feb. 28.

MR. C. CURREY.—Mr. Charles Currey, who succeeded Mr. J. B. Lane as general managing agent of the Bombay and Baroda Railway in 1865, goes home on the 13th March in the Hydaspes to take up the appointment of secretary to the company. During the ten years of his administration in this country he has given abundant proofs of that intimate acquaintance with the details of railway work to which he originally owed his selection for the post of agent ; and it is just possible that General Sam Browne, who recently denounced with so much fury the alleged shortcomings of the Bombay and Baroda Railway, does not know so well how to manage a line as the object of his objurgations admittedly does. The Government of India holds a different opinion, as we all know, but then the Government of India is occasionally wrong in its views of matters in this Presidency. Mr. Currey, who is now going to England to become the secretary to an Indian railway company, some years ago very nearly obtained the position of secretary to one of the great English railway companies. There were forty-five competitors for the responsible and lucrative post, and by a process of selection the number was reduced to twenty. Mr. Currey was in that number ; it was reduced to ten ; he was one of the ten ; to five, and he was one of the five ; to two, and he was one of the two. But then his good fortune failed him ; he was not the one of the two that succeeded. Still the fact that he distanced forty-three competitors in such a competition showed that his qualifications for railway administrative work were even at that time very high indeed, and now that ten years of Indian experience has been acquired, it must be allowed that the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company has got a very competent secretary in succession to Mr. Baynes. As our readers are aware, Mr. Currey was the first chairman of the Bombay Town Council, the Government having conferred that honourable civic post upon him when the Town Council was called into existence. He held the office until he went home last year on leave, when Captain Henry succeeded him as chief of our Municipal Senate. We wish Mr. Currey a pleasant voyage, and many happy years in the country to whose temperate bosom he returns.—Times of India, Feb. 28.

Ceylon.

REVENUE.—The actual revenue of Ceylon for the year 1875 was £1,444,134, giving a net increase of £119,805 over the revenue of the previous year.

WATER SUPPLY.—Definite action is being taken in regard to the water-supply of Colombo. At a recent meeting of the Council it was found that extra taxation would not be required this year, and the subject of further taxation has been postponed. The limit of supply of water for each individual, in the original estimate, has been reduced from thirty gallons per diem to twenty.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.—The stagnation of promotion which exists in the upper circles of the Civil Service, caused to a great extent by the introduction of "fresh blood" into the best posts by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, is now attracting attention in Ceylon. The belief that a stranger is to be called in to fill the Auditor-General's (soon-to-be-vacant) place, instead of a step being given to the service, has directed renewed attention to the subject. Attention to the question of salaries is also drawn from the fact that to those who have to remit to England a rupee represents less than 1s. 9d.

MR. W. BOWDEN SMITH.—Another resident, highly esteemed for many good qualities, has left our shores—Mr. W. Bowden Smith. He is, with his family, a passenger by the Malda to Galle, on his way to Europe by Messageries steamer Anadyr. His place in Council will be filled by an untried man ; his place in society will not be so readily occupied. We will hope, however, to welcome him back again to Ceylon, when twelve months of rest amongst friends and familiar scenes shall have prepared him for another period in the tropics.—Ceylon Times, Feb. 23.

PLANTERS' ASSOCIATION.—The annual meeting of the Planters' Association was held at Kandy on Wednesday, and was the largest that has ever been. The principal feature in the gathering, and in the direction of the resolutions adopted, was probably the preponderating influence of the younger coffee districts, and the younger members of the planting community. A new chairman was chosen in the person of Mr. H. S. Saunders, under an idea that that gentleman was more thorough in his desire for railway extension to Ouvah and Dimbulla than Mr. Wall, which appears to us removed by Mr. Wall's utterances on the occasion. For the Planters' seat in the Legislative Council three gentlemen were proposed :—Mr. Northmore, the Chairman, Mr. Saunders, and Mr. Downall. The Chairman withdrew, and only the mover and seconder voted for Mr. Northmore, Mr. Downall's election was therefore almost unanimous. The resolution carried on the question of the day—railway extension—was that a memorial showing the feeling of the planting community concerning railway extension be presented to the Governor, with a request that he will forward the same to the Secretary of State ; the memorial to embody the imperative necessity of immediate extension to Matale on the one hand, and Ouvah, via Dickoya and Dimboola, on the other, there being no question amongst the engineers that Ouvah should be reached by the districts named. The Chairman, Secretary, and planting member were appointed a Committee to draft such memorial and circulate it for signature among planters generally.

FIRE AT SEA.—Information was received at South Shields on Thursday night that the ship China, belonging to that port, while on a voyage from Calcutta to Leith, with jute, was destroyed by fire. No news of the crew having landed anywhere has yet come to hand.

DEATH OF GENERAL BERESFORD.—General Beresford died at his residence, Beauchamp-house, Leamington, late on Thursday night, in his seventy-seventh year. He entered the army in 1817, and served for many years in India, where, in 1854, he was on the staff of Sir Harry Fane. By his death the colonelcy of the 20th Foot becomes vacant.

THE "STRATHCLYDE."—On Sunday afternoon, at five o'clock, the body of Captain J. Clinton Greene, Royal Artillery, was washed ashore at Deal. The body of Mrs. Greene, wife of that unfortunate gentleman, was picked up by the smack Crest, off the Kentish Knock, on Sunday, the 20th of last month, three days after the collision. These are the only bodies yet recovered.

INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The directors of the Indo-European Telegraph Company will recommend a dividend for the half-year ending the 31st December last of 2½ per cent., making, with that already paid, 5 per cent. for the twelve months, and to place £6,000 to a reserve fund, carrying over £808. 19s. 3d. to the current year.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday, the 15th inst.; but the only amounts allotted were :—To Calcutta, £10,000, and to Bombay £20,000. Tenders at 1s. 9d. will receive in full. Bar silver remains at 4s. 6½d. per ounce, at which price it is a cheaper mode of remittance to India by one per cent. than bills at 1s. 9d.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The exports to the East by the steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company since our last publication were as follows :—From Southampton, per Khedive, March 9—Silver, to Bombay, £152,500; to Calcutta, £66,000; to Shanghai, £10,185. Per Malwa, March 16, silver, to Bombay, £106,400.

THE TRANSFORT SERVICE.—The Himalaya troopship, Capt. W. B. Grant, after completing her service between India and the Straits Settlements, is under orders to call at Bombay about the 20th proximo, for the purpose of embarking the officers and crew of the Rifleman for passage to England, on being relieved by the ship's company taken out by the Orontes. It is expected that the Himalaya will bring the young elephant and the collection of singing birds presented to the Prince of Wales, and his numerous hunting trophies.

ADVOCATE-GENERAL OF BENGAL.—Lord G. HAMILTON, in answer to Mr. FORSYTH, said the Government of India had appointed a committee to consider the expediency of filling up the office of Advocate-General of Bengal, and that the report of that committee had been the subject of a correspondence between the Secretary of State for India and the Governor-General. The details of the scheme were not yet settled, and it would, he thought, be unwise, pending their settlement, to make any declaration on the subject.

MAILS FOR JAPAN AND CHINA, VIA SAN FRANCISCO.—An alteration has taken place in the days appointed for the sailing of the United States Mail packets from San Francisco for Japan and China. Those packets now sail from San Francisco on the 1st and 16th of the month, instead of every alternate Saturday, as formerly. Correspondence for Japan and China intended to be forwarded by this route must be specially addressed "vid San Francisco," and, in order to ensure its arrival at San Francisco in time for the packet, should be posted fully three weeks before the date fixed for sailing from that port.

THE ORDER OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE.—(COLONIAL OFFICE, March 13.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to make the following appointments to the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George :—To be Ordinary Members of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders: Charles Peter Layard, Esq., C.M.G., Government Agent for the Western Province of the Island of Ceylon. To be Ordinary Members of the Third Class, or Companions of the said Order: John Gardiner Austin, Esq., Colonial Secretary for the Colony of Hong Kong; Charles Hutton Gregory, Esq., C.E., Past President of the Institution of Civil Engineers, and Consulting Engineer for various works in the Colonies; Hoo ah Kay (Whampoa), Esq., Member of the Legislative Council of the Straits Settlements.

SLAVERY IN EAST AFRICA.—A meeting of the East African Slave Trade Committee assembled at the residence of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, in Stratton-street, on Tuesday last. His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury occupied the chair. Several ladies of the committee, Sir John Kennaway, M.P., Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton, Major-General Rigby, and Mr. John Murray were also present. The Bishop of Ripon, the Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, Bishop Ryan, Vicar of Bradford, and others were prevented from being present. Mr. Hutchinson, secretary of the Church Missionary Society, read the proclamation of the Sultan of Zanzibar abolishing slavery and the slave trade within his dominions; and an address of congratulation and thanks, to be presented to the Sultan, was adopted. A sub-committee was then formed to watch over and stimulate proceedings here and abroad in connection with the objects of the society. The meeting ended with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

DONATION OF ORIENTAL MSS. TO THE EDINBURGH UNIVERSITY.—Mr. John B. Baillie, of Leys, has recently presented to the University a fine collection of Persian, Arabic, and Sanscrit manuscripts, formed by his grandfather, Lieutenant-Colonel John Baillie, who wished them made heirlooms of his estate of Leys. His representatives, however, being desirous that they should be placed in some public institution, have handed them over to the University of Edinburgh under certain conditions, one of which is that they are to be kept separate as the "Leys Collection." Among them is a complete copy of the Mahabharat in the form of a roll 228 feet long, 5½ inches wide, profusely illustrated in colours and gold representing scenes from the poem. The writing (Devanagari character) is very minute, there being twelve lines in every inch. This MS. is perhaps one of the finest of the kind that has reached this country. Another fine MS. is a copy of the "Shah Nameh" of Firdausi, also illustrated with fine paintings of oriental scenes. The rest of the collection consists of historical works, firmans beautifully illuminated, &c., and numbers in all about 125 volumes.—Scotsman.

LAW REPORTING IN INDIA.—Under the auspices of the East India Association a meeting of gentlemen interested in the affairs of India was held on Wednesday last at the Rooms of the Association, Westminster, the topic for consideration being the inexpediency of legislation on the subject of law reporting in India. Mr. D. Sutherland in opening the discussion urged that the present system in India put arbitrary limits upon what should have full and free scope for development, and was analogous to putting a censorship on the press, or an embargo on the free expression of opinion; for judicial decisions are to law very much what public opinion is to Government, and a monopoly in law reporting would leave the Legislature in the same kind and degree of darkness as a censorship on the press would leave the executive. No reason had been or could be given why that which is considered unnecessary, inexpedient, and impolitic in England should be otherwise regarded in India. The only sufficient safeguard against abuses is competition, the existence of independent publications which will bring to light judgments improperly suppressed, and render such suppression too perilous to be attempted. Mr. Sutherland therefore contended that the establishment of a Government monopoly of law reporting is a matter calculated to be prejudicial to the public interests and welfare of the inhabitants of India generally, and that the East India Association should use its influence to procure her Majesty's disallowance of the law lately passed by the Governor-General in Council giving Legislative sanction to the monopoly in question. In the discussion which followed, the speakers generally coincided with the views expressed by Mr. Sutherland.

THE FALL IN SILVER.—At the House of the Society of Arts, on Monday evening, the discussion on Mr. Seyd's paper, in which the double standard of gold and silver was advocated, read last week on the above subject, was resumed under the presidency of Lord Alfred S. Churchill. Colonel Smyth did not think that they would have to part with their silver in India, even if they had a gold currency. Nor did he think it would be impossible to introduce a gold standard into India, although it might be so to introduce a gold currency. Sir Hector Hay argued that the production of gold and silver was not in excess of the requirements of the world. The value of gold and silver was purely conventional, and the proportion of fifteen to one had been established by custom. The extreme depression in the value of silver had been caused by German demonetisation; and if people, four years ago, knew how little silver Germany possessed, silver would not have gone down to 52½d. He (Sir Hector Hay) quoted figures to show that of late years England consumed one-half the silver which had been produced. He thought any change regarding the rupee would breed discontent amongst the ignorant classes of India. Mr. Conybeare agreed with Mr. Seyd that the demonetisation of silver would become prevalent throughout Europe. When England decided upon one standard, the doom of silver was fixed. He did not apprehend that the demonetisation of silver would be half as fatal as Mr. Seyd anticipated. Mr. Wood remarked that people with fixed incomes would be much affected by the depreciation of the currency, and it was a question which a committee sitting in another place ought to look to. Mr. Seyd replied to the objections raised to his paper, and then the proceedings closed with the usual votes of thanks.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, March 13.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Mr. DISRAELI, in answer to Mr. NOEL, said that, after consulting with the Marquis of Salisbury, he had come to the conclusion that it would not be expedient to produce the despatches from India, or extracts, relating to the Royal Titles Bill, chiefly because they were mixed up with political considerations, concerning the particular title to be assumed by the Queen, which had been hitherto scrupulously excluded from the debate.—Upon this Mr. NOEL gave notice that he will move a Resolution declaring it to be inexpedient for her Majesty to assume a title so novel and unpopular.

HOUSE OF LORDS, TUESDAY, March 14.—THE SECRETARY OF STATE AND THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT.—Lord HALIFAX, in calling attention to the papers laid on the table by the Secretary of State for India, complained that in a recent despatch, dated the 11th of November, Lord Salisbury had departed from the principle of governing India as much as possible in India and for Indian interests. That despatch was not calculated to promote good feeling between the Indian Government and the Home Government. Deeming it reasonable in the circumstances of India to preserve whatever revenue existed, he argued against the expediency of reducing or abolishing the import duty on cotton goods, which he did not regard as imposed for the sake of protection, but for the purpose of revenue, yet Lord Salisbury, in his despatch, declared that provision should be made for the removal of the duty within a fixed term of years, whatever might be the condition of the Indian revenue. Upon this point Lord Salisbury and the people of Manchester differed from the people of India, whose feelings deserved the first consideration, and he thought that nothing could be more dangerous than to transfer, as the despatch proposed, the details of legislation in India to the Home Government in England. The despatch would produce a bad effect in India, and he was convinced that to hold India well in hand the influence of the Governor-General and Council ought to be increased rather than diminished.—Lord SALISBURY said that in proposing to deal with the cotton duties the Home Government warned the Government of India not to run any risk of creating a deficiency; but he remarked that the Indian revenue had been a rising revenue, and on general principles the Cotton-tax was liable to objection, it being to some extent a protective duty. He was, therefore, surprised that it was viewed with so much favour by Lord Halifax. Lord Halifax referred to the feelings of the people of India, though it was doubtful how he could know what those feelings were. The vast mass of the Indian population was politically dumb, and what Lord Halifax must mean was not the opinion of the people of India, but the opinion of the Bombay millowners, who, no doubt, took strong views in favour of Protection. There was no tax, Lord Salisbury remarked, which it was more desirable to remit than the Cotton-tax, whenever the finances of India would permit, the question being more an Indian than a Lancashire one, for it was the Hindoo who would be most benefited by its remission, and he, therefore, recommended the Government of India at the earliest fitting opportunity to sweep it away. Proceeding to state the objections he felt to the matter having been considered at Simla and not at Calcutta, he said all he had done was to desire that the Indian Government, before they decided on any particular legislation, should let the Home Government know their views, so that the latter might offer any necessary suggestions. The result then would be that when full communications passed between the two Governments, Indian interests would be represented, and at the same time Imperial considerations would be borne in mind.—The Duke of ARGYLL showed the danger of depriving the Indian Government of the initiative in legislation, and he maintained that the initiative could not proceed from Downing-street. It was objectionable to recommend the Cotton-tax as the first duty to be remitted, without considering the comparative claims of other duties for reduction, and without considering the objections to the export duties. He denied that there was anything improper in the matter being considered and decided at Simla. In alluding to the appointment of Lord Lytton as Governor-General of India, he expressed a hope that Lord Lytton would not consider himself the mere alter ego of the Secretary for India, but would deem it his first duty to consider the interests and benefit of the people of that country from an Imperial point of view, not overlooking the pressure of the Salt-tax in order to spend his first sixpence in the removal of the Cotton-duty for the benefit of Manchester millowners.—The LORD CHANCELLOR felt surprised that the Duke of Argyll should have justified the course taken by Lord Northbrook in having decided the matter at Simla, and he demurred to the conclusion that the initiative in legislation was taken from the Government in India, for all that was required was that the Governor-general should propose his measures in the first instance, and that before they became law they should be sent over to England for the purpose of being considered. He could not conceive how anyone could maintain that a measure altering duties could be passed in India, and without the greatest inconvenience be afterwards vetoed in England by the Secretary for India.—Lord LAWRENCE blamed the course taken by the Government, which, he argued, took away the initiative from the Governor-general in Council, and with regard to the import duty on cotton goods, he believed the people of India had no desire to see it removed.—Lord WINMARLEIGH, admitting that India must be governed with a view to Indian interests, pointed out that it was only proposed to repeal the cotton-duty when the state of the Indian revenue would allow of its removal.—Lord GREY thought it not wise, considering the circumstances of India, to give up the Cotton-tax, producing so large a sum as between £800,000 and £900,000, which, if it operated at all as a protective duty, only did so in a very insignificant degree, and to that extent might be neutralised by the imposition of countervailing duties on Indian machine-made cotton. In his opinion nothing could be more dangerous than to weaken the hands of the Governor-General.—Lord CARNARVON contended that the Secretary for India, having a control over proceedings in India, ought in certain circumstances to exercise that control, and the mode most likely to prevent the chance of collision between the Viceroy and the Home Government was that which was based on ample communications between the two, the Indian Secretary, as Minister of the Crown, being the paramount authority.—Lord GRANVILLE said he had not heard a single word in defence of the recommendation for the abolition of the Cotton duty in preference to the remission of some of the export duties, and he feared that what had occurred was the beginning of a policy for the exclusive government of India from this country, which he thought would have a most injurious effect in India.—The Duke of RICHMOND and GORDON expressed his belief that the course pursued by Lord Salisbury had been a perfectly constitutional course.—After a few words in reply from Lord HALIFAX the discussion terminated.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, March 14.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT asked whether the policy of changing the style and title of the Crown, in the manner recommended by her Majesty's Government, had been submitted for consideration and advice to the Governor-General of India in Council or to the Council of India, so far as such change may affect both the subjects within her Majesty's territories in India and also the rights, dignity and honour of the Native Princes of India as guaranteed to them by the Proclamation of the 1st of November, 1858.—Mr. DISRAELI replied that what he preferred to describe as the addition to, not the change of, the Royal Titles had not been submitted to the Viceroy nor to the Council of India as suggested, because the Government did not believe that it would affect the subjects within her Majesty's territories, nor the rights, dignity and honour of the Native Princes.—Subsequently, Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT gave notice that he would move for a list of the Native Princes with whom her Majesty has Treaties now in force.

COOLIES IN ST. VINCENT.—Mr. ERRINGTON called attention to certain abuses in the treatment of Coolies in the island of St. Vincent, and moved for papers relating to them.—Mr. J. LOWTHER, in acceding to the motion on behalf of the Government, while he dwelt on the importance of Coolie labour to those islands, admitted the necessity of strictly watching the system.—Lord F. CAVENDISH also made some remarks in the same sense.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, March 16.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Mr. DISRAELI moved that the Speaker leave the chair, and was followed by the Marquis of HARTINGTON, who was loudly cheered by the Opposition. The noble lord, starting with the observation that he had taken upon himself the task of moving a hostile amendment with great reluctance, was interrupted by ironical cheering from the Ministerialists. Nothing disconcerted, his lordship proceeded, in a comparatively brief and exceedingly able speech, to marshal and link together the now familiar arguments against the Bill, and to press home the strictures against the mysterious air with which the Premier had invested the proposal, and the questionable arguments with which he had from time to time sought to strengthen it. Kings and queens had, Lord Hartington said, in conclusion, hitherto been good enough for us in England, and it was for the Government to show, as they had not yet shown, how the addition of the title of Empress was to add to the interests of India.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, with an air of warm indignation, declared that the opposition was the result of an "absurd panic," that the cry against the Bill was "really senseless," and that, in fact, the proposed addition of title of Empress was "merely local"—akin, in fact, to the addition of the style of Duke of Cornwall to the titles of the Prince of Wales. Lord Hartington's criticisms on the preamble of the Bill were "quibbles;" Mr. Lowe's speech, delivered in an earlier stage of the Bill, was "dangerous;" whilst Mr. Gladstone's was "far more dangerous."—Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT, who followed, presented the heavy end of his speech first, and was not able to keep the crowded House together. Before he reached the latter half, which was full of sparkle and point, the benches were half empty. Sir William Harcourt's advice to the House generally was to leave well alone; the black coat had founded a much stronger rule in India than had the turban, and it would be better for the Queen to keep the ancient title than to attempt to travesty a foreign one. Mr. Disraeli had argued that the proposed alteration was not a change, but an addition. Sir William Harcourt insisted that it was both, in the sense that if the Pavilion at Brighton were placed on the top of Westminster Abbey that ancient and time-honoured building would be added to and changed.—Mr. PERCY WYNDHAM, rising to continue the debate, completed the desolation, of the House, and its appearance did not revive under the oratory of Sir E. COLEBROOKE or Sir W. FRASER. — Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY, in announcing that the Home Rule members as a body had finally decided to vote with the Opposition, took the opportunity of expressing the hope that such a step would not check in the bud any intention the Prime Minister might be cherishing of seizing the occasion of the Queen's assumption of a new title to grant an amnesty to the Fenian prisoners.—Mr. HERMON, Mr. LAING, Mr. BERESFORD HOPE (who set himself to "brush away all that rubbish about the Antonines,"), Mr. GRANT DUFF, and Mr. CHAPLIN, having addressed the House, Mr. ROEBUCK, rising at ten o'clock, when the benches had begun to fill again, took the opportunity of making a violent attack on Mr. Gladstone, whom, amid warm cheering from the Ministerialists, he likened to "a much greater man"—

Who, born for the universe, narrowed his mind,
And to party gave up what was meant for mankind.

—Lord ELCHO found, in the presentation of the solitary petition above referred to, the solution of a historic doubt. "Who's Griffiths?" was a query once familiar to the passer along the London streets, and it was marvelled whether he was anybody at all. But Mr. Bass had supplied the answer, and it was clear that "Griffiths" was a reverend gentleman living at Derby, who represented in his own person the great body of the public, who were alleged by the Liberals to be opposed to this measure.—Mr. FORSTER said that the Radicals in this case sat opposite to him, and he added, amid cries of "Oh, oh," from the Ministerialists, it was the most dangerous kind of Radicalism to dig about the roots of the loyalty of the people to the Throne. At twenty minutes past twelve Mr. T. CAVE moved the adjournment of the debate.—Mr. DISRAELI said that all the House waited for was the speeches of Mr. Ernest Noel and Sir George Campbell, and in order that these might be delivered, he, being perfectly satisfied with the turn the debate had taken, would waive his own right to speak, so that the division might be taken forthwith. The motion being persisted in, the House divided, when 192 voted for the adjournment and 324 against, a result received with great cheering by the Ministerialists.—Mr. W. JAMES then moved the adjournment of the House, observing that it was desirable there should be time given for further consideration out of doors.—Mr. DISRAELI, taking prompt advantage of this slip, warmly declared that he had been a member of that House for forty years, and he had never heard such an unconstitutional reason assigned for an adjournment.—Lord HARTINGTON expressing the opinion that the debate had better proceed, Mr. JAMES withdrew his motion, and the debate was continued by Mr. NOEL and Sir G. CAMPBELL.—The House divided, and Lord Hartington's motion was defeated by 305 against 200, and after disposing of the other business, the House adjourned at ten minutes to two o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FRIDAY, March 17.—COUNCIL OF INDIA (PROFESSIONAL APPOINTMENTS) BILL.—The Marquis of SALISBURY moved the second reading of the Council of India (Professional Appointments) Bill, the object of which is to permit pensions to be granted to a limited number of members of the India Council, so as to enable the Government to obtain the services of gentlemen with high legal and financial qualifications. It would be a return to the pensions granted under the old Act of 1858.—Lord LAWRENCE considered that it would be unfair to pension one portion of the India Council.—The Duke of ARGYLL declared that it was the intention of Parliament that the Council of India should always consist mainly of gentlemen with Indian experience. But there was to be an influential minority of eminent jurists, lawyers, and merchants, whom it was difficult to get for a salary of £1,200 a year, for ten or twelve years, unless there was some prospect of a pension. Although there were objections to having some members entitled to pensions for services for which the other members had no pension, still, on the whole, he was in favour of the principle of the Bill.—Lord SANDHURST said the pensions of the members of the Council who had had Indian experience were derived from deductions from their pay while on service in India. He thought they should be put on the same footing as the retired lawyers or civil engineers who were brought into the Council.—Lord SALISBURY replied that he had found the proposal to pension the retired Indian officials who were on the Council regarded with so much aversion in the House of Commons that it would be impossible to pass such a Bill. In regard to the necessities of the public service, there was an unmistakable distinction between the two classes. The retired Indian Civil servants were glad on their return to England to have something to do, and, therefore, without offering a pension, the best qualifications which the retired Indian Civil Service could offer were available. But that was not the case with regard to the other class of men whose services were required. The Bill was absolutely necessary for carrying on the work of the Council with efficiency.—The Bill was read a second time.

MANDALAY.—A correspondent, writing from Mandalay to the Rangoon Gazette, says:—"Since Colonel Duncan has taken up the Residentship, there has been some improvement in the working of the Mixed Court. There is not now any more humbug about the King wishing to see the Resident generally upon a Court day, and to say some foolish things, the main object in the Royal wish being to obstruct the regular working of the Court. Colonel Duncan has procured for us a separate judge, who will never be wanted by the King, and if the Colonel will only follow on this track, he may also succeed in obtaining the services of a permanent Burmese judge to hold Court daily. We have now Court only once a week, and only one or two cases are then heard."

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.
SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a most simple form. Take some good compound, such as

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tasted by many thousands of persons, are found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

PYRETIC SALINE.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

H. LAMPLOUGH, Consulting Chemist, 113, HOLBORN, E.C.,

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See article in the Civil Service Gazette.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, March 6; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, March 4; Calcutta, March 8.

AT Allahabad preparations were completing for the visit of the Prince of Wales there on his return journey to Bombay. The last-named city is after all to be adorned with an equestrian statue of his Royal Highness, the gift of Sir Albert Sassoon, from the studio of Mr. Boehm. It is said that another Bombay capitalist had set his heart upon the honour secured by his luckier rival; but as the equivalent—a baronetcy—which he deemed himself fairly entitled to expect, was not forthcoming, his project hung fire, and another achieves the work which he deemed his own.

ACCORDING to a correspondent of the Times of India the blockade of the refractory Afridi tribe near Peshawar was causing those restless borderers a good deal of discomfort. It was said that some six thousand of them were gathered together in the hills, besides a large concourse of beasts of burden of every description. On Sunday, the 27th February, about five hundred men showed themselves not far from Fort Mackeson, and our patrols brought back word that their object was to cut off the grass-cutters' ponies of the cavalry detachment. "The native officer in command, Ressaldar Mohammed Ali Khan, 8th Bengal Cavalry, immediately ordered out thirty men of the 27th P.N.I., and ten sowars of the 7th, and advanced in skirmishing order, with cavalry, viz., five sowars on either flank. The hill-men showed fight for half-an-hour, but on making an acquaintance with the Snider, they retired in great disorder to their mountain fastnesses, and doubtless told their wondering friends how the Sirkar's troops use weapons that never require loading." Captain Tytler, of the 8th Bengal Cavalry, was at once sent out to take command of the Fort in case the Afridis should feel inclined to renew their little game. Their loss in that affair was unknown. On our side no casualty occurred, although the daffadar of the 8th Bengal Cavalry had a narrow shave, as a bullet struck his clothes. All the arrangements made by the Ressaldar were "excellent."

IT is stated in the Indian papers that Sir Salar Jung would leave Bombay about the middle of March, and during his stay in England will be the guest of the Duke of Sutherland. His Excellency has chartered a Rubattino Company's steamer to convey him and his suite from Bombay to England.

AN outbreak in the Maulmain jail has been suppressed with a loss of fourteen convicts killed and wounded. We are not told how the guardians of the place fared. Probably, as the Pioneer suggests, they owed their salvation to the fact that the soldiery interfered; for "it appears to be the rule that the warders of Indian jails are allowed the use of weapons only on the condition that they must safely be stowed away under lock and key." Although British Burmah is, in many respects, a model for other Indian Provinces, the management of its jails brings out the usual Indian defect of weakness in the supervision. Even in the jails of Bengal and the North-West, it seems a wild risk to rely on a superintendent and one or two English warders; and the risk, of course, is still greater in the Burmah jails, whose prisoners are recruited from the most hot-blooded people in Asia.

ACCORDING to a Bombay paper, it is probable that the present Quarter-Master-General will not have to give up his post on attaining to colonel's allowances in July next. It now appears that Brigadier-General G. Burrows is eligible for reappointment, and that he will, in fact, be reappointed as Quarter-Master-General to complete his tenure of five years.

THE process of adapting the works of the Northern Punjab Railway to the standard gauge of five feet six inches goes on apace. On Monday, the 28th February, an engine ran through from Wazirabad to Naurangabad, on the south bank of the Jhilam. Although this section of the road is now broad gauge, it is found necessary for the present to keep up the old narrow gauge connection with the line from Lahor to Wazirabad. By the beginning of April the line will be open for traffic. Twenty-one of the fifty girders of the Jhilam bridge are already fixed, and the whole will be in their places before the river rises, so that by September the bridge, as altered for the broad gauge, will almost certainly be ready for traffic. The alteration of the line from Lahor to Wazirabad, which is in effect the building of a new line, involving some six miles of viaducts, will take more time, but by June or July, 1877, that section also will probably be opened.

AT Jhilam the railway works stop short; but the line northward to Rawal Pindi, about seventy miles long, has, after years of careful survey, been settled, and is now staked out. Owing to a difficult country the works on this section will be very heavy, but they will probably be completed within three years, from the time that the Government may order them to be carried on. Beyond Rawal Pindi parties of engineers are vigourously prospecting right and left of the Grand Trunk Road for the best line thence to Attok. Here the question of a suitable site for a bridge across the narrowing Indus has been thoroughly debated, and a spot commanded by the Fort has already been recommended. It seems quite a mistake to suppose that a railway bridge at Attok must needs be a costly and difficult work. With regard to the rest of the line up to Peshawar, it is said that Sir Bartle Frere, since his recent visit to that place, has made no secret of his conviction of the importance of such extension of the line, both in a political and military point of view.

IT is a good thing, financially speaking, to be architect to a native Indian Prince, especially one imbued with a taste for building. We forget at this moment how many lakhs of rupees were allotted to the Italian who designed for Shah-Jahan the wondrous Taj-Mahal; but the reigning Rajah of Gwalior is not easily to be outdone in munificence of a like sort. It is said that Sindia has just given a lakh of rupees—nominally £10,000—to the architect—also, we believe, an Italian—who built the palace in which he entertained the Prince of Wales. Signor Filose is said to be a younger member of the Filose family, descended from Jean Baptiste, and still retaining its pure European descent. This family has during four or five generations furnished faithful servants to the Gwalior Princes. The present Signor Filose was sent to Europe to study, since when he has been employed on all manner of duties, having no connection with his particular art.

MR. A. R. SCOBLE, late Advocate-General of Bombay, who came home by the last mail, went to Bombay in 1859. In little over a year he was appointed Acting Clerk to the Crown during the absence of Mr. White, and the appointment was confirmed in 1863. In 1865 Mr. Scoble was made Master in Equity. When the office of Advocate-General became vacant it was accepted by Mr. Scoble, who was also offered a Judgeship, which he declined. He filled the office of Advocate-General, says the Times of India, "in a way that showed his clear appreciation of the duties of the position, a thorough knowledge of legal principles, and a remarkable insight into Indian institutions. As a member of the Legislative Council, his advice was always sought and generally followed by the Bombay Government, and indeed he showed himself as useful in Council as he was eloquent at the Bar. Mr. Scoble will be missed from Bombay society, as well as from the Bombay High Court. As an amiable companion he was much sought after." Not the least of Mr. Scoble's successes was his conduct of the prosecution in the famous Baroda trial of last year. His summing-up in reply to Serjeant Ballantyne left nothing to desire. It is strange that, while Messrs. Hogg and Souter have been knighted, no special honour has been conferred on Mr. Scoble.

THE Privilege of the Bar must be allowed to cover a good deal of very sharp practice, if the following story, as told by a Bombay contemporary, be true in all its main features:—

> On Thursday week a case of peculiar interest to the members of the legal profession who are concerned about their reputation in the eyes of their fellow-men was decided by Mr. O'Leary, First Judge, Small Cause Court. A native sued Mr. Ernest Browning, a barrister, for the recovery of Rs. 500. He had agreed with Mr. Browning, that the latter should proceed to Mhow to conduct a case in which he was concerned, and the Rs. 500 were advanced towards expenses, or even, let us suppose, as a retaining fee. At the last moment, Mr. Browning telegraphed that he was unable to go to Mhow, and the unfortunate native lost his case. He naturally thought that Mr. Browning would offer to refund the Rs. 500, and at last, after much waiting, he filed a suit in the Small Cause Court. He produced Mr. Browning's telegram and receipt for the Rs. 500, for which no service whatever had been rendered. In the Judge's mind, the equity of the case was clear enough. What had Mr. Browning to say? He pleaded "the privilege of the bar." This was the only plea which could have thoroughly protected Mr. Browning, and all the Judge could do was to look at him, and then nonsuit the plaintiff. Thus, by a privilege of the bar, which permits gentlemen to accept money in consideration of a promise to do certain work, which work they may never do, although they may retain the fees, the Mhow native lost both a considerable sum of money, and his chances of succeeding in his case. It looks like a case of hardship.

So it certainly does, if we are to suppose that a plain breach of contract, for which in any other case redress could have been enforced by law, may be committed with impunity by a member of the Bar.

COMMENTING on the small reduction in the rates of Indian postage which the Berne Conference has resolved upon, the Bombay Gazette points out what it thinks should be the next step in the same direction. "The great aim of Indian postal reformers should be to insist on the abolition of the Southampton service, which nobody in India wants, and to get the whole postal subsidy concentrated on the Brindisi line. By means of this change we should get our letters conveyed more quickly and at cheaper rates." Most persons will probably agree with our contemporary that the Southampton mail service ought to be a thing of the past. Its day of usefulness has clearly gone by, and its further existence can only serve to keep the Brindisi rates higher than they might otherwise be.

IT appears that the excellent quality of the cotton cloth turned out by the Indor looms has secured a preference for it not only in Central India but in some parts of Rajputana and the North-West Provinces. Mr. Browne, the manager of Holkar's one mill, can readily produce yarn and cloth up to the designation of "30s;" but it is found more profitable to work from 20 to 24s. The number of spindles is about 10,000; and the looms are proportionally more numerous than in the Bombay mills, because the former turn out the bulk of their work in finished cloth, and do not much affect the trade in yarns. The workpeople earn from four or five up to ten and twelve rupees a month, the average being about seven or eight, which is a very attractive rate of wages for the artisans of Central India. The "hands" are scarcely yet up to the mark, the women not having been found so serviceable as in the Bombay mills, but as they are paid mostly by piecework, their industrial education is proceeding. The mill chimney, 120 feet high, is said to be a noble piece of masonry and brickwork.

IF it be true that the forests belonging to private owners in Darjiling are calculated to yield fuel for thirty years only, the Bengal Government has done wisely in pressing the matter of forest conservancy on the notice of the Sikkim Darbar. It is the fashion—remarks the Pioneer in this connection—"now-a-days to buy up territory. A very small sum comparatively would make Sikkim a British State, and we should then not merely add to our forest reserves, but secure a point d'appui for checkmating China in Thibet and Upper Burmah, and should open up probably a great trade between Central Asia and Bengal."

AT 10 P.M. on the night of the 14th March the Serapis passed the mail steamer for Bombay. The Osborne followed her, and returned to the Serapis with papers of the 25th of February. The next day there was a dead calm, the thermometer being 80. The menagerie is reported "quite comfortable." It contains eighty animals of all sorts. The elephants walk about the deck; the deer are very tame, and the tigers are domesticated, though they "exhibit tendencies to relapse." On Thursday, the 16th, the calm continued, and the temperature was the same. The sea was as smooth as glass; no ships, nor fish, nor birds were to be seen. On Friday the sea and temperature remained the same as before. The squadron has been averaging 272 miles in twenty-four hours. The Osborne ran under the quarter of the Serapis to exhibit her two elephants, which salaamed to the Prince as she passed ahead. The same monotonously fine weather continued the next day, the wind aft, being very hot. On the 20th a slight breeze began to blow astern; the weather being cloudy, and the heat considerable. The Serapis and Raleigh anchored at 7.40 P.M. off Aden, the Osborne having gone ahead to prepare for their coming. All on board were well.

THE Serapis, with H.R.H. the Prince of Wales on board, arrived at Suez this morning at eight o'clock.

THE Times correspondent telegraphs some particulars concerning the death of the Bishop of Calcutta at Rawal Pindi on Wednesday, March 15. He had left Calcutta on a visitation tour in the Punjab, about the middle of February, and reached Peshawar on the 21st, after an unusually trying journey. From the alternation of heat and cold, and from exposure to rain, he got a serious attack of bilious diarrhœa. On the 7th of March he was better, and was removed to Rawal Pindi at the beginning of the next week. Dangerous symptoms again appeared, and on the morning of the 15th the case became hopeless. The sad event has caused great and general regret, as the Bishop was deservedly popular. On the day of the funeral the flag on Fort William was hoisted half-mast high, and a Gazette Extraordinary was published recording the Bishop's services, and the zeal he displayed in the discharge of his functions, especially regarding the education of the poorer Europeans. The Bishop had intended taking a furlough shortly, but postponed it till the completion of the Punjab tour. His death was apparently owing to the conscientious discharge of his duties. The Bishop of Madras will administer the diocese until a new appointment is made.

IN the letter written to the Viceroy just before his departure, the Prince of Wales says that his expectations had been more than realised, and that the reception he met with from the Princes, Chiefs, and people was most gratifying. He hopes that the millions of the Queen's subjects in India may become daily more convinced of the advantages of British rule, and he adds that the native troops constitute an Army of which the country may justly feel proud; the march-past at Delhi was, he says, a most impressive sight. The Prince also expresses his high appreciation of the Civil Service, and concludes by thanking the Viceroy and the officials for the hospitality and facilities of travel afforded him.

A Times telegram of March 19 from Calcutta states that Khelat is comparatively quiet, but one tribe is still in arms against the Khan. Colonel Munro and Major Sandeman are at Jacobabad awaiting orders. The chiefs of the northern Khelat tribes are with Major Sandeman, and are believed to be ready to make peace with the Khan.

On the Peshawar frontier the offending Afridi tribe is closely blockaded, and will probably submit shortly. This refers to the Hassan-Khail Afridis who lately raided into Kotal Kohat.

The Karrenni Boundary Commission returned to Tonghoo on the 5th, all well. Boundary pillars were erected and the work successfully completed.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council on Tuesday, March 14, Mr. Hobhouse obtained leave to introduce a Bill for the better control of dramatic performances, and said that the Government is now powerless to prohibit seditious and obscene plays. He mentioned a Bengali drama which foully libels the tea planters; also, a scandalous and seditious farce, "Gajadananda and the Prince," lately performed in a native theatre at Calcutta. The measure is generally approved, as necessary to curb the license of the Bengali stage.

It is also stated that the scheme for the improvement of the Native Army has been matured and sent home for approval. The details have not been divulged, but the changes will probably be slight, as the present administration is believed to be hostile to any radical reformation. A sweeping reform—we are told—is urgently wanted, and delay and half measures will only increase the difficulty.

Lord Lytton landed at Alexandria from the Orontes on March 21, and at once proceeded by special train to Cairo and Suez to meet the Prince of Wales.

A Reuter's telegram from Singapore of March 21 says that the Flying Squadron has gone to China.

The Malay chief Ismail, who recently surrendered to the Rajah of Quedah, has arrived at Penang, and handed over the insignia of his rank to Major Anson.

Telegraphic advices lately received at St. Petersburg announce that perfect order prevails in the newly-formed Government of Ferghana. Khokan is visibly recovering from the terror and loss caused by the civil war. Trade has, within a very brief period, attained an extension which it never possessed under the rule of the Khan Khudayar. Russian influence has penetrated beyond the Khirgiz territory as far as Karategin, whose inhabitants delivered up Fulat Beg, the sham Khan, to the troops sent in pursuit. Fulat Beg has since undergone the extreme penalty of the law, having been hanged at Marghilan, the place where, among other barbarous acts, he murdered six Russian prisoners without the slightest cause. This just punishment, we are assured, "has not failed to produce a deep impression." At the most populous and strategically important points of the new Government of Ferghana garrisons have been established and administrative authorities installed. Khokan, the capital of the former Khanate, will also be the capital of the new Government. An envoy from the Amir of Kashgar is on his way to Khokan.

It appears from intelligence just received at Tashkand from Merv that Sher Ali, the Amir of Kabul, has since last December been besieging the fortress of Maimana, where the ruler of Ankhai had taken refuge. The country surrounding Maimana has submitted to Sher Ali, whose son, Yakub Khan, is still detained at Kabul.

Colonel Alexander Strange, whose death we lately recorded, was a cornet of Madras Cavalry in 1834. From an early period of his Indian career he displayed a special aptitude for scientific pursuits, which bore fruit in 1847 in his appointment to the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India. For the next ten years he was engaged in triangulating first the Karáchi Series to the extent of 23,000 square miles, and afterwards the Eastern or Coast Series, which involved heavy work amidst the unhealthy jungles of the Gumsur Hills. In April, 1857, an attack of jungle fever drove him for a while to the Nilgiris, and his promotion next year to the rank of Major compelled him, according to the rules then in force, to retire from the Survey, with the honour of special thanks from the Viceroy for distinguished service. In 1861 he retired on his pension, but a fresh outlet for his special talents was speedily opened to him when, in 1862, he accepted the post of Inspector of Scientific Instruments to the India-office. His mechanical skill and inventiveness found full scope in designing a number of improved instruments for the Trigonometrical Survey; a task discharged by him with such success that no further improvements seem possible for some time to come. Meanwhile Colonel Strange took for many years an active part in the affairs of more than one scientific society, and to him especially belongs the credit of leading the movement which resulted in the appointment of a Royal Commission on Scientific Instruction. Before his death he had the comfort of knowing that the Report of the Commissioners embodied most of the proposals which he himself had laid before them.

The bitter weather with which we have lately been favoured has cut short the career of an officer distinguished among his compeers as the foremost military critic of the day in England, Colonel Hamley not excepted. Colonel Charles Chesney, of the Royal Engineers, died last Sunday of a chill caught that day week while travelling on duty. His early death at the age of forty-seven is a heavy loss not only to the service of which he was an ornament, but to the country, which had reason to be proud of the fame he had won in the field of military literature. The well-known author of "The Waterloo Lectures" was the son of that General Chesney whose exploration of the Euphrates Valley proved the feasibility of a shorter road to India than that by the Red Sea. His brother, Colonel George Chesney, of the Bengal Engineers, is the able President of Cooper's-hill College, the author of the famous "Battle of Dorking," and of a work on "Indian Polity," which everyone should study who would thoroughly understand the details of Indian Government. The deceased officer himself entered the Royal Engineers in 1845, and obtained his Company in 1854. A few years afterwards he was appointed Professor of Military History at Sandhurst. During his tenure of that post he published some noteworthy volumes on the campaigns in Virginia and Maryland, which stamped him as a military critic of the first order. His "Waterloo Lectures," published in 1868, were models of clear and masterly exposition, which have few rivals in the literature of any country. Besides bringing out the weak points of Napoleon's strategy, they did full justice to our Prussian allies. Shortly after the Franco-German War of 1870-71, Colonel Chesney was sent over to France to report on the lessons taught us by that war. He was afterwards employed in carrying out Lord Cardwell's scheme of army localisation. Another valuable contribution to military history was his volume of "Essays in Military Biography," reprinted chiefly from the Edinburgh Review in 1874, and remarkable not more for the weighty clearness and tempered warmth of his style than for the fairness of his judgments on the great leaders of the American War. His latest essay on the "Swiss Sonderbund War," in the last number of Macmillan, brought out some curious points of resemblance between the circumstances of two federal republics, one in Europe, the other in America. All that could be done in the way of showing honour to his remains was done on Thursday last, when a large gathering of persons of all ranks followed them to their last resting-place near Sandhurst College.

The Indian Distinguished Service Reward vacated by Colonel F. G. Kempster, Madras Staff Corps, on his succeeding to Colonel's allowances, has been awarded to Colonel A. Stewart, Royal (late Madras) Artillery. Colonel Stewart joined the Army in December, 1840; became Lieutenant in 1845, Captain in 1857, Brevet-major in 1864, Lieutenant-Colonel in the following year, and Brevet Colonel in 1870. He served with the expedition to China from March, 1842, to January, 1843, and was present at the capture of Woosung and Shanghai, storming of Chin Kiang Foo, and operations before Nankin.

THE CONSPIRACY AT RANGOON.—(RANGOON, Feb. 20.)—The trial of the Rangoon conspiracy case came to a conclusion yesterday, after a hearing which lasted twenty days, and a preliminary inquiry of as many more. The result has been the conviction of twenty out of twenty-six accused. The principal conspirator, Thike Moung Bwah, has been sentenced to transportation for twenty-one years, three of his chief counsellors to fourteen years each, eleven to ten years each, and the remaining five to various shorter terms. The upshot of the case appears to give general satisfaction, excepting, of course, to the accused and their friends. Nothing new came out in the course of the final trial. The plot was well conceived, but its details had not been worked out, and on the night of the intended attack the provision of arms was found to be insufficient. Partly owing to this and partly to the vigilance of the police it is due that Rangoon was not thrown into disorder by an open attempt at rebellion.—Two expeditions are on their way north and eastward from Rangoon. One, the Karennee survey part, consists of Mr. Jameson, Mr. R. O. Lloyd, R.E., Dr. Leapingwell, and 100 picked frontier police; Mr. Hildebrand, who was to have headed the party, being detained by sickness. The object of this expedition is to define the Karennee boundary, and so fix a limit to the vexatious incursions of the Burmese into the lands of our friendly allies, the Karennee princes. The second party is a so-called escort of 300 men (200 Europeans and 100 Sepoys), commanded by Colonel F. Jebb, under orders for Bhamo to meet the Yunnan Inquiry Commission, who are expected to make their way through next month. The orders for the escort to start, however, have been so long delayed that it seems not improbable that the Commission will anticipate its departure by arriving at Bhamo unaided. The Rangoon public await with considerable interest the result of Colonel Duncan's refusal to take off his shoes before H.M. of Burmah.—Daily News Correspondent.

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE INDIAN SERVICES, &c., REPORTED SINCE LAST PUBLICATION.

H.M.'s BRITISH FORCES IN INDIA.—Gavin Ainslie Turnbull, Staff Surgeon Major, Edinburgh, and late of the 21st Hussars, at Clevedon, March 18. TRAINING FOR THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

THE much vext question of a reform in the present mode of training candidates for the Indian Civil Service may now be regarded as settled, so far as the outlines of the new scheme are concerned. In a despatch of the 24th February last, the Secretary for India, while upholding the principle of competitive selection, points to "a large preponderance of opinion in favour of material changes in the treatment of candidates after the selection has been made." Under the present system, as remodelled in 1864, the highest age for the first competition was fixed at twenty-one, and the next two years were passed by selected candidates in special studies, their progress in which was tested by half-yearly examinations. To the continuance of this system Lord Salisbury makes the following just objections:—

The arrangement is such as almost to preclude a candidate from receiving a university education. The age at which he must compete is so fixed that he cannot, according to ordinary arrangements, receive his university education either before or after the competition. The consequence is that, as a rule, the selected candidates spend their two years of preparation studying by themselves in lodgings in London. This is the feature of the existing system which has been generally condemned in India. The nature and extent of that prevalence of opinion is best described in the figures in which you have analysed the reports.

If the opinions, not only of Haileybury civilians, but of a great many competitioners now in India, count for anything, the arguments in favour of "association after competition" are as irresistible as Lord Salisbury deems them. No reform therefore would be worth considering which left the claims of university training out of the case. "It is obvious," says Lord Salisbury—

"that, if the theory upon which Lord Macaulay and others founded the competition is right, the exclusion of university education cannot be defended. If the object be to obtain civil servants who have received the ordinary education of English gentlemen, it is not reasonable to omit the part of that education which is most peculiarly English, and which exerts the most powerful influence in the formation of character. But the absence of it in this case has evils of a special kind. The peculiarity of a civilian's career, during all its earlier years, is its isolation. As far as European society is concerned, there is scarcely any seclusion more complete than that of an up-country station, to which a young civilian is usually appointed; and it is a seclusion which often lasts till he has reached to middle age. It is to him, therefore, more important than to the members of other professions that his education should not be solitary, but that, in the company of others of his own class, he should receive the invaluable training which consists in the knowledge of the thoughts and characters of other men. If he does not obtain it at that time, he has not the chance which is open to others of repairing the omission later. The older civilians received this training in common at Haileybury, and their unanimity in extolling it deserves to be carefully noted. Individuals may err in estimating the circumstances which have furthered or have hindered their success in life; but such an error can hardly be attributed to a whole class of able and experienced men."

In view of arguments which certainly ought to carry conviction to most impartial minds, his Lordship agrees with the Indian Government in the wisdom of taking steps to enable the selected candidates to pass their subsequent term of probation at "some University (to be approved beforehand by the Secretary of State), at which moral responsibility for the conduct of the students is undertaken and rules of discipline are enforced." These conditions, as Lord George Hamilton has since pointed out, are not meant to exclude either the London University, or those of Scotland and Ireland, where collegiate residence is not enforced. On the principle accepted by Lord Salisbury, such exclusion would be manifestly unfair, so long as each University maintains some kind of moral control over its students. The main object of the present reform, which will come into operation in July, 1878, is not to bring the selected candidates together into any one university or college, but to give each candidate the benefits of collegiate training in any university which will undertake to look after his general behaviour. This of itself will be a great improvment on the present system, which practically closes the Indian Civil Service to University men—the very class from which, in default of Haileybury, the upper ranks of that service might best be recruited. Fifteen years ago indeed the Universities did furnish a fair proportion of successful recruits, but subsequent changes in the rules concerning age and so forth reduced their quota to nothing.

In order to remove all apparent hindrances to a course of university training, the highest age for the first examination will be reduced to nineteen, the minimum remaining at seventeen, as heretofore. The selected candidates will be required as now to pass periodical examinations in certain prescribed studies, and to qualify themselves for some of these by the usual attendance on the law-courts. But in accordance with the objects of the new scheme, they will be allowed to extend their term of probation from two years to three and a half, thus securing ample time for a university degree, without too long delaying their entrance into the Civil Service. The selected candidate must report himself to his Government in India not later than the fourth December after his selection; that is, he must not be more than 22½ years old on his arrival in India. This is certainly the latest age at which he ought to take up his official duties, and we hope that many of the future civilians will go out earlier. We note by the way that the customary allowance of £150 a year will not cover more than the first two years of the candidate's probation. It remains to see how far these excellent reforms will be seconded by the Universities themselves, without whose co-operation much of their practical value would be lost. On this point however, to judge from the movements lately made by the leading men of Oxford and Cambridge, there is little cause for misgiving.

THE QUEEN'S TITLE IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Permit me, in reference to your article in the number of March 18, upon the "Queen's Title in India," to say that the title of Pádsháh—neither Pádisháh nor Bádsháh—appears to me the best to be used, signifying "Protector and Lord;" moreover, being already given to the Queen by the Indians. This title is considered as synonym of Sháhanshàh—for Sháhánsháh—which represents the ancient title of "King of Kings," and has nothing to do with the Shiá sect.

I must also observe that Páshá is a Turkish word, and has no relation at all with Pádsháh.—I remain, &c.,

COUNCIL OF INDIA (PROFESSIONAL APPOINTMENTS) BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—At a time when the recent debate on what may be well called the Secretary of State for India and Manchester interests versus the Viceroy and the interests of those he has been sent to India to look after has for the moment excited sufficient interest in Indian affairs in England to bring about a warm discussion in the House of Commons, which has demonstrated, amongst other things, the extreme difficulty of making revenue and expenditure balance in our Indian Empire, it may not be inopportune to take a glance at the ingenious scheme which, under the above title, has just been "run through" both Houses of Parliament.

It is one thing to preach economy in India—for, laying down the absolute necessity for the abolition of the duty on cotton, "within a fixed period," can mean nothing else, seeing that the Indian revenue has no elasticity like our own—it is quite another thing to practice it at home, when, by so doing, the door would be closed, or partially so, at least, to the facility for creating comfortable pensioned appointments for the legal element, which is daily becoming more and more strongly represented under the autocratic rule of the present ruler of India in England, and we might almost add, in India.

A member of Mr. Fawcett's turn of mind might do eminent service to India, and to the Viceroys of the future, whose one all absorbing difficulty will be money, and how to raise it to meet the ever-growing demand—were he to inquire more deeply into this and similar matters. Let him trace back for a few years the reason for certain legal appointments at, and connected with, the India-office. He might find that because one individual wrote an article in a well-known political periodical at an opportune time, he was rewarded with £1,200 or £1,500 a year for the remainder of his days. Seldom has authorship met with such tangible success! Others he would find, men in the prime of life, have been pensioned off (out of Indian revenue, of course), to make room for some lucky connection, in want of a comfortable salary found by an Exchequer which, alas! has no Chancellor of its own to defend it in the House of Commons. Indeed, in various ways, he would gain an instructive lesson, an insight into the manner in which the interests of the mild Hindu are looked after by a paternal, benevolent, and scrupulous Government. Such information as a shrewd and diligent inquirer might then obtain would not only interest us, but it would likewise be of eminent interest to the natives of India, of whose pecuniary interests we have constituted ourselves the philanthropic and trusty guardians.

In truth, when home charges have risen to about £15,000,000 a year, when the increase of pay to the army, the enhanced price of all army supplies, &c., the present ruinous rate of remittance to England is considered, it is time that we, who have hitherto been so supine regarding Indian matters, should now at least try our best to see if nothing can be done to prevent the uncalled for waste of Indian money, this reckless dealing with a sacred trust.

We find it stated by the Secretary of State for India, that the reason for the introduction of the Bill in question is, that although it has been found easy enough to obtain the services of men of Indian experience for the salary that is given to Indian councillors, without the prospect of a pension (and yet Sir George Campbell recently informed the House that India lost his services at the Council Board because there was no pension —alas! poor India!)—nevertheless, it was a difficulty to get properly qualified persons, men skilled in law and finance, to accept the appointment of £1,200 a year, unless coupled with a pension of £500 after ten years' service. The experienced Indian, he observed, already had his pension, secured by right of service in India, so that he required nothing more; but "the class of men so much sought after," in fact, according to Lord Salisbury, no class were so sought after, "were good lawyers, without much practice." To one not well versed in the peculiarities of the legal profession, the idea might occur that a lawyer without much practice, was, from that very fact, not so much sought after as was intended to be inferred; otherwise, if so much in demand, whence his want of practice? And, failing much practice, might it not be allowed that £1,200 a year was a good income, even without the anticipated sweets of a pension, after ten years, amounting to nearly one-half of the salary. And yet the man "experienced" in the country, at the Council Board of whose Government he is to sit, can be treated in quite another manner—no golden lure for him—he can come or not as pleases himself, but without pension.

Lord Sandhurst spoke well, and to the point, on this subject, when he said, "he did not think it ought to be laid down that gentlemen coming from India were to be had for the asking, while lawyers and others were to be induced with a pension." We all know that a retired civil servant of India, after a lifetime of official work—work such as few of us in this country can form any adequate conception of—receives £500 a year from the Indian Government, the remaining £500 (to complete the so-called £1,000 a year pension) is paid for by himself out of the capital sum that has been subscribed by him by yearly deductions from his salary, made from the day of his first joining, by the Government of India. Indeed, in many cases, the deductions have been far in excess of the sum representing £500 a year—all of which becomes the property of the Indian Government. And who, amongst those who really know what Indian service is, will say that the £500 a year actually granted has not been well earned by past service? Thus, these men have then from the Indian Government a pension of £500 after some thirty to forty years' service in an Indian climate. The new legal members—for they are likely all to be legal—will, after ten years of a quiet stroll to the India-office and back, a few hours' work one or two days in the week, during a certain portion of the year, obtain precisely the same pension out of the pocket of the long suffering, little-pitied Indian tax-payer!

And, were it needed, we can still further see the fostering care of the interests—in the first instance—of the legal element which portrays itself in Lord Salisbury's reply to Lord Lawrence's question, Why those gentlemen of Indian experience were to be left out in the cold, while their professionally appointed fellow councillors were [to receive pensions? Why was it? Not because it was a prompting of economy—a saving of Indian money—not at all; it was because although "he (Lord Salisbury) saw no reason why they, too, should not have a pension, the House of Commons had shown so much repugnance to the Bill that he was afraid it might not pass." So, to say and make at least the professionally appointed councillors safe as to their pension, the others were cast overboard to lighten the risk to the ship that carried their money! We would ask, in common fairness, if Indian money is to be spent, which of these two classes of Indian Councillors most deserve it, those of Indian experience who very likely have for years had to rule over millions of our Indian subjects, or a barrister of not much practice, but doubtless not wanting in powerful connections?

Spirit of the Indian Press.

A NEW SOURCE OF WEALTH FOR INDIA.

The Times of India remarks that in a tropical country like India it may not be possible to grow a fine wool fleece, but, as the fleece of the sheep has a tendency to deteriorate and become hair, surely we may expect them to be able to grow hair, and that too of the very finest quality. We have often been told that neither the Angora nor the Cashmere goat will thrive out of its own country, but on the feeding grounds of Castambul, Fourth Creek, Wellington, Glenelg, and Point Stuart, Mr. Maurice and others have given the former statement the lie direct. The cost of the experiment in India would harm neither the Government nor the capitalists, and if, after a fair trial, it proved successful, its extension would be unbounded. A few of the best male Angoras might, through the good offices of our Minister at Constantinople, be got at little cost and sent on to India. The Zoological Society at Regent's Park may be able to spare a few, but where Mr. Price Maurice got his there can others also be supplied. Here then is a promising and highly remunerative industry, paying a return in the second year, suitable alike to the capitalist, the colonist, and the native of the country, and one that can be carried out either on a small or an extensive scale. There is nothing uncertain, speculative, or experimental about it; for if it has succeeded in the arid wastes of Queensland it must certainly prosper in many tracts of our vast empire, which only require such opening up to prove remunerative. The production of such a staple is one of imperial importance, and promises to return more speedy, and more certain, profits than either coffee or tea, and, in due time, may occupy a field as extensive as our great cotton-growing industry. There is no reason why it should be a product peculiar to the valleys of Castambul, Angora, and Van. In 1873 these provinces exported 5,120,000 lbs., which averaged over 25d. per lb., and this after being wetted by the native dealers, in order to increase its weight—a process which lessens its value, as it cannot then be worked up as a substitute for silk.

INDIAN TOBACCO.

The Madras Athenæum thinks the Madras Government should at once start a tobacco farm on a scale sufficiently large to ensure success. For many years past we have heard much about what Government is going to do, but nothing has been done yet beyond deluging the different collectors' cutcherries with papers, minutes, and memos. on the subject. We have seen estimates for the cultivation and curing of tobacco prepared by Captain Campbell, which ought to tempt any one to make a trial. The return from tobacco is rapid; within six months from putting the seed down the crop is secured, and three crops from the same sowing can be taken in one year—any tobacco, however bad, will sell—and if the high cultivation recommended by Captain Campbell is too expensive for the particular soil, that is, if it turns out that the soil cultivated will not yield the highest class of leaf, well, the cost of cultivation can be reduced to suit the price the crop will fetch, and a fair percentage of profit realised. There are now scores and scores of gardens in the Dindigul talook where the ryots get a return of 30 to 50 per cent. on their tobacco crops, and yet Europeans hang back from embarking in the enterprise, though European skill, as in indigo, coffee, &c., would obtain results natives never can hope for. We observed a para. going the round of Indian newspapers lately, saying that a London broker of experience had condemned Indian tobacco and spoken of it "as getting worse every year." We wrote to Captain Campbell, of Dindigul, to ask him how this was; he answered that the broker only spoke of the Indian tobacco he saw, but that he never saw the best—or even the "middling sorts"—that exporters in India sent home only the cheapest, and consequently the worst, sorts of Indian tobacco—that the manufacture of cheroots in India had so improved since Messrs. Campbell and Co. at Dindigul and others had started in the business, that the supply of improved Indian cigars had so exceeded the demand that all good Indian tobacco was bought up locally at prices which the exporters in Madras and elsewhere are not inclined to give; but that if they only had sufficient knowledge of the tobacco-growing districts to enable them to discriminate between the produce of different gardens, exporters in Madras, at any rate, might make their 30 per cent. per annum on the despatch to England of small cargoes of Indian tobacco. These remarks seem reasonable; it is known to all that Indian cheroots have improved in quality of late years. Therefore Indian tobacco cannot possibly have deteriorated. It is a fact, and we think a startling fact, that millions of Indian cigars are now annually exported, and that millions and millions more would be exported if sufficient good tobacco could be got—yet the Madras Government will not spend one rupee in encouraging the cultivation, though it annually spends thousands in printing to call for information on the subject.

PROTESTANT MISSIONS IN INDIA.

The Pioneer remarks that the history of the Jesuits is one long roll of marvellous achievements in the work of propagandism. In China, in Paraguay, in India, their successes can hardly be credited. They have been accused of minimising Christianity to suit the capacities of unbelievers, and of adopting from heathenism rites and ceremonies which in the long run destroy their work. To this it might be replied that without concession no result at all could have been expected, and that the teacher must adapt his method to his pupil. The tolerant spirit of Jesuit missionaries is preferable to the bigotry recorded of Protestant ecclesiastics, of whom it has been said, "they often act as if they wished to shock the prejudices of the people," and who not unfrequently present Christianity to those of an alien creed as a collection of defined yet mysterious doctrines, which must be accepted altogether or not at all. In Francis Xavier and in Schwartz a very different spirit was visible. The former adopted the habits and the scanty fare of an Indian ascetic, the latter tolerated among his converts caste distinctions. The aim of both was that of all true teachers who seek to approach as closely as possible to the mind of their pupil and lift it to the level of their own by slow degrees. It is somewhat in the same spirit that the missions of some denominations almost exclusively confine themselves to the work of education. Hinduism they have learnt to recognise as a body of beliefs and ideas, which, however logically absurd, yet are too firmly intertwined with the roots of society to be eradicated all at once. Society must be improved and educated before it will consent to part with the superstitions of the past. Till then a higher religion will not be received, or if received, then only in a distorted and caricatured form. As educators, Protestant missionaries have in India attained eminent success. To compare their schools with those under State supervision would not be a fair test of what they have accomplished. We have to look back through the last thirty years, and trace the course of the educational movement which has spread over India. We shall find that the leaders of the movement have been either missionaries or those who have been their warmest supporters. In this indirect way the enlightenment and civilisation of India may be said to be largely owing to missionary labour. Missions, however, have failed in their direct attack on Hinduism. It appears indisputable that the distinctive doctrines which missionaries are sent out by home societies to teach will never become the faith of Indian peoples. Hinduism in its existing shape seems destined to extinction, but it seems none the less certain that its place will not be taken by Christianity. Whatever life there is in Indian thought at the present moment is either occupied in anti-Christian speculations, or in constructing ethical systems on other than a supernatural basis. It has been remarked by acute critics that native Christian literature shows no signs of independent thought or critical inquiry. A dull orthodoxy is the prevailing flavour. It might be expected that the novelty of the doctrines embraced would arouse speculation and debate among some at least of the converts. That they have failed to do so has been held a proof of the slight hold they have obtained on the native church. It will be a hopeful day for Missions in India when vernacular Christian literature becomes critical as well as dogmatic.

THE PRINCE IN THE TERAI.

Feb. 17.—Our camp has been followed during its whole jungle-progress by groups of dacoits. This was expected. There are whole tribes who dedicate themselves almost exclusively to plundering tents, and every large camp attracts them as infallibly as a carcass does vultures. But the thieves were not so well prepared for Mr. Goad, our Superintendent of Police in attendance with the Prince, as Goad has been prepared for them. I do not know how many rascals in how many disguises he has detected and incarcerated. The favourite character they assume is that of faqueers. Yesterday he apprehended some half-dozen of these holy men. One, the dirtiest, and of course most pious, was selected for examination:—

'Twere vain to ask what shook the holy man,
Who looked not lovingly on that divan, but trembling was of no use, and he had to submit to search, when his clothes and wallet revealed all sorts of preparations and precautions for his creature comforts, quite incompatible with his assumed vocation of a faqueer, and further examination of him and his comrades put the fact of their being dacoits, pure and simple, quite beyond doubt. These, and I think all the rogues who have been hitherto seized, have been Mozuffernuggur men; now it is the turn of the Hurdui villains. These two districts have the interesting speciality of furnishing tent thieves.

We are threatened with a visit from a rogue elephant, the same which, a year ago, turned Jung Bahadoor and all his army out of the jungle, by the agitation the rogue caused among Jung's elephants. The same courier from Mr. Girdlestone, who promises us this entertainment, tells us that there are two herds of wild elephants, one of ten or twelve, the other of twenty-two, which the Maharajah would gladly be allowed to hunt. I say "allowed," because these herds, though close to Nepaulese, are actually in British territory. Permission will of course be granted. These herds of merely wild elephants, however, concern us less than the single rogue one. If you think this uneasiness absurd, let me just repeat a story I was told this morning on the very spot where the matter it relates occurred. A few years ago, when Ramsay was laying out the road on which we stood, seven women or girls were sitting down and chatting, when an elephant was discovered by one of them charging down upon them. Two of the party, sagacious old women, squatted down quietly where they were, only making themselves as small as possible. The other five, girls from fourteen to sixteen years of age, fled in fright in different directions, and the elephant pursued, first one, and then another of these. An hour afterwards, when the two old women had gone to the nearest village and summoned help to search for the poor girls, their five crushed and mangled corpses were found, one here and another there, within a radius of one or two hundred yards. A rogue elephant is probably the most malignant, the most gratuitously and unprofitably cruel beast in existence.

I had hardly closed and despatched the above when the Prince's party came in with a good ten-foot tiger; but who shot it, or even at it, I found great difficulty in discovering amid the conflicting claims. Our slain tigers are now in the plural number, and if we kill a hundred, they can be no more—can they?

The two marches from Nanak Mutaur to Bunbassa, about eighteen miles, are entirely through cultivated land. Or, at any rate, if there are still barren or fallow portions, there is no jungle, and you must diverge widely from the straight track to find—I do not say a tiger, but even a lair, in which a rational tiger could abide. It is immensely to the credit of the district officers of the Terai that, although fierce sportsmen to a man, they regard this rapid spread of cultivation, and consequently rapid restriction, of their happy hunting-grounds, not merely with resignation, but with earnest favour, and hasten it by every legitimate means. It is still more to their honour that they have contrived to make the Sircar popular, and one might almost say (if such a thing were possible of a Government which is landlord, i.e., rent, and not merely revenue receiver) beloved. The Government is in fact the direct landlord over a large part of the Terai, and the Terai people actually seem to like it. This singular popularity of our raj is of course to be attributed to the unusually general prosperity; and this general prosperity may be in large part referred to happy violation on the part of the district officers of all the sacrosanct laws of political economy. Having no fears of Jeremy Bentham, or his disciples in high places, before their eyes, they actually prohibit the pursuit of money-lending in their territories. This was horrible tyranny, and direct ignorance, you know! Yet the people, who are surely shrewd judges of their own interest, eagerly concur now (whatever may have been at first the case) in the unenlightened system. A bunnia who should now attempt to settle in a village and pursue his beneficent calling of usury, would have a hot time of it with the inhabitants, who would not wait for the intervention of authority before expressing their sentiments. Another reason why the Terai people like their masters is that they feel they are liked by them. It is certain the Taros, the genuine and indigenous inhabitants of this strange region, have the property of attracting the affection of their English administrators in a very remarkable degree. This is certainly not due to any servility on the part of the former, for the Terai folk are particularly free and easy in their speech and manners.—Pioneer Correspondent.

STATION TALK.

RAWAL PINDI, Feb. 20.—There was a serious disturbance in the native town this afternoon, caused by about 120 Pathan sepoys of the 21st Punjab N.I., who assembled in the town, in accordance to a preconcerted arrangement, armed with stout sticks, with which they laid about them in a promiscuous manner. The police, towards whom they were principally exasperated, they failed in laying hands on, as those brave civic upholders of order and peace, deeming discretion the better part of valour, wisely secreted themselves till the course was clear. There were in all about fifty persons assaulted, some more or less severely; none, however, I am glad to say, sustained fatal injury. The district and police officers appeared on the scene after the sepoys had got back to their lines, and accompanied by a host of policemen (who had emerged when all danger was over in swarms, like ants after a shower of rain) went off to the 21st N.I. lines, where the officer commanding having assembled the regiment, the process of identifying the rioters proceeded. Over a hundred sepoys and several non-commissioned officers were identified, and are now in durance vile awaiting trial. This disturbance, as far as I can understand, was in retaliation for ill-treatment sustained by some Pathan sepoys of the corps a few days back, at the hands of the police and citizens, with whom the sepoys had an altercation about some women. The police being far superior in numbers succeeded in overpowering the sepoys, five of whom were brought to trial. The Pathans are a pugnacious, revengeful, and sensitive people, and such an emeute as this is in nowise surprising; it is, however, highly discreditable to the police that so much alarm and injury could be perpetrated by a band of men, armed with nothing more formidable than sticks, without their offering the slightest assistance to the panic-stricken citizens.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 20.—The Hon. A. Eden flitted through Calcutta on his way home, and his successor is to be Mr. R. Thompson, Commissioner of Rajshaye and Cooch Behar. Mr. Cockerell moves into the Legislative Council, and Lord Ulick W. Browne is shifted into his place. Mr. Buckland, from Burdwan, comes to Calcutta, and Mr. F. Cockerell, from Dacca, to Burdwan. The head of the Ornithological-office has abandoned his intention of going round by Japan and America, and goes straight home, his health not being strong enough to stand the long journey. On his departure it is understood that the department of which he is the present chief will revert to its less mellifluous title of Agriculture and Commerce. Calcutta society has received a great accession of strength in the arrival of his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, accompanied by his sister, Lady Anna Gore Langton. It is a great time for engineers, civil and military, for his Grace is partial to their profession, and eager to receive information, both theoretical and practical. Several dinners, an evening party, and a ball are to be given at Government House in his honour, and at these entertainments Engineers are to muster "strong." There are actually no social quarrels going on in Calcutta, and few, very few, jokes afloat. The only bon-mot I have heard came, I believe, from England, for it is too keen a specimen of wit for India —"Whence do the flowers in Leicester-square come?" "From the plants in the City." The author of a little work, "The Philosophy of Laughing and Smiling," might disapprove of the above, but some people's blame is praise. Alas! to what truisms are we reduced; but let me sharpen my wits and give you some news. Calcutta is not satisfied with its volunteer troop of lancers. Government has given us a distinguished young officer to raise the corps from its present depressed condition, and we hope soon to see a fine body of men ready to rival that really model corps, of the Behar Mounted Volunteers. Why not? Meanwhile, the first meeting of the Tent-pegging Club, which has been established in connection with the corps, took place on Wednesday, and this charming sport will, we hope, have the effect of gaining many supporters for Captain Swiney, who is indefatigable in his work and deserves every encouragement. In a few days we hope to welcome back the gallant Buffs. Though their ranks have been thinned by the dread chances of war, and by the more insidious ravages of climate and disease, this will hardly make their return from these dangers the less welcome, and while we weep with those who are desolate and bereaved, we may rejoice with those glad families who will receive their relations safe and sound, and let us thank God for those brave fellows who are about to return among us. Two companies are said to be returning at once, and the remainder are to follow shortly. As I write torrents of rain and a good sharp thunder-storm are relieving the air of the heat and electricity which have rendered the last few days oppressively warm, and now we may hope for an extension of the cold season.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

PUNJAB NORTHERN STATE RAILWAY.—The Punjab Northern State Railway is to be opened right up to the left bank of the Jhelum immediately, and a temporary station is to be built there. The forebodings that it could never be carried across the river will, doubtless, be falsified some day, but for the present the rains will interfere with the building of a bridge.—Pioneer.

MEDICAL.—It has been decided that medical officers, upon attaining the rank of surgeon-major, will not in future be required to provide at their own cost a capital case of surgical instruments; but all executive medical officers will have to provide themselves with, and keep up at their own expense, a case of pocket instruments of an authorised pattern, which will be shortly approved. This case is to be carried in the regulation pouch.

DR. BELLEW.—It is said that Dr. Bellew will officiate as Resident at Nepal during Mr. Girdlestone's absence. The Pioneer writes:—"We shall doubtless soon receive from his untiring pen a complete history of Nepal and the Nepalese, their Past, Present, and Future. Dr. Bellew's mission in life seems to be that of recording very dry facts about very out-of-the-way people; but his contributions to the knowledge of the world are none the less valuable because they are not always put in a popular shape."

COMMISSARIAT.—It is rumoured that Colonel Taylor, Executive Commissariat Officer at the Presidency, is to be appointed to the commissariat charge at Ambala, vice Colonel Graves, who is likely to be transferred to Peshawar, and that Colonel Davidson, who has just returned from furlough, is to assume the executive charge at the Presidency, and to act for the Deputy Commissary General, Lower Circle, in addition to his own duties, on the departure of Colonel Christopher to England, as a temporary arrangement, or until the return of Colonel Macbean, who is to be appointed Deputy Commissary General, Central Circle, and to relieve Colonel Dickens, C.B., who comes to the Presidency to take charge of the office of the Deputy Commissary General, Lower Circle.—Indian Daily News.

THE INDIAN MARINE.—Captain Baker, the Master Attendant and Superintendent of the Dockyard, will avail himself of his furlough, and leave India in April. Captain Butler's death and Captain Baker's absence leave vacant the two senior appointments in the Marine Department, and various rumours are current as to how they are to be filled; we believe that nothing is settled in the matter as yet. One of the principal duties of Captain Bythesea, as Consulting Naval Officer to Government, was to report on the best way of reorganising the Marine. This report has been under consideration for some time, and has, we believe, been settled in Council, and is now awaiting the final decision of the Viceroy, who will settle the matter before he goes home. Under these circumstances, the Government will probably first bring out the scheme of re-organisation, and then fill up any vacancies, or alter the appointment in accordance with the new order of things.—Indian Daily News.

SKATING RINK FOR CALCUTTA.—The committee of the Calcutta Zoo, says a Calcutta paper, have determined to put up a skating rink within the gardens. The site selected is at the south-east corner, near the entrance gate, and the probable size will be 160 feet by 70 feet, with a floor of concrete, covered by cement, which is perhaps the best suited for the climate, though it will make very hard falling ground. At present the idea is to run a balustrade round the rink, and not to have it covered in. This decision has probably been arrived at on the score of expense, but as the rink will be a very great attraction to the gardens, our contemporary expects to see the names of the European residents of Calcutta largely swelling the subscription list, in which case the committee would doubtless see their way to granting further funds for a roof. Spiller's skates, which are considered the best for beginners, will be on hire at the rink, but no objection will be made to people using their own.

A NEW SCIENCE ASSOCIATION.—Dr. Mohendro Lal Sircar is to be congratulated on having secured the powerful support of the Government of Bengal for his projected Science Association. The Lieutenant-Governor has promised to take up a building situated at the junction of College-street and Bow Bazar, and to make it over to the Association rent free. Sir Richard stipulates that at least Rs. 70,000 must first be actually obtained by donations; that out of this sum Rs. 50,000 must be invested in Government Securities; and that a total monthly subscription of Rs. 100 must be promised for two years. These conditions ought to be easy of fulfilment, as donations to the amount of Rs. 80,000 are already promised, and the object in view is one for which money is sure to be forthcoming. We are glad to see that the management of the institution is to be left wholly in the hands of a committee of its members. It will be likely to succeed much better so than if hampered with the kindly official leading strings which have so often been fatal to independent efforts in this country.—Friend of India.

COAL MINES ON FIRE.—The fires in the several mines still burn, though not all of them dangerously. The old workings of the Equitable are still on fire, but there is not much probability of harm being done. The Sooree-road, which fell in from the fires some time ago, is a complete wreck, with fearful chasms in the middle of it. No attempt seems to be made to restore the road, or to make a new one. People are surprised that the magistrate does not see either to one or the other; for really the present state of things is discreditable to the administration. The road is not only destroyed at the place indicated; but for a couple of miles or so, in either direction, is sadly in need of repair. It tells its own story, but no official seems to visit the place to hear or see for himself. It is now getting on for two years since the road fell in, and there has been no attempt to repair it. Some months ago the Equitable people wanted to make a road over a piece of land belonging to the Raneegunge Company, a few biggahs only, but they were not allowed to do so. The prohibitive sum of Rs. 10,000 is said to have been demanded. It is as well that the sum was not paid, for the fire is extending in that direction, and the land may at no distant period share the fate of the Sooree-road. It is over an old working that has been abandoned for some years. The fire in what are known as the native mines still smoulders, and if the owner does not keep a sharp look-out the fire may reach his working mines, not to his advantage.—Indian Daily News, Feb. 25.

THE MUNICIPAL BILL.—We pointed out last week, with the necessary feeling of regret, that the sincerity of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal when last year making some promises of municipal reform had been brought into serious question. Nothing can well be more painful to a Governor, who desires to command human respect which shall cause his memory to live when his period of office shall have expired, than suspicions which charge his motives and intentions mounted upon his own language. Any pain of this kind that Sir Richard Temple might have been disposed to feel of his own accord has been rather increased within the week by the attitude which the citizens of Calcutta have suddenly assumed within the last few days. Knocking over the chairman to the justices, who has been riding them at ease so long that he has been tempted to believe in himself, the justices who represent the town have resolved on appearing by counsel before the Government, in order to point out two things which it were unwise any longer to ignore. One is that, while eating the pay of the rate-payers, the Chairman has been ignoring their expressed convictions wholesale, and actually been laying himself out to defeat them; the other, that the Municipal Bill now being indecently hurried through the provincial legislature is rather too much of a sham even for Sir Richard Temple's administration. The Lieutenant-Governor could easily enough secure the services of a Municipal chief whose judgment and energy were more evenly balanced.—Indian Daily News, Feb. 25.

ACCIDENT TO MR. CARPENTER.—A contemporary's Nagpore correspondent telegraphed on Monday afternoon, in answer to inquiries concerning Mr. Carpenter's lamentable accident, that "Mr. Carpenter's horse struck a mud wall, and falling on his head was stunned. Mr. Carpenter was shot over with tremendous force, and struck the ground on the side of his head. He has not yet recovered consciousness, and his pulse this morning is sinking. Concussion of brain, fracture of the skull, and effusion of blood to the base of the brain, is the diagnosis. Medical opinion unfavourable." Mr. Carpenter, it seems, was riding a fine Arab, which has been in his possession for some time, in the luckless Kamptee Hunt Steeplechase. The start had been delayed for some time by the fractiousness of one of the horses at the post, and when all got off, the setting sun, right in their eyes, was casting long shadows towards them. Mr. Carpenter at once took the lead, cleared the first jump safely, and as he neared the second, pulled his horse together, as the obstacle was a mud wall three feet nine inches high. The shadow thrown from it on the take off side was so great that the horse did not see the jump till he was close on to it. In taking it he struck the top with his fetlocks, hard, and then fell straight on his head, his rider, whose seat had not been loosened by the first shock, of course falling with extra force on to the hard ground head first, or rather on the left side of his head and his left shoulder. He was removed to his own house, and received the closest attention of doctors and friends.—Times of India, March 6.

THE CAMP OF EXERCISE.—The report on the Delhi Camp of Exercise was published in the last Gazette of India with the following remarks by the Government of India:—"It is with great satisfaction that the Governor-General in Council has received this report, testifying, as it does, to the good conduct and high efficiency of the troops assembled at Delhi; and it has been peculiarly gratifying to the Government of India, as well as to the Commander-in-Chief, that Field-Marshal his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales should have had the opportunity of inspecting and witnessing the movements of so fine a body of her Majesty's Army in India. The Governor-General in Council desires to convey to Lord Napier of Magdala the cordial thanks of the Government of India, for his unceasing efforts to advance the welfare and efficiency of the army, and for the measures which he has taken to make this and former camps of exercise useful for the instruction of officers and men. The Government of India congratulate the Commander-in-Chief on the fine appearance and efficient condition of the troops assembled at the camp, and upon the approbation which his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has been pleased to convey through his Excellency to the army. During the operations Lord Napier of Magdala met with a severe accident; but with that devotion to duty which is so characteristic of his Lordship, this did not interfere with his continued personal command of the troops. The Governor-General in Council further desires to convey the thanks of the Government of India to all those officers and departments mentioned by his Excellency Lord Napier of Magdala, for the exertions which have contributed to the gratifying results which have been brought to the notice of the Government.—Times of India, March 6.

THE MAHARAJAH OF JAIPUR.—He has shown most extraordinary abilities, and has now the reputation of being the most enlightened of native Princes. He plays Badminton, billiards, goes in for every sport, and is not only a good photographer and artist, but a very well-informed mechanic. He understands a steam engine as well as any practised engineer. There existed a sympathy between the late Earl of Mayo and the present Rajah of Jaipur, which was a subject of wonder to those who observed it. When Lord Mayo was assassinated the Maharajah cried like a child, went into mourning for some time, and has since then done everything, regardless of cost, to perpetuate the late Earl's memory. He has built a magnificent General Hospital, and furnished it with conveniences not to be seen in the finest hospital in Europe, and called it the Mayo Hospital. Opposite the building is a magnificent statue of the late Earl. It is a duplicate of the one at Cockermouth, only that it is a bronze one, and the statue at Cockermouth is marble. He has given a lac and a half of rupees towards the endowment of a large college in Ajmere, called the Mayo College, and, in fact, has done everything to perpetuate the late Earl's memory. There is a school of arts here well worth seeing; there is also a large college, where about 850 boys are educated, and from where five out of six students matriculated last year. He has ten girls' schools under European teachers, and a medical hall, library, and, in fact, everything which a European town ought to have. In addition to these he has water laid through the town, and the whole city and suburbs are lighted with gas, although the people were much prejudiced against the introduction of gas; yet the Maharajah supported Mr. Silbiger, the gentleman who has laid on the gas and constructed all the workshops for it, and now the result has stupefied the people, who go up to a burning gas jet and won't believe that it is fire until they burn their fingers in it.—Indian Daily News Correspondent.

QUEEN'S MILITARY WIDOWS' FUND.—The following abstract statement of receipts and disbursements of the Queen's Military Widows' Fund, from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 1874, as also the assets and liabilities of the Fund at the latter date, are published in the Indian Official Gazettes. The general account of the Fund for 1874 commences with a detail of all sources of receipts; but we subjoin only the totals of receipts and disbursements:—

The grand total of assets belonging to the Fund represents the amount of Rs. 234,300. The relief granted to the families of deceased officers by this institution, since its establishment in 1820 to Dec. 31, 1874, amounts to Rs. 13,10,139-14-9. The list of subscribers to the Fund is a very lengthy one,—filling about four pages of the Bombay Official Gazette,—includes 199 officers of the British and native armies of India, and 55 of her Majesty's regiments serving in India. The number of widows of officers relieved by the Fund from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 1874, was six, viz., Madames Beatson, Maunsell, Richardson, Hurford, Fitzgerald, and Keatinge. The sums awarded to the widows severally and including maintenance, allowance, travelling allowance, passage-money home, &c., ranged between the sums of Rs. 4,768, Rs. 4,684, Rs. 4,606, Rs. 3,390, Rs. 2,720, and Rs. 1,600.

THE CITY OF JAIPUR.—Jaipur is in the large province of Rajputana, and, strange to say, nearly all the capitals in Rajputana have undergone this migration, generally from the fastnesses of the hills, to less protected places, still bearing in mind the instruction of the ancients that, "a king should take up his residence in a capital rendered difficult of access by natural or artificial barriers, as a desert, mound of earth, water, trees, and above all a fortress of mountains, which is said to have many transcendent virtues; that to build a fort is essential, as one man on a wall is a match for a hundred foes, that the palace should be in the centre, surrounded by water and trees." All these advantages are possessed by the present city of Jaipur, which stands on a small plain or basin conjectured to be the bed of a lake, having on all sides, except the south, where the ranges diverge, rugged hills, the summits of which are now, at important points, crowned with forts; at the end of the ridge overhanging the city on the north-west stands the chief defensive work, Nahagurh, or the Tiger Rock; the rock face is so scarped as to be inaccessible on the south or city side; on the north the ridge slopes towards Amber. The city of Jaipur from East to West, or between the gates of the sun and moon—regents of these quarters—and in the line of the main street, is two miles and forty yards in length, and about 1¼ mile in breadth. It is laid out in regular rectangular blocks; two wide roads cross the central one dividing the city into six equal portions; these are again intersected by roads of less width, and so on, until roads become lanes. The main streets are 111 feet wide, and the places of business and large temples are in the widest thoroughfare; the houses of the nobles and citizens in the more remote, and the palace occupies the central block on the north, about a seventh of the whole town. A masonry crenalated wall, covered with smooth red plaster, averaging in height about twenty feet, and in thickness ten feet, surrounds the whole city; there are seven gateways furnished with screen walls, all built on the same pattern, with two kiosks above and machicollations over the entrance. The doors are studded with iron knobs, on which are, in some instances, the remains of spikes, in former days useful in preventing the employment of elephants in forcing a way through; this obstacle was once overcome by a chief of Jaipur (the chief native territory in Rajputana), who, eager for victory, threw his body before the elephant and told the driver to hasten on. At tolerably equal distances are bastions with embrasures for cannon. The grand feature of the whole city is the unsparing use of the foiled horizontal arch — in shop, private dwelling house—everywhere in niches and in the many kiosks, which project above the general outline; changes of every kind are rung upon it, from flat through round to pointed. The roofs also take every form, from the ruined thatch, fortunately rare, to the peculiar segmental boat-shaped vault, crowned with gilded pinnacles, evidently the top of a bamboo hut worked in stone, quaint but hardly beautiful—add to this the wonderfully thin walls, the endless variety of tracery, the fantastic mouldings, and the occasional barbarity of a temple spire, the angles picked out in light green lines, in juxtaposition with an ugly whitewashed dome, and you have a most original and striking study. The best looking part of the city is that portion of the main street extending between the two tanks, having the palace on the one side and some lofty houses, one with a modern Grecian front, on the other. The central gate of the palace is a lofty Saracenic structure, which faces a road occupied by the principal and leading courtiers. At the farthest end is a menagerie containing at least twelve of the largest and ferocious looking tigers in the world.—Indian Daily News Correspondent.

MILITARY.—The 76th Foot left Secunderabad en route for England last week. The right wing started on the evening of the 1st, and the left wing on the evening of the 2nd instant. The 2-16th, which relieves the 76th, is expected to arrive at Secunderabad on Wednesday next.—Times of India, March 6.

SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.—We learn that the branch of the South Indian Railway from Tanjor to Combaconum is so near completion that arrangements are being made for its opening to the public on the 1st of April next. A portion of this company's line from Tanjor to Madras is also expected to be ready for opening about the same time.

DEATH OF MR. ELSNER.—Mr. F. Elsner, Assistant Conservator of Forests, died of cholera at Prome, on the 6th Feb. He had only recently returned from Tavoy, and suffered greatly from exposure in the Southern Forests in the performance of the duty on which he had been specially deputed. On his return to Rangoon he was posted to the Western-Prome and Bassein Forests.

NEWS FROM RANGOON.—Intelligence by telegram from Rangoon is current to the effect that the convicts in Moulmein gaol broke out on Saturday last, the 26th ult., and that the assistance of the troops had to be called for in order to effect their recapture. Fourteen of them are reported to be killed and wounded in the scuffle which took place on their recapture, indicating that a desperate attempt had been made by them to obtain their liberty. Another item of news is also current from Rangoon to the effect that the Karen boundary mission and the Grosvenor party have met with misfortune, but the nature and extent of the misfortune is not known at present.—Madras Athenæum, March 4.

HEALTH OF MADRAS.—The return of deaths for this city for the week which ended on Friday, the 25th ult., contrasts favourably with that of the previous week, the figures being respectively 366 for the former period and 275 for the latter. This lessened mortality is due in a great measure to an improvement which has taken place in the public health as regards the outbreak of cholera, from which we have for some time past been suffering, the deaths from this disease in the week under review being forty-two less than they were in the week previous. A reduction also of twenty-five deaths has taken place from fevers of the various descriptions prevailing in this country. To dysentery are attributed twenty deaths, and to diarrhœa eleven, while small-pox numbers ten victims, five of which were males and five females. The balance of deaths not particularly classed is 154, of which eighty-seven were males and sixty-seven females. The public health will now probably improve as the hot season advances and the peculiar and unhealthy weather, which invariably sets in at the end of the cold season and the commencement of the hot one. The hot weather is by no means the most unhealthy.—Madras Athenæum.

THE CHOLERA.—The state of the public health in Madras just now is such as to cause some anxiety. Cholera has again made its appearance in some localities, from which it was hoped it had taken its final departure. Victims fall daily to the disease in New Town, Pursewalkum, Chintadrapettah, and Royapooram, especially in the last-named districts. Mr. Sharpe, an engine-driver, a resident at Royapooram, who was long connected with the Madras Railway Company, succumbed to the disease last week. Mr. Wilcox, a well-known shopkeeper in Popham's-broadway, lost his wife from the same cause. Dr. George Currie, residing in Vepery, had a very sharp attack of the disease, but is fast recovering. Steps are to be taken for letting the water of the sea into the Cooum; a suction pipe is to be run into the sea from the Fort trench, into which the water will be pumped by means of engines, and from the trench the water will, it appears, be let into the Cooum.

THE MAULMAIN JAIL.—A Rangoon paper says:—Dr. Kelly, Inspector-General of Prisons, proceeded to Maulmain by the mail steamer of Feb. 4. We understand that there exists an uneasy feeling in the place regarding the convicts in the local central jail. The prisoners, it appears, are in a state of great excitement, in consequence of bad control. It is owing to this unfortunate circumstance that the jailor, Mr. Rundell, was attacked lately with murderous intention, and nearly lost his life. At the same time the deputy-jailor had his wrist broken. Dr. Kelly has gone, not only to inspect the prison, but to investigate the causes that have resulted in general dissatisfaction among the prisoners. It is expected there will be a searching investigation regarding the discipline and management of the institution, and if anybody can see justice done in the matter, it is Dr. Kelly, with his long experience of prisoners and prison management in the province. We learn at the same time that Dr. Sinclair, in charge of the prison, has applied for furlough to Europe for two years.

MILITARY.—Madras is almost denuded of European troops, one company of H.M.'s 67th Foot, a battery of Royal Artillery, and fifty-two invalids—ancient heroes belonging to that privileged corps of non-effectives known as the European Artillery Veteran Company—constituting the entire garrison of Fort Saint George. Three native regiments occupy "lines" in the suburb north-west and extreme west of the town; but the European element has never been at such a low ebb, and people talk of mismanagement, and emit uncomfortable murmurs on the subject. There is now a rumour, distinctly traceable to the Adjutant-General's Office, that the present state of things is to exist for some months to come. The transport Tenasserim carried away the last of H.M.'s 98th Regiment to Burmah on Tuesday, Feb. 15, and was expected to return with the remainder of the 67th. But since her departure the current on dit is that the expected companies of the regiment are ordered from Rangoon direct to Perak. It may be, however, that this is merely the construction put upon the unquestioned fact of the invalid ex-warriors having been warned that they will be "for garrison duty" for the next "two months at least."

CHOLERA IN HYDERABAD.—Our Hyderabad correspondent says:—"Cholera, I regret to say, continues to prevail in the city of Hyderabad; daily, almost hourly, victims are carried off. How is it that such a large proportion of these unfortunates are women? Can doctors explain that fact? I have a theory of my own on the subject, frightfully uncharitable, I grant you, but containing none the less a modicum of truth in it, I suspect. I fear, then, that the anxiety often felt by reckless men to get rid of their wives at any price is a not unimportant factor in the result. A dose of arsenic secretly introduced into some irresistibly seductive sweetmeat is administered to the objectionable wife, whose absence is more desired than her presence. The symptoms that follow are, as far as I understand these matters, not very unlike those of cholera. The woman dies, and the disconsolate husband, his eyes streaming with crocodilian tears, circulates the distressing news that Mrs. Ram Bux or Madame Sheik Udeen—poor, dear woman—died last night of cholera, after only a few hours' illness (cataract of sobs). In the country districts many a disliked wife succumbs to snake-bite, whose brown skin was never touched by the fang of any snake. 'It is a terrible world we live in, my masters.'"—Times of India.

STATION TALK.

CALLIAN, Feb. 23.—There was a great commotion yesterday at the Callian Railway station, caused by a European who most cruelly inflicted some horrible wounds on the face and throat of a female, supposed to be his wife. It appears that in the waiting-room an altercation took place between this couple, and a scuffle ensued, resulting in a dreadful cry from the female to this effect, "Help! help! for God's sake, help!" This of course caused great consternation, and all the station authorities ran to the spot where she was being so unmercifully dealt with, but none of them could or would dare to go forward and snatch away the knife from the hands of the offender. Fortunately, it so happened that our gallant Railway Police Inspector, Mr. Dickinson, was present, and this officer immediately on hearing the noise repaired to the scene of crime, and, notwithstanding the frantic manner in which the culprit was flourishing his knife and threatening to murder those who approached, desperately plunged forth, and seizing the enraged individual, snatched away the knife and bound his hands. The state of this criminal's mind must have, indeed, been terrible, for, on finding himself helpless, he lifted from the floor with bound hands the blood of this woman which he had spilled, and sucked it ravenously, as if to satiate his bloodthirsty spirit. The poor victim lay weltering in her blood, which was flowing profusely from the deep wounds in her cheek and throat. She is at present under treatment in the Civil Hospital at Tanna, in a very precarious state, and there is but little hope of her recovery. But this much is certain, her supposed-to-be husband, * * * by name, has been safely lodged in the jail at Tanna, where he will await his trial. Great credit is due to Mr. Dickinson, who without hesitation ran to the rescue, and at the risk of his own precious life bravely sprang into the jaws of death as it were, and, so far, not only saved the life of this poor helpless female, but the lives of many more who might perhaps have fallen victims to that already bloodstained knife had it not been for Mr. Dickinson's speedy and praiseworthy action. Credit is also due to the station master and his assistant, viz., Messrs. Johnston and Holloway, who, although new at Callian, did much to preserve order on the platform, which was thronged with a gaping mob, and rendered prompt and valuable assistance during the affray.

KARACHI, Feb. 20.—The Sindian has been frightening the simple folks of Karachi out of their wits by proclaiming to all and sundry that small-pox had made its appearance here, and that the port authorities take no measures whatever for preventing vessels arriving from the plague spots in the Red Sea and Persian Gulf from entering our harbour. The charge against the port authorities is not correct. Captain Parker is most particular in not permitting a single steamer or ship to enter the port unless she can show a clean bill of health. Native craft arriving from the Red Sea, Persian Gulf, and other infected ports dare not proceed further than Manora until they are boarded by Mr. Church, the medical subordinate, and pronounced free from contagious diseases. The steamship Arcot, which arrived on the 2nd inst., was placed in quarantine the moment it was reported that one of her crew showed symptoms of small-pox. The man was removed to Manora, and placed in a shed especially constructed for the accommodation of patients suffering from contagious diseases. The vessel was not withdrawn from quarantine until the 8th inst., after she had been thoroughly cleaned and fumigated, and on the 9th she was permitted to proceed on her voyage. On the 5th inst. the dinghy Putton arrived here with one of her khullasies suffering from small-pox. The man was immediately removed to the shed at Manora, and the strictest measures were adopted to prevent him from having any communication with the boat, which was placed in quarantine for four days, during which period she was thoroughly cleaned and fumigated, and every man on board of her was vaccinated. The steamer Dahlia, which arrived off our port on the 11th, with 721 pilgrims on board, was made to anchor outside, and it was not until the vessel had been carefully inspected by Dr. Hopkins and Mr. Church, and every man pronounced free from disease, that the captain was permitted to land the pilgrims for Karachi—about 300 in number. The rest, being bound for other ports, she took away immediately afterwards. It will thus be seen that not the slightest laxity has been displayed in carrying out sanitary and quarantine rules in our harbour, and that the local papers have been needlessly alarming the people. Up to date there has been only one case of small-pox here — that of Mr. Ashley Ingle, our Hoozoor Deputy Collector, who lately returned from Bombay. He no doubt must have contracted the germs of the disease while in Bombay, for though he appeared quite well the day he landed, the disease manifested itself the following morning.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MR. WILKINSON.—It is with regret that we hear that Mr. Wilkinson, the Cotton Inspector of Kandeish, is obliged to go to England on account of ill-health. He has shown himself to be a highly efficient officer, and is also much liked by those with whom he has come in contact.

THE "ABYSSINIA."—The turret ship Abyssinia, Captain Percy James, R.N., went out to the harbour mouth to practice her big guns, for a second time, on Friday last. It was rather late before practice began, and then the rolling of the vessel made it very difficult to hit the target. At half-past four o'clock it became necessary to return, so as to get back to the ship's moorings by nightfall. Shot weighing 400 lbs. was fired with 40 lbs. of powder. The concussion started deck bolts and shattered sundry wooden cupboards and other temporary fittings. If the battering charge of 70 lbs. of powder had been used anything not protected with iron plating would have been reduced to "smithereens." The Abyssinia's artillerymen—taken on board for the occasion—were much upset by the sea, which was unreasonably rough.—Times of India, Feb. 28.

KHELAT.—The lull in the affairs of Khelat is scarcely more remarkable than the disturbances which preceded it. Khelat history will probably continue for a long time to be a constant succession of calm and tempest. The absurdity of the report in Sind, that the Government was determined to depose the Khan, and to place his son on the throne, could only be redeemed by the contumely with which it was received. The substitution, indeed, of one cut-throat for another would be as absurd as it is unlikely.—Pioneer.

A NATIVE VIEW OF THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Writing with reference to the Bill before Parliament for enabling her Majesty the Queen to take a new title, a vernacular paper says:—"With the assumption of a new title her Majesty, we cannot help thinking, incurs new obligations towards the people of India. Nothing has hitherto transpired to indicate that Queen Victoria has a just sense of the responsibilities she takes upon herself by this enlargement of her privileges. The adoption of the measure now before the British Legislature will result in the absorption of this vast continent into the unity of the British Empire. Are its denizens likely to acquire new privileges by this change in their relations with England? If they have been placed on a footing of equality with Englishmen as to their civil and political rights, what is there in the institutions of this country to demonstrate that these rights are duly appreciated and recognised? It must be admitted that up to this hour nothing substantial has been done to enable India to send representatives to the British Parliament, or in default of this to empower her to constitute a Parliament of her own."

SMALL-POX IN BOMBAY.—The Municipal Commissioner has forwarded the following letter to Government, asking sanction for the erection of two temporary small-pox hospitals, one on the Flats and another near Mody-bay:—"Sir,—I am sorry to say that small-pox is extremely prevalent in the city, and that the resources and the accommodation of the Sir J. J. and Goculdas Tejpal Hospitals are entirely inadequate to cope with the number of patients seeking admission and attendance. Dr. Weir, the health officer, and myself, have been in communication with Dr. Thom, Dr. W. G. Hunter, Dr. Hewlett, Dr. Cooke, Dr. Blaney, and other medical men, and it appears to be the general opinion that the Municipality ought at once to provide additional accommodation in the shape of temporary hospitals and attendance. I propose to set up for the present two such temporary hospitals, one on the Flats near Arthur-road for patients from the city, one somewhere on Mody-bay for patients from the Fort, and specially for the numerous cases among the harbour population and pilgrims. The hospital should be jowly sheds, well ventilated, and which can be burnt after use. I shall endeavour to reserve the services of some native medical practitioners for regular attendance at each hospital, and I trust that the medical officers of the hospitals and the other practitioners of standing will be so good as to give some aid in the way of supervision. Attendance, clothes, provisions, &c., will be as far as possible provided by the Municipal Health Department. I now beg to suggest that his Excellency the Governor in Council will be pleased, under section 245 of the Municipal Act, to give his sanction to those and such similar measures as may be found necessary. I consider it needful to ask for powers under this section, as both the necessity for awaiting a grant by the Corporation of the requisite funds and also any possible difficulty in carrying out the details of the scheme, will thereby be avoided. I trust, therefore, that I may receive this sanction without delay." A resolution of Government, dated the 25th February, sanctions the application, so that doubtless the extra hospital accommodation so much needed will be available as soon as possible.

MR. G. ANDERSON.—The health of Mr. George W. B. Anderson was sufficiently improved to enable him to assume the duties of private secretary to his father, Sir G. C. Anderson, Acting Chief Justice. Mr. Anderson would therefore relieve Mr. Advocate Edgcombe on the 1st March.

RAILWAY SERVICE.—Mr. Robertson, C.M.B., Agent at Kandy leaves for Madras, we learn, at an early date. He is succeeded by Mr. J. B. Bishop, who has just returned from furlough. Mr. Nicholson, Galle Agent, leaves for Europe about the end of March. Mr. James Robertson returns to the position of Manager here. Mr. Arthur retires for good, after twenty years service in the East, for little over one year of which he has been manager of the Ceylon branch.—Ceylon Times, Feb. 23.

THE SERVICE.—H.E. the Governor has been pleased to appoint F. R. Saunders, Esq., to be Acting Government Agent and Fiscal for the North-Western Province, with effect from the 23rd inst.; G. A. Baumgartner, Esq., to act temporarily as Commissioner of Requests and Additional Police Magistrate of Colombo, and Coroner for the District of Colombo, with effect from the 23rd inst.; F. Dornhost, Esq., to act as Additional Police Magistrate of Colombo, and Coroner for the District of Colombo, until the 22nd inst. inclusive.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN GAVIN.—Another of the early band of Ceylon pioneers of coffee enterprise has passed away, in the person of John Gavin, of whose decease we have just heard with unfeigned regret. Commencing life as a coffee planter, he afterwards established a Kandy Agency Firm in 1849 in connection with the late Charles Pitts, under the style of Pitts and Gavin. Eventually he joined the larger firm of Keir, Dundas and Co., which under his management enjoyed an extended measure of prosperity, retiring from it a good number of years ago with an ample fortune.—Ceylon Times.

RETIREMENT OF INDIAN OFFICERS.

Fort William, Jan. 1.—No. 1.—With reference to G.G.O.'s [No. 665, dated June 25, 1874; No. 1, dated Jan. 1, 1875; No. 294, dated March 15, 1875], and with the sanction of her Majesty's Government, the Right Hon. the Governor general in Council is pleased to notify that:—

I. During the year 1876 ninety (90) officers of the Staff Corps, and Cavalry and Infantry of the Indian Army, will be permitted to retire from the service, receiving, in addition to the pension to which they may be entitled by the length of service under existing regulations, not exceeding the full pay pension of a colonel (£456. 5s. per annum), an annuity representing the estimated value of their prospective claim to the colonel's allowance, or its capitalised value as they may prefer.

II. This offer is restricted to substantive lieutenant colonels who shall have completed twenty-eight years' service, from the date of first commission, on or before the date from which they apply to retire, who may either, first, have been appointed to one of the Staff Corps, on or before the 12th September, 1866, and can claim the colonel's allowance under the provisions of G.G.O. No. 808, of the 26th September, 1866, or secondly, may be entitled, under G.O.G.G. of the 12th September, 1862, to the colonel's allowance after twelve years' service in the rank of lieutenant colonel.

III. The number allowed to retire under these conditions will be distributed as follows:—

For Bengal	40
For Bombay	20
Total	90

In the event of the whole of the retirements allotted to a particular Presidency not being taken up in that Presidency, those remaining will be distributed in such manner as may be determined by the Government of India.

IV. Applications to retire will be considered and disposed of successively according to priority of proposed dates of retirement, until the number of retirements allotted to the service shall have been accomplished, when retirements under this order will cease for the year. In the event of its becoming necessary to select one from among two or three applicants for retirement on the same day, preference will be given according to seniority from the date of first commission.

V. Officers wishing to retire under the terms of this order must, whether in or out of India, submit their applications to the office of the Adjutant-general of their respective Presidencies, naming prospective dates for their retirements, such date not to be earlier than the 1st April, 1876.

VI. Officers whose applications are accepted will be gazetted out from the dates named by themselves, but will continue to perform their duties, and receive the pay and allowances of their positions until officially informed of their removal from the effective list, either by direct communication, or by publication of the Gazette at the station at which they may be serving.

VII. Officers retiring under this arrangement will forego both the good service pension, if they are in receipt thereof, and all claim to bonus compensation under the terms of the despatch of the 8th of August, 1866 [G.G.O. No. 808 of 26th September, 1866], No. 160.

VIII. Applicants to retire must state:—

1st. Their rank and service.

2nd. Their age (supported by a certificate of birth, or in its absence by a formal declaration).

3rd. Whether they wish to receive commutation for their prospective allowances in the shape of an annuity, or to capitalise its value. Officers who desire to receive the capitalised value of the annuity must attach to their applications a certificate in the form given in Appendix A. In the case of officers retiring out of India, the health certificate required will be called for and furnished under instructions from the India Office in London.

4th. Whether they desire to receive payment, wholly or in part, in India, or in England.

IX. The Table given in Appendix B. shows the rates at which the expectation of the colonel's allowance will be calculated in carrying this order into effect in the case of officers of various ages and service.

X. For the purpose of arriving at the amount payable in each case, whether as an annuity or in a single payment, officers' ages will be calculated from their birthday next succeeding the date from which they propose to retire, and the number of years they have to serve before becoming entitled to the colonel's allowance will be calculated from the date of the proposed retirement. When the period to serve contains a fraction of a year, the fraction, if it be six months or under six months, will be excluded altogether; if it exceeds six months, it will be reckoned as a complete year.

XI. Payments of the capitalised value of the annuity made in India under this order will be at the rate of 1s. 10½d. for the rupee.

XII. Officers who elect to receive an annuity in preference to the capital sum, will not, after their retirements have appeared in the Gazette, be allowed to capitalise such annuity under the provisions of this order; and it is to be understood that no separate applications of individual officers to retire after the present retirements have been allotted will be entertained on the basis of this order.

XIII. Officers of the half-pay list of the Staff Corps will be permitted, if disposed to retire from the service, to avail themselves of this scheme of retirement, provided they are eligible thereto by the fulfilment, previously to their transfer to the half-pay list, of all the conditions required. The time passed by an officer on the half-pay list of the Staff Corps will not count towards the twelve years in the grade of lieutenant-colonel required to qualify for promotion to the colonel's allowance.

XIV. No application from officers to cancel their retirement, or to change the date of such retirement will be entertained after it has been announced in the Official Gazette of the Presidency to which they belong.

[The above Appendices have already appeared in the Mail.]

THE PRINCE'S MENAGERIE.—Several of the animals belonging to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales have been removed from the Osborne and Serapis. It was found that some of them were suffering in health from being cramped up in so small a space as was afforded on board ship. As neither the Serapis nor the Osborne will be likely to leave Bombay for about ten days yet, it was resolved to send the animals ashore for a change. Accordingly the couple of Rampore hounds and the two Munipoora hockey ponies were sent from the Osborne, and the diminutive pony. The two young elephants and the Neilgherry bulls were sent ashore from the Serapis. The animals are all located at present in the Dockyard, where they will remain until within a few days of the Prince leaving us. Already they have attracted a great many people to see them, and undoubtedly a great many more will pay them a visit when it is known that they are there.—Times of India, March 6.

THE AGRA BANK.—INDIAN EXCHANGE AND THE PRICE OF SILVER.

The annual meeting of the proprietors of this bank has been held at the City Terminus Hotel. The Chairman (Mr. James Thomson) moved the adoption of the report, from which it appeared that there was a net surplus of £92,836. 14s. for the year. The directors were gratified that the bank had not been in any way affected by "the commercial frauds and unprincipled speculations which have come to light during the year in connection with the Indian trade." An annual dividend of 5 per cent. was recommended by the board, and it was proposed that £40,000 should be carried to the reserve fund, which would be raised to £80,000. Mr. Thomson congratulated the meeting upon the fact that the bank had escaped the frauds which had come home with such a heavy hand to some of its neighbours. Referring to the depreciation in the value of silver, he said that it had affected the profits of the bank during the past year. A considerable portion of the profits were made in India, and as many of the shareholders were residents in this country it was necessary that the money should be sent here for appropriation and distribution. Formerly serious loss had been avoided by watching a favourable opportunity; but in consequence of the recent depression in exchanges between India and this country the conversion from rupees into sterling had occasioned a very material loss, which he could not estimate at less than £7,000. The question of Indian exchanges and the unprecedented fall which had taken place for some months past had attracted considerable public attention. Some persons were of opinion that it was owing to the depreciation of the value of silver and an excess of silver shipments into India. Such a view was not, however, borne out by facts; for there had not been an increase which India could not easily absorb. Neither did the change in price of the metal in this country seem to have preceded, but rather to have followed, the fall in the exchange. If there should be an accumulation of stock in silver and a pressure on the part of the owners to sell, that would alter the state of things altogether, but the condition of affairs hitherto had been a pressure on the part rather of buyers to buy than of sellers to sell, so that when there was a reaction in exchange a short time since the value of silver in the course of a week or a fortnight was raised 3 per cent. Within the last few days there had been an accumulation to a small extent of silver in the market; and if that were continued it might have a prejudicial effect upon exchanges. His impression was that the silver market was subject to the great principle of supply and demand, and that the market had been overdone and glutted, and that was fostered by the great issue of Government Council bills, to the extent of £1,500,000 monthly, or about £16,000,000 or £17,000,000 a year beyond the legitimate wants of trade. If the market were let alone he believed the disease would cure itself, and that the value of silver would find its own level. The remedy of the present state of things was rather a political than a commercial problem. He could not refrain from saying that the action recently taken by the Indian Government in withholding their reserves, which hitherto they had, through the Presidency banks, made available for the purposes of trade, under certain limitations, be which the value of money had been materially increased in India—at Bengal to the extent of 3 per cent.—could scarcely be regarded as a sound financial or political measure.

The Earl of Carnwath seconded the adoption of the report.

Gen. Gordon remarked that the total amount of assets for the past year was £331,543 less than that of the preceding year. He objected to the sum of £40,000 being added to the reserve fund, and moved an amendment to the effect that only £20,000 should be carried to that fund, and that the remaining £20,000 should be added to the dividend.

After some discussion the amendment was withdrawn, and the report unanimously adopted.

DEPRECIATION OF SILVER.

The Select Committee appointed to inquire into the cause and extent of the depreciation in the value of silver commenced its investigation on Monday last, Mr. Goschen in the chair. The other members of the Committee are Mr. Baxter, Mr. Cave, Mr. C. B. Denison, Mr. Fawcett, Lord George Hamilton, Mr. Hermon, Mr. K. Hodgson, Mr. Hubbard, Mr. Massey, Sir C. Mills, Mr. Mulholland, and Mr. Shaw.

Mr. Waterfield was the first witness examined. He submitted a variety of statements which had been prepared by the India-office. They gave the total value of merchandise and treasure imported and exported in regard to India; the value of gold and silver imported and exported from British India; the same information continued over the last forty years; the value of gold and silver going into the Indian mints for twenty years; the amount of notes in circulation and of bullion in reserve since 1863, and the average rates of exchange in regard to bills of exchange upon the Governor-General of India for the last forty years.

It appeared that there were no further witnesses in readiness.

Mr. Kirkman Hodgson stated that he was endeavouring to obtain some evidence from California, but he had not yet been successful.

Mr. Hermon suggested that it would be important to obtain evidence as to the rate of exchange in England as well as in India.

The Committee, after a lengthened private consultation, adjourned until Thursday.

The Select Committee resumed its sitting on Thursday, Mr. Goschen in the chair.

Sir Hector Hay, partner in a firm of bullion brokers, said he had statistics showing the annual production of silver since 1852. These ranged from about 8 millions in that year to 16 millions in 1875. The figures published in the Board of Trade statistics as to the exports and imports of bar silver must be taken to include so much gold. Up to the end of 1875 about 6½ millions sterling had been sold by the German Government during the years 1873, 1874, and 1875. The chief part of that silver went to India. He thought the silver that went to Germany to pay the French indemnity returned to France, that being the easiest way for Germans to get rid of it. Though the amount of silver sold by Germany was insufficient in itself to demonetise silver, it had in reality had a great effect in demonetising it, because the information that they were selling created a panic in the minds of buyers of silver. Some people said that Germany had still thirty millions of silver to demonetise. He imagined there was at least two millions sterling of silver going from London to the manufacturing districts every year to be converted into ornaments, plate, &c. The depressed state of trade had lowered the rate of exchange; that tended to depreciate silver, and the depreciation of silver acted again on the rate of exchange.

Mr. Pixley, of the firm of Pixley and Abel, bullion brokers, was inclined to put the production of silver at two millions more than the last witness. The silver coinage of Germany supposed to be in circulation prior to the great monetary changes that have been made amounted to nearly ninety millions sterling. The amount of old German silver coinage retired from circulation up to 1875 was over eighteen millions. The new German silver coined up to the end of 1875 was only about eight millions. The amount of old coins converted into bars and sold up to September, 1875, was about five millions sterling, and probably was now seven millions. There was a necessity, in considering this question of depreciation, to take into account the depression of trade in India. From the ninety millions estimated to be in circulation in Germany there would be a large deduction to make for wear and tear, melting down, &c., but it was almost impossible to estimate the percentage which must be deducted. He did not think we should ever see silver at its former prices, but he hoped to see a rise from its present low position.

Mr. Giffen, on the literary staff of the Economist, who had paid special attention to the subject of production and export of silver, gave evidence in these branches of the subject.

The committee adjourned.

Miscellaneous.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Khiva took on Thursday, £225,158, consisting chiefly of silver for India, China, and the Straits.

DEATH OF THE HON. RICHARD CAVENDISH.—We notice the death of the Hon. Richard Cavendish, which occurred on March 18, at Thornton Hall, in Buckinghamshire. The deceased gentleman, a son of the second Lord Waterpark, was formerly in the Bengal Civil Service, and for some time British Resident at Gwalior. He retired on the Annuity Fund in 1843.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR PARKES.—Professor Parkes, F.R.S., died at Bitterne, near Netley, on March 15, aged fifty-one. Dr. Parkes's hygienic work was cheerfully carried on in relation to the army. Early in the year 1842 Dr. Parkes proceeded as a regimental assistant-surgeon to Burmah, but towards the close of 1845 he returned to England, and retired into civil life. The professor was active in the formation and establishment of the Army Medical School at Netley, at which he was Professor of Hygiene.

ORIENTAL TELEGAM AGENCY.—Mr. Robert Valentine Dodwell, telegraph engineer, of 11, South-bank-terrace, Kensington, was charged before Mr. Aldermen Finnis at the Guildhall Police-court, on Thursday, with embezzling, between the 1st of August, 1874, and the 31st of October, 1875, the sum of £2,000 received by him, on his own account, of the Oriental Telegram Agency (Limited), of 140, Leadenhall-street, of which he was the managing director. Mr. Grantham, M.P., and Mr. Moulton prosecuted, the case was adjourned.

COLONEL JOHN JACKSON, C.B.—This officer, who died at Canterbury on March 12, at the age of seventy-five, entered the Indian army in 1822, and served in that country in 1854. He was with his regiment, the 25th Bombay N.I., throughout the campaigns in Candahar and Scinde, was present at the defeat of Ukbar Kahn, under General Nott. in 1842, and with the force which had to fight its way through the Kojak Pass and descend the Bolan Pass under General England. Colonel Jackson served under Sir Charles Napier in Scinde, and was present on the 12th of February, 1843, at the battle of Meeanee, where he took command of his regiment after the fall of Major Teesdale, also at Hyderabad and Oomerkole. For these services he was made a brevet-major and a C.B. He retired in 1857. He was buried on the 23rd inst. in St. Michael's Churchyard, Yorktown.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The Council of India notify that tenders on the 5th April may be made, at the option of the person tendering, either for bills, as heretofore, or for amounts payable immediately in India on telegraphic advice. The Government bills are payable in India on demand, but, as their transmission thither occupies some weeks, the present arrangement to draw for amounts by telegraph involves the saving of a small amount of interest, and to that extent the demand for the bills will be increased. But of course much depends upon the value of silver, and should that metal be relatively cheaper on the 5th prox., when the next bills are to be applied for, it will be taken for remittance to the East in the place of the Government drafts. The present arrangement does not, in fact, materially alter the position of affairs, excepting that it will give the Indian banks a somewhat useful option. The silver market is firmer, and bars have been dealt in at 52¾d. per ounce, showing a rise of ¼d.

THE LATE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—At the monthly board meeting of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, held a few days since, the Bishop of Ely in the chair, feeling allusion was made to the great loss the whole Anglican communion had sustained by the death of Bishop Milman, of Calcutta. One or two chaplains having borne testimony to his marvellous powers of locomotion, which they feared had overtaxed his strength, and to his refusal to be presented crouching to the King of Burmah, saying that if his Majesty declined to receive him as the Envoy of the King of Kings he would not come—the right reverend chairman said the news had come to him with peculiar solemnity. He could not but remember that he himself had declined the warfare in which his right reverend brother had fallen, and, alluding to the fact that the see of Calcutta had not been founded 100 years, he said it could boast a succession of illustrious bishops even as the world counts men great. The poetry of Heber, the wide sympathy of Cotton, and the patriotic learning of Milman would make any bishopric famous, and he prayed that a successor worthy of such a spiritual ancestry would be forthcoming. Prebendary Kempe stated that he too had declined the see of Calcutta, feeling his health unequal to it, and he endorsed all that had fallen from the Bishop of Ely as to the unselfish manner in which, with little disregard of self, he threw himself into the work. He considered that it would be better to delay any formal vote of sympathy with the family till they were in possession of the circumstances of the right reverend prelate's death; but no time should be lost in communicating with the India-office as to seizing the opportunity for a subdivision of the diocese, to effect which was to have been the main object of the late prelate's projected visit to England next May. A motion to this effect was adopted nem. con. It is considered not improbable that the Rev. L. G. Milne, tutor of Keble College, Oxford, who was recently nominated to the bishopric of Bombay, but who has not yet been consecrated, will be transferred to Calcutta, and that another appointment for Bombay will be made.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE INDIAN SECRETARY.—REINER V. THE MARQUIS OF SALISBURY.—This was a suit in the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice. According to the bill the plaintiff is the descendant of a young Bavarian farmer, who went to India in 1755, having previously, under the Bavarian law, sold his rights of domicile for fifty florins to his brother. At first he fought with the English, afterwards against them, and, finally raising a mercenary troop of his own, he took service at various times with the rulers of Hindostan, obtaining, on account of his morose disposition and ferocity, the name of "Sumsoo." Entering the service of Muzil Khan, a native prince, he was given the province of Sirdhana, in the Dooab. He afterwards acquired other lands in the Goor Gaon, and died in 1778, leaving a child, who was soon deprived of the property by his stepmother. At a subsequent period the East India Company took possession of all the estates as a step towards the assertion of a right to them. This suit was now instituted by the descendant of the brother to whom "Sumsoo" had parted with his rights as a Bavarian subject, and the plaintiff prayed that he might be granted inspection of documents in the Indian archives. The defendant, the Marquis of Salisbury, demurred, on three grounds: First, that the Court had no power to compel discovery; secondly, that the plaintiff's claim was barred by the statute of limitations in force in India; and thirdly, that the defendant was not rightly sued, as he should, if made a party at all, have been proceeded against in his official capacity of Secretary of State for India. Mr. Fitzjames, Q.C., and Mr. Macnaghten appeared for the demurrer; Mr. Locock Webb, Q.C., Mr. Willis, and Mr. Glen in support of the bill. His lordship held that the case was governed by his own decision in "Doss v. the Secretary of State for India," to the effect that a suit will not lie in this country for the recovery of lands in India or the colonies. The bill, which was only in reality in aid of an action, could not be maintained in England, and any proceedings which could be taken must be instituted in the Courts of India, which would have full jurisdiction to deal with the whole matter. The demurrer must therefore be allowed.

THE LAND REVENUE OF INDIA.—Last evening, at a meeting of the Indian section of the Society of Arts, Sir G. Campbell, M.P., in the chair, a paper was read by Major-General Marriott, C.S.I., on the land revenue of India. The importance of any policy touching the land revenue of India, he said, would be partially seen when it was stated that the amount of the land tax was twenty-one millions, but was only fully shown when it was seen how everything affecting the land revenue touches the rights of the occupants of the land. The modern English notion of a landlord or tenant had no existence in India until introduced by us. The most prevalent notion of property in land was that it belonged to the village community, the cultivated land being distributed to separate families, whilst the waste and pasturage was held in common. The subordinate claims and privileges by subdivision of family shares and by various customary rights were most complicated. But. whatever the peculiarities of tenure, the claim of the sovereign power or of some one to whom the Sovereign might transfer it, to a share of the produce, was recognised. Such share was the land revenue which the British sovereign power receives. He then described the various tenures, which are all based more or less on the village system, and said—Speaking generally, exclusive ownership in the English sense is yet unknown; whilst with respect to non-liability to eviction, so long as customary dues are paid, ownership of the land may as easily be imputed, for the most part, to the cultivators at the bottom of the scale of those who have claims upon the land, as to the zemindars and others at the top of the scale, exclusive ownership being really neither with one nor the other. There were various opinions as to whether the revenue derived from the land was in the nature of a tax or a rent. In his opinion it partook of both characters. In Bengal the amount of the tax was permanently settled in 1793, but in other parts of India the settlement is revised every thirty years; and, passing under review the opinion of Lord Lawrence and Colonel B. Smith on the subject, he came to a conclusion against the permanent settlement, showing that the question of alternative taxation was the real issue, that a permanent settlement would lead to the transfer of the proprietary rights from the agricultural to the commercial class, and would not, therefore, be likely to add to the eventual contentment of the dispossessed class. Believing that the problem taxed to the utmost the statesmanship of the most advanced, he did not pretend to declare the details of a true policy, but he had no doubt that the prosperity of a rent-receiving class, when obtained by the degradation and poverty of the cultivating class, was, on the whole, a national misfortune and loss under any circumstances; whilst in India it must cause grave financial difficulty, because the dependence of the State on the land for its principal revenue is inevitable, even if it were not, as he believed it to be, economically advantageous. A discussion followed, in which Mr. Wood, Mr. Rowland Hamilton, Colonel Rathbone, Mr. Conybeare, and the chairman joined, the latter expressing an opinion that we had introduced into India our own ideas of land tenure too rapidly, and that the people there would accept at our hands a fair and liberal administration of the state of things we found there. The proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to General Marriott for his paper.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, March 20.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Mr. DISRAELI rose, and in correction of misconceptions which he was surprised to learn had arisen, desired to state that there never was any intention to substitute any title for the supreme one of Queen of Great Britain and Ireland. He added that under no circumstances would the Queen assume the title of Empress in England, nor would any of her children assume Imperial style in consequence of the passing of the Bill.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON admitted that this statement was in some degree satisfactory, and regretted that it had not been made earlier; an expression of opinion cheered not only by the Opposition, but in a marked manner from below the gangway on the Ministerial side. It did not, however, meet the objections with respect to the non-recognition of the Colonies and the Government of India, dealt with in amendments placed on the paper.—The House then went into Committee, and Mr. Serjeant SIMON moved an amendment with the object of including the Colonies in the Royal style and title.—Mr. DISRAELI referred in an apologetic tone to the much criticised observations made by him some nights earlier on the position of colonists. Those observations were "perhaps made in a lighter vein" than was suitable to the subject. But his sympathy with the Colonies was profound, and he should be very glad if the relations between them and the Sovereign could be described by some felicitous phrase. He was, however, perfectly unprepared to suggest such a phrase, and was not inclined to delay the passage of the Bill whilst it was being sought for.—Mr. FORSTER was sorry the Government could not accept the amendment, but at the same time he thought it would be well not to press it to a division.—In this view Mr. GLADSTONE concurred, throwing the responsibility of ignoring the Colonies upon the present advisers of Her Majesty. —Mr. DISRAELI, rising again, insisted that the cases of India and the Colonies were altogether different. There were political considerations of the highest character which had induced the Government to advise the Queen to take the title of Empress, and those considerations did not affect the Colonies.—Mr. SIMON having withdrawn his amendment, Mr. OSBORNE MORGAN moved to add to the enabling clause of the Bill words which would preclude precedence or priority being given to any style or title over those which now pertain to the Crown.—On this a conversation arose, in which Mr. GLADSTONE insisted upon knowing whether the sign manual was to be altered, and received an answer which he interpreted (without being contradicted) to mean that the sign manual was to be altered for India but not for England.—Mr. MORGAN did not press his amendment to a division; but the omission of the word "Royal" before the words "style and title" being challenged by Mr. Serjeant SIMON, and no satisfactory answer being forthcoming, the Committee divided, and the amendment was rejected by 171 votes against 92.—Mr. NEWDEGATE moved to add to the clause words providing that nothing in the Bill shall abridge or prejudicially affect the power or authority of Parliament in relation to the Government of India.—Sir G. CAMPBELL supported the amendment on the ground that it was necessary the princes and people of India should have it made unmistakably clear to them that the Government of India was in no way essentially altered.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said the proposed alteration was altogether unnecessary; and Mr. NEWDEGATE, expressing himself satisfied with having gained prominence for his objection, withdrew the amendment.—Mr. PEASE moved an amendment with the object of embodying in the Bill the local limitation to India of the new title.—In the course of the discussion which followed, and in which Mr. GLADSTONE took an animated part, Mr. DISRAELI, asserting that, "taking the average of incidents," the country had as much security in the engagements of a Ministry as in the engagements of a Parliament, repeated, in more distinct and more detailed terms, the undertaking which underlay his statement on going into committee, that the Queen would not use the title of Empress except in India. He thought the pledge thus given should be held sufficient, but he added it was not impossible that certain terms might be introduced into the Royal proclamation setting forth the circumstances under which the Queen assumed the title.—This amendment also was withdrawn, and Sir W. HARCOURT'S amendment altering the definition of the territory of India supplied by the clause having been negatived, the Bill was ordered to be reported without amendment, a conclusion to a long debate welcomed with some cheering from the Ministerial benches.

HOUSE OF LORDS, TUESDAY, March 21.—COUNCIL OF INDIA (PROFESSIONAL APPOINTMENTS BILL.—The House went into Committee on this Bill.—The Marquis of SALISBURY stated that, having regard to the discussion which took place upon the second reading of the Bill, he had since considered the suggestion of his noble friend opposite (the Duke of Argyll), and he was convinced that there was no reason why the members of the Council should be appointed only during her Majesty's pleasure. At the same time he did not think it necessary to fix any limit with respect to the period of office of the professional members. The reason why the limit of fifteen years was established by the noble duke was because it was found that the value of the experience of the Indian members diminished after they had left India for a considerable time. There was, however, no reason to suppose that the value of the professional members of the Council would diminish, or that the same principle of appointing the additional members of Council would not apply as applied in the case of county judges and other judicial officers who were appointed during good behaviour. It was therefore proposed to strike out the words "during her Majesty's pleasure," and the result of that would be to place the three members of Council with professional qualifications in precisely the same position as the members of Council who were appointed under the Act of 1858.—The Duke of ARGYLL quite agreed that there was a considerable difference between the two classes of members, but he expressed some doubt—the disproportion between the salary and the pension being so great—whether it would not induce members to hold on to an undue period for the sake of the salary of £1,200 a year, rather than retire on £500 a year. At the same time they must remember that the money was to come out of Indian and not home finances, and they must take care that they did not cast a larger burden than was necessary on India.—The Marquis of SALISBURY said that in respect to the home charges on Indian finances they had been shown in the House of Commons to have decreased. With regard to the longevity of lawyers, he did not think that it diminished much their usefulness or vigour of intellect, and as an example he might mention that there was one of the members at present on the Council who was appointed under the old system, namely, Sir E. Perry, and no one could say that his intellectual vigour had diminished. (A laugh.) No doubt there was some justice in the remark of the noble earl, that they would be unwilling to retire on a small pension, but the evil would be less than that of increasing it.—The Bill then passed through Committee.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, March 21.—THE OCCUPATION OF KHOKAND.— Mr. B. COCHRANE on an early day after Easter to call the attention of the House to the occupation of the Khanate of Khokand by the Russians, and to move a resolution.

REDUCED POSTAGE TO INDIA.—Lord J. MANNERS, replying to Mr. LEITH, said that India having been admitted into the postal union, the rates of postage on and after the 1st of July would be reduced, on letters via Southampton, from 9d. to 6d., and via Brindisi, from 1s. to 8d.; on newspapers via Brindisi, from 3d. to 2d., and on book-packets, via Brindisi, from 4d. to 3d. per 2 oz.

THE SUEZ CANAL AND INTERNATIONAL LAW.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER asked Sir H. Wolff whether he would be willing to withdraw a motion of which he had given notice for an Address to her Majesty, praying her to take steps to place the neutrality, control, and navigation of the Suez Canal under the provisions and guarantees of public international law. He made the request being of opinion that the present was not a convenient time for discussing this question.—Sir H. WOLFF, while respectfully differing from the right hon. gentleman's views as to the expediency of discussing the question raised by his motion at this particular time, could not, after the right hon. gentleman's remarks, take the responsibility of proceeding with it to-night, and postponed it for the present.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, March 23.—THE ISLAND OF REUNION.—Mr. BOURKE stated, in reply to Mr. ERRINGTON, that reports had been received from her Majesty's Consuls in the Island of Reunion on the condition of Indian coolies in that island, but at present it would not be advisable to lay those reports on the table of the House.

THE EX-CHIEFS OF KIRWEE.—Lord G. HAMILTON said, in reply to Mr. GREGORY, that he had not yet received a complete return to the proceeds of all the movable property obtained by the Indian Government from the ex-Chiefs of Kirwee. When the remainder of the returns had been received, he would supply the hon. member with the information they contained.

THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.—In reply to Dr. PLAYFAIR, Lord G. HAMILTON said: The right hon. gentleman asks me whether the terms used in Lord Salisbury's despatch of the 24th of February, 1876, to the Governor-General of India in Council—viz., that selected candidates for the Indian Civil Service are to be paid an annual allowance of £150 if they pass two years of their probation "at some University (to be approved beforehand by the Secretary of State) at which moral responsibility for the conduct of the students is undertaken and rules of discipline are enforced"—will exclude the Colleges of the London University and the Colleges and Universities of Ireland and Scotland, as these do not enforce collegiate residence, though they undertake intramural moral responsibility for the conduct of students, and enforce rules of discipline. It was not the intention of the Secretary of State to exclude such colleges, provided they undertake moral responsibility for the conduct of students and enforce rules of discipline, nor do I think the words used convey any such wish. The Secretary of State desires to give these words a liberal interpretation. (Hear.) The new scheme cannot come into operation before July, 1878.

THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Mr. DISRAELI, having moved the third reading of the Royal Style and Titles Bill, Mr. PEASE took the opportunity of repeating some of the arguments made familiar during the debate on earlier stages of the Bill, several of which the hon. member had on former occasions himself enforced.—Mr. NEVILLE-GRENVILLE succeeded in introducing a novel point by suggesting that fresh quarterings should be added to the Royal Arms as marking the assumption of the new title.—Mr. ANDERSON, speaking with great warmth amid cheers and counter-cheers, said he should be sorry if this obnoxious, offensive, objectionable Bill should leave the House without a parting kick. Mr. Disraeli had said that the title of Empress was to be confined to India. But what Mr. Anderson feared as successfully militating against that pledge was the action of toadies, snobs, and sycophants; and what he specially dreaded was municipal sycophancy, of which the world had had a specimen on a recent occasion when the Lord Mayor of London, trespassing upon his guests at a festal meeting, endeavoured to thrust down their throats the title of Empress.—Mr. GLADSTONE reviewed the position of the Bill at the end of the series of debates, and took the opportunity of rebutting the charge that the Opposition had been inspired by party feeling. Of the measure itself he, as a last word, declared its introduction to be "an act thoroughly unwise." He did not prophesy evil as likely to result from it; but he would say that the passing of the Act would make room for evil.—Mr. DISRAELI, after some sarcastic reference to Mr. Gladstone's deprecation of party feeling on the Liberal side, gave the result of more mature consideration of some questions raised in the last debate. He was now able to say, without hesitation, that appeals would continue to be to the Queen in Council. With respect to the sign-manual, it was simply Victoria, though "it might be, or it might not be," that in England the Queen would sign "Victoria Regina," and in India "Victoria Regina et Imperatrix." Further research had also enabled the right hon. gentleman to add the authority of "Camden's Britannia" to that of Spenser in respect to the application of the title Empress to Queen Elizabeth, that volume bearing the legend "The True and Royal History of the Famous Empress Elizabeth." The right hon. gentleman also quoted in his correction a letter from a young lady of twelve years of age, who had pointed out to him that in her geography book (which the Prime Minister produced out of his despatch-box, and testified to being in its 89th edition) the Queen was spoken of as Empress of India. Nor was that all of the evidence which had accumulated in the hands of the head of her Majesty's Government since the second reading of the Bill. He produced a letter, which he observed would commend itself to hon. members opposite, as it was signed. "A Nonconformist Minister," in which it was pointed out that in "Whitaker's Almanack" the Queen was styled Empress of India, Changing his lightness of tone, which gathering cries from the Opposition had begun to rebuke, he in most solemn manner darkly referred to those "grave political reasons" which, as he had on an earlier occasion declared, underlay the Ministerial action. The fortresses of Russia were but a few days' march from the frontiers of the Queen. The ruling Sovereign of Russia was styled Empero r, and Mr. Disraeli added by way of peroration, and amid cheers from the Ministerialists, the assumption by the Queen of an identical title would signify, in a manner that could not be mistaken, that England meant to maintain her power in India.— Mr. COWEN commenced a remarkably powerful speech by the observation that "some of the right hon. gentleman's arguments had been singularly solemn, and some rather frivolous." After the hon. member had continued for some moments, an attempt was made by the Ministerialists to shout him down, but in a very angry manner, when later the attempt was repeated, the Opposition insisted upon his having a full hearing. Towards the latter half of his address there was no need of this protection, for Mr. Cowen was talking with simple eloquence and singular power to an absolutely silent House, crowded in every bench, and with the bar thronged by hon. members who had been brought in from the lobbies by the rumour that a great speech was being delivered. When he sat down, loud and repeated bursts of applause rang from the Liberal benches, and there was presented the spectacle, most unusual in the House of Commons, of members crowding round the last speaker to congratulate him on what is perhaps the most marked Parliamentary success acquired in recent sessions by a comparatively new member.—Mr. NEWDEGATE and Mr. FAWCETT (who protested against Mr. Disraeli's reference "in this casual and off-hand manner" to the possibility of a conflict with Russia) having continued the discussion, Mr. LOWE rose, and in his sharpest manner and most acrid style, after having presented the question piecemeal, as if he were pulling out the slides of a magic lantern, declared that Mr. Disraeli had reserved for the third reading the most mischievous of all the mischievous arguments to which he had treated the House since the Bill was brought in. He had cited in support of his case the lispings of the nursery, the blunders of an almanack, and the errors of a school-book—had urged these as reasons why the title of a ruler of two hundred and fifty millions should be changed. It were generally understood that no further divisions were to be taken on the Bill. But Mr. Lowe's speech, following upon Mr. Cowen's, had roused the Opposition to a high pitch of excitement, and when the question was put that the Bill be read a third time a loud shout of "No!" came from below the gangway on the left of the Speaker. The House forthwith divided, Mr. Anderson "telling" with Mr. Adam. On the figures being announced it appeared that 209 voted for the Bill and 134 for its rejection; a result which, as showing a falling off of thirty in the Ministerial majority, was loudly cheered from the Liberal side.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FRIDAY, March 24.—COUNCIL OF INDIA (PROFESSIONAL APPOINTMENTS) BILL.—This Bill was read a third time, and passed.

THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—This Bill was brought up from the Commons, and read a first time.—The Duke of RICHMOND and GORDON gave notice that the second reading would be moved on Thursday next.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, March 24.—INDIAN LEGISLATION BILL.—Sir G. CAMPBELL: To add to his motion for the postponement of the Indian Legislation Bill the words:—"In order to give her Majesty's Government an opportunity of consulting the Council of India on the subjects involved in that Bill."

THE MARTINI-HENRY RIFLE.—In reply to General SHUTE, Lord E. CECIL said there was no intention of issuing more Martini-Henry rifles than usual at the next Wimbledon meeting. The alleged defects in that arm had been recently tested by sixteen regiments and battalions in different parts of the United Kingdom, and certain alterations since proposed had been approved and adopted by the Secretary of State for War.

LORD NORTHBROOK will lay the foundation-stone of the new Asylum for the Blind and Incurables in Calcutta about the 15th of March Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE QUEEN'S TITLES.

The Times remarks that Mr. Disraeli's statement on Monday evening with reference to the Royal Titles Bill must be accepted with great satisfaction, though it still leaves the question of the future title of the Queen in a state of great confusion. It is evident that his statement altogether alters the grounds on which the Ministerial proposal has been discussed, and in the interest of the nation it is to be regretted that Mr. Disraeli did not make it last Thursday. It would appear, then, with regard to the titles "Empress" and "Imperial" that if we are all individually careful to prevent the introduction of these exotics into popular acceptance, we may keep them out effectually; but the task will be difficult, and, even if it is successfully accomplished, the result will not be quite satisfactory. The style and title of the Crown ought to be the same everywhere. It is rather a slur than a compliment to India to find a title ascribed to the Sovereign there the use of which is prohibited at home. But the use of the Imperial title cannot be prohibited; it cannot be absolutely localised; and, as it was admitted last night, the advice given by Ministers to her Majesty on the use or disuse of a title authorised by statute must be within the discretion of the Administration for the time being. All that Mr. Disraeli could say upon this point was, that as no Parliament can bind its successor, a Ministerial pledge was about as good as a clause in an Act of Parliament. As to this, however, it need only be observed that, even if a Ministerial pledge is as binding upon the Ministry that gave it as an Act of Parliament, it cannot bind the next Ministry. However, the Bill which passed through Committee yesterday simply authorises her Majesty to make an addition by proclamation to her Royal style and title, and the terms of that proclamation remain unsettled, and it is still to be hoped that at the subsequent stages in the Commons, or in the House of Lords, an alteration will be announced bringing the proclamation more completely into unison not only with the feelings of the nation, but what we now understand to be the intentions of her Majesty as advised by her Ministers.

The Post maintains that if the terms of the Bill and the declarations of the Government had been candidly interpreted the alarm which the Prime Minister yesterday endeavoured to allay could have had no place in the discussion of this measure. There can be no doubt that the opposition to the Bill, except so far as it has proceeded on party grounds, has been based upon the fear that it is an insidious attempt to overshadow and ultimately to absorb the title of Queen by the title of Empress. But those who have used this argument have not seemed to understand that the very strength of the hostility to any alteration in the style and title of our Sovereign which would substitute Emperor or Empress for the time-honoured King or Queen is a sufficient guarantee that no such substitution can possibly be made.

The Daily Telegraph says that in his statement on Monday Mr. Disraeli entirely mistook the point at issue. No one has supposed that Ministers would advise her Majesty, directly, to assume the title of Empress in England. What has been felt, and is felt, "out of doors," is that the interpolation or addition of a superior title, distasteful to the English people, will stimulate its adoption, and thereby create trouble and dissension in the realm. After all, the question remains exactly what it was at first.

THE HARBOUR WORKS.—The construction of the jetty in connection with the Madras Harbour has for a time been suspended, in accordance with the orders of Government. The work was stopped, the Standard says, as a revised estimate has been submitted to the authorities by Mr. May, under instructions from Mr. Parkes, and it is reported that the cost of the structure will be increased by at least half a million sterling.

THE KURG PLANTERS.—"There is, we learn," says the Madras Mail, "a strong feeling of dissatisfaction among planters in Kurg with reference to the heavy royalty fixed on timber on lands in Kurg taken up for coffee cultivation. One planter had a bill sent him lately for timber, which appears excessive; it amounts to Rs. 18,000, on about four hundred acres of land. The question of the timber royalty is a very important one. The great injustice of the Forest Department rates and rules for fixing the royalty would be sufficiently apparent from the following:—Government reserve the right to all timber 'growing and to grow;' so that all the good timber trees planters are now (innocently) planting on their estates for shade purposes will, at some future time, be claimed by Government! By a calculation of the average rates charged by the Forest Department for the trees in Kurg, and comparing it with the rates at which the timber sells in Bangalore, we find the former are in excess of the latter! Let any one make the same calculation, allowing for hollow, crooked, and useless trees, which are charged for all the same by the Forest officers, though their value in Bangalore would be about nothing, and he will find we are correct. How the officials of the Department can conscientiously make so excessive a charge, and why Government put it in their power to do so, is incomprehensible."

THE PIANO-MÉCANIQUE.

DEBAIN Inventor.

A Piano on which any person, although unacquainted with Music, can perform the most difficult and elaborate Compositions with faultless execution and delicacy.

The Piano-Mécanique is actuated by means of planchettes (small boards), into which is pinned the Composition to be performed; and these planchettes are caused to travel on a metal plate which is fitted on the top of the Instrument. This metal plate is pierced in a straight line across its breadth by a series of small openings, up through which project the steel ends of the keys of a miniature keyboard, chromatically arranged. The pins of the planchette, coming in contact with the miniature keyboard, act on the keys in a similar manner as would the fingers of the hand.

The metal pins of the planchette vary in height according to the marks of expression, accent, etc., indicated by the composer, the highest producing the full force of blow from the hammer, and the lowest the most delicate. It will thus be seen that every conceit of the author can be copied, and afterwards mechanically rendered in all its integrity; in fact, execution quite beyond the manual dexterity of the most accomplished performer is, by this system, ensured.

The Piano-Mécanique, when compared with kindred Instruments, presents at once its advantages; notably:—Compositions can be played in their entirety, there being no necessity for mutilation to meet the capacities of the Instrument, nor curtailment to suit the circumference of a barrel; greater facility for selecting the Music to be performed, and its requiring much less space; its faultless execution and complete means of expression; the facility with which any single Composition may be obtained for it, and at small cost; its freedom from derangement, either by excessive use or from the extremes of climate; the advantage of a Seven-Octave Manual for ordinary use.

In proof of the success of the Piano-Mécanique, it may be stated that upwards of 3,000 Compositions, ranging from the simple Ballad or Dance to the difficult Fantasia, Overture, or Grand Symphony, have been arranged for it, and to these, additions are almost daily being made.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a most simple form. Take some good compound, such as

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tasted by many thousands of persons, are found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, March 13; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, March 11; Calcutta, March 10.

THE Bombay papers are largely taken up with the Prince of Wales's parting visits to Allabahad, Bombay. The investiture of the new Knights and Companions of the Star of India was the event of the week at the former place. The Prince's subsequent journey through Jabalpur to Indor, where he was royally welcomed by Holkar, and his final departure from Bombay, are already matters of history. Whatever else may or may not have resulted from the Prince's Indian tour, his bodily gain appears to have been indisputable. According to the Times of India it was a subject of general remark among those assembled at the Dockyard to witness the Prince's embarkation that his Royal Highness appeared to be much improved in health since he landed at the same spot last November. "He was more robust and muscular, and his walk more firm and elastic. The ladies especially remarked that his Royal Highness's complexion was heightened, and just the least in the world bronzed by the Indian sun, to which he so freely exposed himself during his lengthened tour."

THE outbreak of small-pox which compelled the Prince of Wales to shorten his stay on shore at Bombay appears to have numbered among its victims Captain R. K. Wodehouse, a nephew of the Governor. His attack, however, was a very mild one, and by the latest accounts he was likely soon to resume his duties at Government House.

A "WELL-INFORMED CORRESPONDENT" writes to the Times of India from London:—"I am told upon authority that the Staff Corps is not to be abolished, and that the ninety yearly retirements will only go on for one or two years more, when a number of direct appointments of second lieutenants will be made to the native regiments from here." Whether the writer was well-informed or not, it is obvious that if any reform is needed in the Indian Army it ought to go a good way beyond this little bit of tinkering. With regard to the question of direct appointments, however, we admit that the correspondent is not very far from the mark.

THE following are the names of the Native Regiments of which the Prince of Wales has become Honorary Colonel:—11th Bengal Lancers, 2nd Bengal Native Light Infantry, 2nd Gorkhas, Corps of Guides, Madras Sappers and Miners, 4th Madras Light Cavalry, 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry, and 2nd Bombay Native Infantry. Of these regiments, the 2nd Bengal Infantry, Corps of Guides, and Madras Sappers and Miners, and the 3rd Bombay Cavalry are each to be styled the Queen's Own Regiments; the remainder receiving the designation of the Prince of Wales's Own.

POOR Mr. Carpenter never recovered from the effects of the fall mentioned by us in a former issue. After a week of suffering he died on the 5th March. The late Acting Commissioner of Nagpur entered the Civil Service in 1857. As District and Settlement Officer, and then as Secretary to the Board of Revenue, he had served a long apprenticeship in the North-West Provinces, when early in 1874 he was appointed Commissioner of Jabalpur. Last year he was sent to fill a vacant place in the Puna Rayats' Commission, and had hardly entered, after the close of that business, on his new duties at Nagpur, when he met with the accident which caused his death. He was to have come home on furlough in the Spring. The Pioneer describes Mr. Carpenter as "sound, cool, and cautious in deliberation," while carrying into action "the promptness and decision which are born of self-reliance and of a healthy, vigorous physique. His was emphatically mens sana in corpore sano; and he himself an officer of rare judgment and of most sterling merit."

THE Duke of Buckingham reached Madras on his return from Calcutta on March 8. It is rumoured in Madras that his Grace will not remain at Utakamand for more than three months from the 15th April, and that he will then proceed on a tour through the Southern Districts, which may last for a month. Lord Northbrook returned to Calcutta on March 10 from Allabahad, whither he had gone to meet the Prince of Wales. Lord Napier, who had also been to Allahabad, will leave Calcutta for Bombay early in this month to aid in receiving Lord Lytton and to make over his command to Sir F. Haines, before starting on the 10th for Europe.

WE learn that strict precautions have been taken at Bushir against the plague which has broken out in the Euphrates valley. A strict quarantine has been ordered in the case of all vessels arriving from Basrah, both at Bushir and Muscat; the same measure being suggested for the telegraph stations of Jask and Gwadar. The Government of Bombay have directed the Commissioner in Sind to make similar precautions at Karachi, and like instructions have been forwarded to the Consul ta Jeddah and the Political Agent at Zanzibar, through the Resident at Aden.

FROM the last Education Report for the Punjab, it appears that Mohammedans and people of the comfortable classes send their children to school more freely in that province than elsewhere. In the Lahor district school and its branches, Mohammedans preponderate. More than half of the pupils in the Hoshiarpur and Gurdaspur schools come from a distance, while nearly all the boys of the Lahor circle who passed the primary school examination left their villages to continue their studies "whether they obtained scholarships or not." More than ten per cent. of the pupils of the Lahor district schools are the sons of Sirdars and native gentlemen of substance. A fact still more interesting is the remarkable development of education in the frontier district of Hazara. "So late as 1872 there were only three ill-attended schools in the district, and the district authorities considered there was no desire for education, and that it would be long before anything like progress would be made. There are now twenty-five schools attended by 1,098 scholars, among whom are the sons of Ata Mohammed Khan, the late Chief of Agror, and some children from independent territory across the border." Clearly the schoolmaster is abroad among the Afridis, and some day perhaps we shall even hear of an Afridi going up for his degree.

THE Indian Government has put an early stop to the performance in Calcutta of the scandalous play of "Gajadananda and the Prince." Under the powers vested in him by the Indian Councils Act of 24 and 25 Vict., cap. 67, the Governor-General has issued an ordinance empowering the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to prohibit the performance of any drama which is scandalous, defamatory, seditious, obscene, or otherwise prejudicial to the public interests, and to take steps for the punishment of any person who infringes such prohibition. The ordinance is to remain in force till the 31st of May, by which time, no doubt, a measure embodying similar provisions will have been passed through the Legislative Council. It appears that the local authorities found they had no ordinary legal means of stopping the play, scandalous and insulting as it was.

A LONG-CONSIDERED measure for the reform of Police-courts in the Presidency towns has been lately brought up again before the Viceroy's Legislative Council. The Bill proposes to change the designation of the Police Magistrates of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, to "Presidency Magistrates," to give them jurisdiction to try summarily persons charged with all but the very gravest offences, and to enlarge their powers from the present limit of six months' imprisonment and 500 rupees fine to two years' imprisonment and 2,000 rupees fine. It is obvious that a measure which tends to deprive the people of the Presidency towns to a considerable extent of the privilege of trial by jury would be regarded with much disfavour by the public. The arguments of those who advocate the change is that it will be another step towards assimilating the laws of the Presidency towns to those in force throughout the country. But in their desire for symmetry they seem to forget that the circumstances of the two cases are wholly different. In the Provinces where it is often impossible to get competent jurors, it has been found advisable to strengthen the hands of the magistrates; but in Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, there has been for years in existence a tribunal consisting of a High Court Judge and jury, which has worked well and given general satisfaction. Objection is taken, too, to several of the provisions of the Bill other than those which so largely extend the powers of magistrates. For instance, it is proposed to give a convicted prisoner no right of appeal, unless his sentence exceeds one year's imprisonment, or a fine of 500 rupees. Another clause provides that the magistrates need not record the evidence; but that if the prisoner is convicted in an appealable case, the magistrate shall, after conviction, make a note of the substance of the evidence given. In the hands of competent men the proposed law might possibly work tolerably well, but where the magistrate is weak and inexperienced, it can hardly fail to cause many a sad miscarriage of justice.

THE experiment of employing Native guards on Indian railways in the place of Europeans discharged for "inefficiency" and other offences does not appear to be very successful. We learn from the Railway Service Gazette that these gentlemen "are slowly increasing in numbers, and so are the punishments which have to be inflicted upon them for neglect of duty. A few days back one of them detained the train he was in charge of thirty-two minutes at Bardwan; another left his train at the same station, and did not turn up again until some hour or two after it had been despatched in charge of an European guard. They have each been find two days' pay." This is certainly not very encouraging from the philanthropic point of view. What the railway companies may gain in cheapness, they must lose in efficiency, by employing native guards who thus neglect their simplest duties to the manifest inconvenience of those who travel under their charge. We fear that the experiment has been made too soon, before the native mind has learned to appreciate the virtues of punctuality and close attention to business.

It appears from the Friend of India that there is something uncomfortably wrong about the famine accounts. A great deal of money has been spent which no one has yet been able to account for, and the Bengal Office deficit is reckoned at a million sterling. The reason of this is a mystery which the Government of India naturally wants to have cleared up, and Sir Richard Temple's visits to the Treasury "have of late been neither few nor far between. The talented gentleman whose business it is to balance the famine expenditure has been working hard to make obstinate figures fall into place on the right side of the books, but his strenuous exertions seem to have met with very little success. Some one in the Bengal Office is said to have tried to surmount the difficulty by the ingenious device of reckoning the Imperial subsidy twice over, an expedient which had much to recommend it, but it was unkindly disallowed by the Government of India."

FROM the Prince of Wales's departure from Aden on Monday, March 20, until his arrival at Suez on Saturday last, the weather—says the Times Correspondent—was favourable for the voyage of the Serapis, accompanied by the Raleigh and Osborne. The sea was quiet and smooth, the thermometer standing at 80. The cement of the hull of the Serapis was covered by an accumulation of barnacles, which prevented a high rate of speed being attained. On anchoring in Suez Roads the Egyptian men-of-war saluted the squadron. Lord and Lady Lytton, Colonel and Mrs. Burne, Sharif Pasha, Mustafa Pasha, General Stanton, Mr. Gordon, Baron de Lesseps, Captain Willoughby West, and others, were received on board the Serapis by the Prince of Wales at breakfast. Lord Lytton had a long conversation with his Royal Highness, and accompanied the Prince to the station, where he took a cordial farewell. A special train conveyed the Prince to Cairo, where the Khedive and the Princes, the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia and suite, and many distinguished persons, awaited his arrival. At six P.M. the Prince drove to the Gezireh Palace with the Khedive and a grand guard of honour. The Khedive there took leave of the Prince, who entertained the Grand Duke Alexis at dinner, and went to the Opera in the evening. On the 26th the Prince visited the Khedive with some of the suite, privately, and had a long conversation with him. Sir Bartle Frere had interviews with the Khedive, and with General Stanton and Mr. Rivers Wilson. The Prince dined with the Grand Duke Alexis at the Viceroy's Palace the same evening.

ON Monday, March 27, the Prince received and returned various visits. In the evening the Prince and his party, the Grand Duke Alexis, the officers of the fleet, and the Consuls, were present at a grand banquet given by the Khedive at the palace of Abdin, after which a French play and a concert were given in the conservatory, arranged as a theatre. To this latter entertainment 250 of the élite of Cairo and Alexandria were invited. There was to be a grand banquet at midnight on Tuesday, when the Prince of Wales and his party visited Sacara.

ON March 28 the Prince of Wales went out from Cairo for an excursion. In the evening his Royal Highness visited the Opera.

THE Prince has postponed his departure from Alexandria until Monday. He was to arrive there to-day, embark at once, and give an official dinner on board the Serapis. On Sunday he will dine with the Grand Duke Alexis on board the Russian frigate Soetlane. On Monday he leaves for Malta. The Serapis, Osborne, and Raleigh arrived at Alexandria on Tuesday. The Osborne has left for Brindisi to rejoin the Prince of Wales at Malta.

THE Prince will arrive at Malta on Thursday, the 6th of April, and be escorted to the Palace by a grand procession. He is to be the guest of the Governor. There will be a review of the garrison and a Club ball on the 7th, and on the 8th a representation at the Opera. On the 9th his Royal Highness will dine with the 71st Regiment. He will afterwards leave for Gibraltar. Great preparations are being made for the reception.

WE learn that Sir William Muir's financial statement was published yesterday in the Gazette of India. The following particulars have been telegraphed home:—

The accounts for 1874-75 show a total revenue £50,570,177. The ordinary expenditure during the same period amounted to £50,251,047, including £2,237,860 for the Famine Relief Fund. The extraordinary expenditure for public works was £4,249,566. The regular estimates for 1875-76 place the revenue at £50,991,000, and the ordinary expenditure at £49,744,000, including £656,000, the balance of the sum expended for the relief of the famine. The extraordinary expenditure for public works is estimated at £4,143,000. The Budget for 1876-77 estimates the revenue at £50,480,000, and the ordinary expenditure at £50,336,000. The extraordinary expenditure for public works is fixed at £3,759,000, to meet which it is proposed during the financial year 1876-77 to raise £3,000,000 by loans, including £360,000 on account of the Scindia and Holkar Railways. The remaining £2,640,000 are to be raised in England by the Secretary of State. No loan is to be raised in India, and no fresh taxation is intended for the year 1876-77. The cash balances in India at the end of 1875-76 are estimated at £16,243,214, and at the end of 1876-77 at £13,552,614.

The Budget shows all branches of the revenue to be in a favourable condition. The receipts from Customs duties have increased since the new Tariff Act came into operation, but the fall in the rate of exchange causes an estimated loss of over £1,000,000 sterling. The Government has resolved to restrict the expenditure on public works as far as possible whilst exchange continues unfavourable.

The drawings of the Secretary of State on the Indian Treasury during the ensuing financial year will amount to £13,500,000, and the loss by exchange is estimated at £2,300,000.

THE World has a talent for writing strongly and wildly about things which it does not thoroughly understand. One of the worse shots it has ever yet made is the assertion that the Bill for pensioning legal members of the Indian Council is "simply an ingenious scheme to help Sir Henry Maine to a larger salary and a pension." It is answer enough to remark that Sir H. Maine is already a member of the Indian Council, therefore cannot draw a larger salary than his colleagues; that he is already entitled, if we mistake not, to a pension for his Indian service; and in short that the new Bill has not the slightest reference to his case. It is equally absurd to suppose that Sir H. Maine "betrayed Lord Salisbury into the recent dictatorial despatch to Lord Northbrook on the Tariff Bill," with which Sir Henry had little more to do than the World itself. To all appearance the Bill in question is intended to furnish the Secretary of State with a cheap and efficient substitute for standing counsel, in the shape of two or three legal members of his Council, who on retirement will draw a pension not too high perhaps for their actual deserts. If competent lawyers can be got to serve in Council on the terms now offered, no one will begrudge them a retiring pension of £500 a year. At the same time it is to be regretted that the same provision regarding pension has not been made for all the Councillors alike. The old Indian members from the Civil Service indeed may retire on the pensions to which they were entitled when they first came home. But it must be remembered that they have already earned their thousand a year from their Indian service, and that half of that sum is merely "reserved pay," deducted and set aside from what they drew in India. Thus, after about forty years' service altogether in the two countries, they get from the Government a pension no higher than that which a home-bred lawyer will be able to draw after fifteen or even ten years' service at the India-office. It might also be contended that a pension held in abeyance for fifteen years should be worth a great deal more than £1,000 a-year at the end of that term. Lord Salisbury himself appears to have in effect admitted the unfairness of making any distinction between the two classes of Councillors. If so, it is a pity that he did not pluck up courage to make equal provision for both, even with the fear of Mr. Fawcett before his eyes.

THE debate of Thursday night in the House of Lords on the Royal Titles Bill ought, we think, to satisfy the Ministry that "Empress of India" is not the title which is likeliest to satisfy the people of England. The weight of opinion was so clearly against the proposed addition to the Queen's titles, that we hope the Government may yet draw back betimes from a false position. If Empress implies something higher than Queen, the new title will overshadow and supplant the old. If the Queen of England ranks as high as any Emperor, why should she not be styled Queen of India also? If a more distinctive title is needed, why not call her Paramount Sovereign, or some such term which would never clash with Queen? In a recent letter to the Pall Mall Gazette Sir C. Trevelyan declares that Our Anglo-Saxon "King" and "Queen," which have always been dear to the hearts of the English in their island home and its colonies, have also been fully accepted by the people of India. When the Jews were asked whose image and superscription their coins bore, an appeal was made to the crucial test of sovereignty according to Eastern ideas. Our Indian coinage bore the stamp of the Moghul until 1835, when "William IV. King" was substituted, to be succeeded soon after by "Victoria Queen." Sir Charles Metcalfe and his colleagues, when they announced this change to the Court of Directors, said:—"We conceive that, by giving to the coin an impression of the likeness of the reigning Sovereign of the British Empire, we may aid its circulation as a general colonial currency in the East, asserting by the same act British supremacy in India itself." And, in fact, in this and many other ways, the titles "King" and "Queen" have become associated in the minds of the people of India with the idea of British supremacy. An Act is now under the consideration of the Government of India enabling the native States to have their coins minted by us of uniform weight and fineness with our own, one side to bear the Queen's image and superscription and the other the name and titles of the local native chief, and Holkar and Alwar have already accepted the arrangement.

Would it not after all be the wisest plan to drop the Bill altogether, on the principle of letting well alone?

"FROM the Hebrides to the Himalayas" is the title of two interesting and thoughfully written volumes of travel varied with illustrative learning from the pen of Miss Constance Gordon Cumming. The first volume, full of interest in its way, deals entirely with the Western Isles of the author's native land. Our special concern is with the second, in which we may follow her to Agra, Delhi, Meerut, Ambala, and the Himalayas, with a parting view of Benares on her homeward journey. Of the ground thus travelled over much has been described so often by earlier writers, that the recorded experiences of a new visitor would seem almost superfluous, but for the ease with which old impressions are liable to fade away from all but the most retentive minds. We dare say that many readers will derive something of fresh interest from the author's descriptions even of things so generally known as the Taj at Agra, the Kutab near Delhi, and the bathing Ghats of Benares, while others who have seen those places for themselves may yet like to compare their own impressions with those of so intelligent and well-read an observer as Miss Cumming. Readers of both classes will have no reason to complain of the food thus set before them; nor have we much fault to find with her sketches of life in India past and present, which show that she has not only used her eyes in travelling, but has also read up the various subjects of which she treats by the way. Here and there some slips may easily be detected, as when for example she talks of Akbar as fourth in descent from Mahomet. She is also perhaps a little too prone to trace native religious customs to Jewish sources. The most generally interesting part of the book are the chapters devoted to her journey across the Himalayas, from Simla to Chini, Pangi, and Rarung, on the borders of Chinese Tartary. Her descriptions of Mussoorie (or Masúri), Dera Dhun, and Hardwar are full of picturesque touches; and the general effect of her written experiences is not a little enhanced by the proofs of artistic skill displayed in many of the wood-engravings, especially in the frequent views of hill scenery. The view of the Taj from the river is also noteworthy, as presenting that marvel of Eastern architecture under an aspect comparatively new to home-bred eyes.

THE deaths of two general officers of the old Indian Army have lately been announced. General W. Scott, late Chief Engineer in the Bombay Presidency, died the other day at Halbendorff, near Dresden, in his seventieth year. He entered the service in 1824, served in the Punjab Campaign of 1848-49, and was present at the siege and surrender of Multan. News has also arrived of the death at sea, off Madras, of Major-General David Reid, of the late Bengal Artillery. He entered the army in 1830, and was employed on several occasions from 1841 to 1851 against the Naga and Singpho hill tribes of the Eastern frontier. The latter tribe he finally drove out of the country, and the Nagas he also punished severely, taking several of their stockaded villages, and making the whole country-side submit to British rule. In February, 1859, he was sent against the Abors of Assam, and captured a stockade and several breastworks. Few Indian officers have had so much hill fighting as the deceased officer. He was promoted to the rank of Colonel in 1864, and became Major-General in 1868.

THE Russian Golos draws a tempting picture of the Russian Bear lying down in lasting friendship beside the British Lion. In a recent article it declares that Russia and England are no rivals in Central Asia. They have in fact common interests. No reasonable man in Calcutta thinks of the possibility of a Russian attack on the East Indies. It is to the interest of both States to cool fanaticism, and not to inflame it; to disarm the Central Asiatics, and not to place arms in their hands. If Asiatic barbarism triumphed over European civilisation, the English would be expelled from India as Russia would be from Central Asia. The Golos therefore recommends, as it has done before, friendship between England and Russia, especially at the moment when the East Indies have received a new Viceroy. On the day when a friendly embassy from General Kaufmann to Lord Lytton or vice versâ shall pass through the steppes between Tashkand and Peshawar, Asiatic Mohammedanism will understand that it has not to do with two nations hostile to one another, but with one European Power composed only of two amicably related members, Russia and England.

WRECK OF THE S.S. "JAVAD."—The Javad was a small steamer of 365 tons, carrying a crew of forty-six, all told, and was commanded by a well known and highly-respected master in the country service, Captain J. Keen. Besides a chief officer, she had a chief and second engineer, also Europeans; a Goanese gunner, suckani, topaz and another native of Goa, a Calcutta native Christian (who was the third engineer), and a Chilian. The latter all signed articles at the Bombay Shipping Office. She left Bombay on the 18th of December last for Jeddah, with pilgrims, sailing under Turkish colours, and after a very successful voyage reached the latter port about the 2nd or 3rd of January. She remained at Jeddah for over a fortnight, and took on board while there 400 Hajees or pilgrims, a hundred of whom were bound for Shere and three hundred for Bussora. The ill-fated vessel left Jeddah on the 16th, and on the same night struck on the dangerous reefs known as the Comptan, becoming a total wreck. Of the passengers and crew, thirteen only were saved, three of whom belonged to the steam-ship. Peter Augustino, the gunner, Ignacio Gonsalves, suckani, and Pedro A. Vaz, the topaz, with ten passengers were all that escaped, while three hundred and ninety pilgrims, Captain J. Kneen, F. Garbet, the chief officer, M. Sweeney, chief engineer, E. Walters, second engineer, and John Maris, the Chilian, and thirty-eight of the crew lost their lives in this disastrous wreck. The survivors were taken to Hodeida, whence those who were British subjects were sent on to the nearest British port, Bombay. The gunner, suckani, and topaz, arrived here only yesterday, and the former has made a declaration before the Shipping Master with respect to the loss of the vessel. These three men are destitute, but being in their own county, the Shipping Master cannot, under the provisions of the Act, do much towards their aid. Captain Kneen was a very old master in the country trade, well-known here, and this will be deplorably sad news indeed to his family and friends in Bombay.—Times of India, March 13.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, April 1, 1876.

LORD NORTHBROOK'S ANSWER TO MR. LOWE.

IN the Gazette of India for February 26 the Viceroy makes a powerful defence of the Indian Government against the charges brought forward last year in Parliament by Mr. Lowe, with regard to the grievances of Indian Civilians. Lord Northbrook is "fully aware that a serious block has arisen in the promotion of the junior Civil Servants in the North-Western Provinces. The remedy which should be applied to meet the case has been considered by a committee composed of the highest officers of the Government, before whom those who are interested have had an opportunity of stating their case; and the Government of India have made certain recommendations on the subject to the Secretary of State." It is generally agreed that the block is owing to an excessive supply of civilians to the North-West in certain years before 1863. Mr. Lowe however, having endeavoured to trace its origin to the improper distribution of patronage in India since 1861, the Indian Government "feel called upon to take notice of these grave charges against themselves and their predecessors which the publication of Mr. Lowe's speech has introduced into the discussion."

After quoting certain passages from Mr. Lowe's speech in the House of Commons, Lord Northbrook begins by clearing himself and his predecessors from the imputations therein contained. With regard to the pressure said to have been put upon successive Viceroys by the Home Government in the matter of civil appointments, his Lordship

Is certain, from his personal knowledge of the conduct of three Secretaries of State for India—Lord Halifax, the Duke of Argyll, and Lord Salisbury—whose term of office together extends over a period of fourteen years out of the seventeen years that have expired since the Government of India was transferred from the East India Company to the Crown, that no such pressure has been exercised by them upon the distribution of patronage in India. In his own case his Excellency desires to say that no appointments whatever have been pressed upon him by the Duke of Argyll or Lord Salisbury, who have filled the office of Secretary of State during the four years that he has been in India; and he has every reason to believe that other Secretaries of State have similarly abstained from exerting any such pressure.

If anyone therefore has erred it must be the Indian authorities alone; and so Lord Northbrook proceeds to show by a list of examples how little they also can be held to blame. By the Act of 1861 certain appointments theretofore reserved for the Civil Service were thrown open to outsiders. Under that Act Colonel Durand became Foreign Secretary to the Indian Government in 1861; Mr. Wylie in 1862 was made Deputy Secretary to Government in the Legislative Branch of the Home Office; Captain St. George Assistant-Secretary in the same branch; and Mr. A. G. Macpherson, a Barrister, became Secretary to the Bengal Government in the Legislative Department. Colonel Durand's qualifications are "well known." As Clerk of the Legislative Council Mr. Wylie had already been discharging duties similar to those which he continued after 1861 to discharge "under a different title." His legal training and experience fully justified his selection. Captain St. George, as a good Orientalist, was equal to the duty of explaining to the Native Members of Council any papers in English which they might not understand; while Mr. Macpherson's skill as a draughtsman made him specially useful to the Government of Bengal.

For a like reason Mr. Whitley Stokes was in 1870 made Legislative Secretary to the Indian Government. Captain Henderson's appointment in 1872 as Under-Secretary in the Indian Foreign Office was "entirely due to his ability, especially in Oriental languages." Mr. Gay, a clerk in the English Treasury, was chosen to officiate as Accountant-General in Bengal, owing to "his knowledge of accounts." Two members of the uncovenanted service did duty as judges in 1862, because no covenanted civil servant was available. As for the eleven uncovenanted officers who from time to time acted as Accountants-General since 1861, it would have been "improper" to give the post to an untrained civilian, and the appointments were held only for short periods, from one to eight months. It is evident therefore that the Act of 1861 has not been abused.

When only six permanent appointments have been made under that Act in fifteen years, the interests of the Civil Service can hardly have been seriously prejudiced. The imputation that advantage has been taken of the Act to make improper appointments falls to the ground by the mere statement of the names and qualifications of the officers who have been appointed under its provisions.

In the same manner Lord Northbrook deals with Mr. Lowe's allegations of breach of faith in the matter of appointments to the Punjab and Oudh Commissions. He shows that Lord Dalhousie's Resolution of 1856 was meant in the first place "to secure for the officers serving in the Punjab and Oudh a proper share of the more lucrative appointments of the North-Western Provinces, and it was laid down that the claims of those officers should always be taken into consideration when vacancies occurred in such appointments." In his further arrangements for securing an equal number of civil and military men in the Non-Regulation Provinces, Lord Dalhousie expressly disavowed all thought of hindering the advancement of the latter; and even Lord Lawrence, when in 1864 he assigned two-thirds of the appointments in those provinces to civilians, declared himself far from desiring "that any military officer now in civil employ in the Punjab, who is entitled to promotion, should in any case be superseded by a Covenanted Civil Servant, who is junior in the commission, and who has not otherwise stronger claim for promotion, merely for the object of restoring the prescribed proportion of civil and military officers in the upper grades."

According to Mr. Lowe, it was only after 1861 that the system described by him as "one great job from beginning to end" began. And yet, as the Viceroy goes on to show, the present state of things official in those provinces owes its origin almost wholly to causes existing before 1861:—

Owing to the loss of life in the Mutiny and other causes, there was not up to the year 1862 a sufficient number of Civil Servants available to fill the vacancies caused by the promotion of Civil Servants from the Punjab and Oudh into the North-Western Provinces, or to supply enough Civil Servants to secure the proper proportion in filling first appointments to the Punjab and Oudh Commissions. This is proved by the correspondence of the time, and it appears from the papers which were presented to Parliament previous to Mr. Lowe's motion, in which it will be found that the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces in May, 1862, declined to spare civilians from those Provinces. The Government of India requested the Home Government then and before to reinforce the ranks of the Civil Service; but in the meantime it was impossible to arrive at the proportion contemplated in the Resolution of 1856 between Civil Servants and Military and Uncovenanted Officers. The failure did not arise from favouritism, or from neglect of the interests of the Civil Servants, but simply because their numbers were not sufficient to fill the vacancies. It was not until an increased supply of civilians had arrived in India in 1861 and afterwards, and they had qualified themselves for service, that there were enough civilians to admit of their extensive employment in the Non-Regulation Provinces.

By the time these became available, military officers had already taken the places of many civilians whom the higher rates of pay elsewhere tempted away from the Punjab. To supersede any of these by young civil servants would have been an act of clear injustice, and yet in no other way could the due proportion of civil incumbents have been restored. It appears therefore from a careful search into names and dates that all the present Commissioners in the Punjab, of whom six are military, were first posted to that province before 1856, while most of the deputy-commissioners were appointed before 1861, "up to which date Mr. Lowe has no complaint to make." In concluding a defence which certainly seems very hard to answer, the Government of India desire to repeat that in dealing with the statements attributed to Mr. Lowe in the publication which has been circulated in India they have abstained altogether from discussing the present position of the civil servants of the North-Western Provinces and elsewhere. They have confined themselves to examining whether there is any foundation for the charges of breach of faith, corruption and favouritism, brought by Mr. Lowe against the authorities in India; and they believe that the facts described in this resolution will suffice to show that these grave charges are entirely destitute of foundation. It is a matter of great regret to the Governor General in Council that a statesman of Mr. Lowe's distinction and abilities should have been misled into making statements calculated to bring into undeserved discredit the character of her Majesty's servants who have formerly been and now are employed in the administration of her Majesty's Indian Territories.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE QUEEN'S TITLES.

The Bombay Gazette admits that the idea of conferring upon her Majesty a special title derived from the English conquest of India won a good deal of applause at the outset from the unreflecting, who see no danger in familiarising the English Parliament and people with the opinion that their Constitutional Monarchy has changed, so far at least as regards the Queen's Eastern dominions, into a despotism; but the sober judgment of the country would ere long have condemned a measure obnoxious to the best traditions of the English Commonwealth, and especially hateful, one would think, to that Conservative or "country party," as Mr. Disraeli loves to call it, which is composed of the class of independent gentlemen who in all ages of English history have known how to combine loyalty to the Crown with the remarkably distinct assertion of their own rights and privileges as Englishmen. . . . Nor is there any reason why the people of the United Kingdom should desire their Queen to change her title. The mushroom Empires of the Continent are, one and all, of but yesterday, in comparison with a Monarchy which has stood for a thousand years; and Queen Victoria, who can trace her descent from Egbert, through Norman, Plantagenet, Tudor, and Stuart kings, can boast of a lineage far more splendid than that of any Emperor. Moreover, the name of Emperor has become associated with arbitrary forms of government which do not suit the free spirit of Englishmen, and the English nation is hardly so tired of self-government yet, or so dissatisfied with its results, as to wish for an absolute ruler. And, if Englishmen are unwilling to abandon their own rights as free men, they have also up to this time been careful to proclaim, in theory at least, that their rule in India is not a despotism. We always speak of the natives of India as our fellow-subjects; and the Queen and her representatives have assured them over and over again that they have all the rights of inhabitants of the United Kingdom. Of course, this sort of talk is all a delusion. Natives of India are not on an equality with the Queen's subjects in England; the Government of this country is a simple despotism; and a good deal may be said for the honesty of statesmen who are willing to admit the fact. But it is well to let sleeping dogs lie, and no necessity has recently arisen for publicly reminding the natives of India of their disagreeable political condition. The style used by Sir John Lawrence in his letters to Shere Ali, in which he spoke of himself as representing "the Queen of England and of India," has not ceased to command respect. The Prince of Wales could not have had greater reverence paid to him if he had been styled son of the Empress of India; and, in the case in which some obscure and malignant journalists supposed that there existed an intention to put a slight on his Royal Highness, Sir Salar Jung and the Government of India have vied with one another in the earnestness of their assurances that the Nizam's Government cordially recognises the Queen as the Paramount Sovereign of India. It appeared, then, to us from the first injudicious to give all India a new political problem to think and talk over, and at last to solve by coming to the conclusion that the English Government intended definitely to fix the status of natives of India as inferior in rank to that of natural born subjects of the Queen of England.

The Times of India thinks it would be absurd to suppose that the mere assumption of a title would alter the relative position of our gracious Sovereign with respect to the Imperial family of Russia. No one imagined that the Emperor Napoleon III. occupied any position of superiority towards the Sovereign of England because the one was called an Emperor and the other a Queen. A King of France would have held precisely the same position as that of his Imperial Majesty, so far as questions of precedence were concerned. There exists therefore not the slightest ground for supposing that her Majesty the Queen is now about to assume the title of Empress with any view of "levelling up" to the Imperial family of Russia. The Sovereign of the British Empire is not inferior in dignity or status to any monarch on the face of the globe. The absurdity of the notion that the Imperial title is to be conferred on the Queen to settle a question of precedence—which as a matter of fact was settled long since—may be seen at once when we recollect that the title of Empress will not be the one by which her Majesty will be known at European Courts. The constitutional instinct of England would revolt at any proposal to style the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland Empress of the British Isles. It is certain that her Majesty will continue to be known everywhere out of India by her regal and historical title only. The Dukes of Savoy were not known to the European diplomatic world as "Kings of Cyprus and Jerusalem," and they would not have been known by those imposing titles if their sovereignty over the kingdoms in question had been more than titular. And similarly, the Queen of Great Britain will be known by her European title and not by the more sounding designation associated with her Asiatic possessions. If we want to know the real object of the Titles Bill, we can ascertain it from the Queen's Speech in opening Parliament, and from the speeches of members of both Houses in the debate upon the Address. The intention of Government in proposing that her Majesty should become in name, as well as in fact, Empress of India, was to draw closer the ties between the Sovereign and the princes and people of this country, as a graceful acknowledgment of the cordiality and loyalty with which his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has been received during the tour now drawing to a close. The Queen, in the Speech from the Throne, was very explicit in connecting the assumption of the new title with the great event of the time. Lord Granville, leader of the Opposition in the House of Lords, far from throwing doubt upon the sincerity or propriety of that declaration, gave it all the emphasis which the approval of an honourable opponent of the Government implies. To say, as has been said, that in taking the title of Empress of India her Majesty reminds the natives of this country that they live under a despotism is supremely ridiculous, and we will not stop to refer to that intelligent view of the situation. But the assertion that the Queen thought it necessary to assume an Asiatic title in order to be able to put the Duchess of Edinburgh "in her place" below the English princesses, though not less ridiculous, is more derogatory to the Sovereign. And as some foolish people, who know nothing whatever of matters so entirely beyond their purview might be misled by such a statement when set forth in type, we deem it necessary to give it an unequivocal contradiction.

BENGAL PROVINCIAL FINANCE.

The Pioneer was led from Sir Richard Temple's Administration Report to expect that, as between the Supreme and Local Governments, the items debitable to Imperial and Provincial Budgets had at last been settled; but its latest information is to the effect that a further deficit of a million sterling exists in the Bengal accounts. We are also told that the Bengal Secretariat sought at first to adjust this deficit by counting its imperial subsidy twice over, an expedient as simple as it is undoubtedly novel. That undue familiarity with worthless figures, which seems the necessary result of the pursuit of Bengal statisties, has at times disastrous effects when brought in contact with symbols that represent hard facts. All this must be peculiarly galling to a Lieutenant-Governor who has been himself a Minister of Finance, but it is the inevitable outcome of the present system of Provincial Services. With these there ought either to have been created a Provincial Finance Department, or the supervision of the Supreme Government should have been made much more real than it is. We believe that all the administrative advantages of the Decentralisation Scheme could have been secured without a relaxation of financial control involving fiascos like the present. We have no doubt that Sir Richard Temple will, now that the deep embarrassments of his exchequer have come so plainly into view, take prompt and vigorous steps for restoring solvency. But we can never have any permanent guarantee against extravagance until the Viceroy in Council assumes that attitude of active control which the ultimate responsibility of Imperial Funds makes it necessary that he should maintain. There are, we fear, bad days in store for Indian Governments, the prospect of which makes us all the more regret the present Viceroy's premature retirement. The claims of trade have been too strong for us at home. The campaign in Behar has left us crippled here. The fall in silver is on us in an hour of weakness. At such a time, with such a doubtful future before us, we are bound to demand from all Governments a policy of severe retrenchment, and from the Viceroy a system of sustained control. The absolute want of continuity in the policy of successive local Governors is of itself one grand reason for the maintenance of an efficient central check. The theory is, we know, that no change of principle can be introduced without due sanction. But in practice the power of the purse enables every local satrap to give effect to his peculiar views. One man cultivates the zemindar, and the policy of settlements begins to take a turn towards 1793. The next protects the ryot, and the landed chieftains of the province are converted into malcontents. One man would have education filter from above, and opens up sham colleges in every largish town. The next removes them all, and establishes hedge schools in every rustic hamlet. One Governor holds up the administration of civil justice to contempt; his next successor lauds the munsiff as the greatest marvel of the age. The people are harassed by perpetual change; the public money wasted by constant diversion to new channels. Let us have at least some guarantee for continuity in policy. Let our statecraft, such as it is, be at least pointed toward some certain end.

UNDER-OFFICERING OF THE NATIVE ARMY.

The Times of India remarks that the state of the native army of to-day has passed into a by-word for all that is incongruous and abnormal. It is eminently an army without leaders, and the half dozen European officers with a native regiment could no more control that regiment in action than they could direct the wind. Any one who has watched a field-day in Poona, or in any large station in India, will at once see what we mean. A native regiment is skirmishing, firing with blank ammunition; suddenly it is ordered to retire or to take the enemy in flank. The few mounted officers on parade gallop about, exposing themselves in the most ridiculous way, and attempting to explain amidst the noise and confusion of the firing what is required. They shout to the native officers, who calmly wonder what on earth the sahib is putting himself into such a passion about. They endeavour to personally carry out the movement, and in a real battle not one of them would be left alive or unwounded after five minutes of such work. In that case the regiment would get thoroughly demoralised, retreat would become flight, flight a panic, and the day might be lost for want of a few European officers. It is a plain fact, and one that should be evident to all, that having done so much for the native army, we are bound to do more. Having armed the sepoys, we are bound to officer them. The danger of half measures has passed into a proverb, and never was it more apparent than in the present instance. We have said again and again, but never with such reason as we do to-day, that the European company officer must be restored. He must go on foot as of old with his company, must lead them on parade and command them in quarters. Besides these eight captains, there must be four subalterns, one of them to be staff officer, by which we mean adjutant and quarter-master in one, the other three to take the places of three captains, who would generally be away on leave or sick. A commandant and a major would complete the establishment as regards the European officers. Surely fourteen European officers to a native regiment is not an extravagant estimate. True it is double the present allowance, but then the present allowance is confessedly and ludicrously inadequate. The very strongest possible argument for reorganising the native army is the fact that we have armed and drilled it so perfectly. Nor need the cry of expense be raised. It would not be nearly so expensive as the Staff Corps, which is not only costly but useless. But to refuse to make an army efficient in every respect because of the outlay is the wisdom of a captain who refuses to have his ship repaired because of the expense. If she goes down when a storm bursts, he has only himself to thank. The question of the native army is really a very serious one, and it must be faced. Statesmen in Europe are anxiously looking forward to what the spring may bring forth, and if war breaks out, it will in all probability be a war nearly affecting our supremacy in the East. Whether we are engaged in the struggle or no, it must be an anxious time for us, and it is not a time to set our house in order when the enemy is thundering at our gates. It is surely far better to look difficult questions in the face when we have time to solve them conveniently and easily, and not to wait in the hope that things will always go on quietly. The spirit of the native army is at the present time excellent, the sepoys are better armed and drilled than they have ever been before in all their history, and now is emphatically the time to give them European officers to lead and direct them, and to abolish the painful farce of having for each regiment half-a-dozen gentlemen riding more or less indifferently, unable to control their men, and serving only as conspicuous objects for an enemy to aim at.

THE COTTON DUTIES.

The Pioneer remarks that if we cannot coerce Australia we can at all events teach India better manners than to be rude towards the commerce of the country she owes so much to. Further than this, the English Government has, we believe, to a larger extent than outsiders are generally aware, been fettered in its commercial diplomacy with other governments in Europe by the character of the Indian tariff. With what has perhaps been often superfluous activity, the English Government has made itself on more than one occasion of late years the centre of a free-trade propaganda, and it has been wounded continually in its tenderest feelings by reproaches relating to the hard-and-fast nature of the Indian tariff. It has never been in a position to offer fiscal concessions that would touch trade with this country in return for any little steps in the direction of free trade which it might be trying to urge on other continental Powers. This has aggravated British statesmen a good deal, and they have felt much wronged by the obstinacy of Indian financiers. On the face of the situation, it is entirely unnecessary to assume factious Parliamentary influence at work in this matter. Manchester may clamour for what it conceives its rights, but such clamour would have had no chance of a favourable hearing if it had not been preceded by the currents of feeling we have described. However, there is nothing in this explanation of the way in which Lord Salisbury's mind may have been worked upon which can weigh a grain in the balance in favour of the policy he is desirous of forcing on the country. It may account for his wish to enforce the mischievous project in hand, and that is all. The country cannot afford to do without the revenue derived from the cotton duties; and if it could, they among all the taxes that are paid in India should perhaps be the very last to go. We do not cling to them on account of their quasi-protectionist character; the truth is that prudently guarded as they were under the late Tariff Bill, they retained very little of a protectionist character. Of course, the outcry that will shortly rise from the organs of native opinion will be a good deal motivé by the idea that the existing duties are protective, and the wickedness of Lord Salisbury's policy will be represented as turning on reckless desire on his part to crush native industry. Of course, all that will be great nonsense; native industry will not be crushed by the abolition of the import duties, if they are abolished, but, on the contrary, the Lancashire mill-owners will probably find that their gain from the change will not turn out by any means so great as they imagine. The real foolishness of the scheme depends entirely upon the wanton sacrifice of revenue it occasions in a country where public money is urgently wanted, and new forms of taxation exceedingly difficult to create. It would be premature as yet to speculate upon the measures which it may be necessary to adopt, if the cotton duties really are destroyed, with the view of filling up the consequent gap in the budget; but it is safe to declare that no alternative tax can possibly be invented that will not be much more oppressive to the people than the abandoned duty, and that probably no new tax can be invented that will not entangle us in much popular discontent and political irritation.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE CIVIL FUNDS.—The position taken up by the Government of India is briefly as follows:—These Civil Funds are valuable institutions, deserving of all reasonable support; and although they have, through misapprehension on our part and on the part of the services, received greater support than was intended, we do not grudge the result, or think the benefits now given from the funds, on the whole, too high, or the subsidies from the revenue too great. But we do not consider that the Government is under any legal obligation to continue these subsidies "to an indefinite extent, either as to time or amount," or that it would be right to allow extravagant claims on the revenues to pass unchallenged. We must, therefore, take steps to adjust matters upon some basis fair and liberal to the services, but that shall secure the revenues against unauthorised encroachments. What the Government of India has proposed in respect to the Bengal Fund is to allow it to continue its drafts upon the revenue on the system now challenged until such capital is accumulated as will make the assets of the fund equal to the liabilities, without any reduction of benefits or additions to subscriptions. In order to make the arrangements with all three funds uniform in this respect, the Government has proposed to postpone this date until the accumulation shall suffice for the purpose with only four per cent. upon the additional assets. But the same result would be produced by cutting short the unrestricted career of the fund at an earlier date without reducing the five per cent. to four. Equilibrium being the result aimed at, it matters nothing whether the adjustment takes place from an earlier date, the service retaining five per cent. upon its additional assets, or from a later date giving up this privilege. But the Government does not in any case hold itself bound to continue the five per cent. any more than the eight per cent. "to an indefinite extent, either as to time or amount." We understand also that, high as the subscriptions of the Bengal Civil Service are, compared with those of the sister services, they are not more than enough to secure benefits on the existing scale, though perhaps they would be more than enough if the service can make good its claim to the remittance to England of funds for the whole benefits from the fund at 2s. 1d. the rupee. We believe that it is calculated that even if this right be restricted—as the Government claim to restrict it—to the original benefits from the fund, the subsidy of the Government to the Bengal Fund will still amount to nearly Rs. 1,500 a year for each officer. We hardly think that the service has any good ground to complain of this treatment or to "ask for more."—Pioneer.

TIGER HUNTING IN NEPAL.

Feb. 25.—The Maharajah had been informed by his intelligence department that a tigress and full-grown cub inhabited a certain jungle, and thither we proceeded with the ban and arrière ban of Jung's elephantry. It was a large and most difficult jungle to drive, thickly interspersed with trees, while the tall grass concealed narrow but deep and very muddy little nullahs. Besides these little abominations there was one great one—I mean, a broad deep nullah with extremely steep banks, which, with extraordinary versatility, was always getting in one's way. Our elephants had no sooner toiled, and staggered down through, and up it, than down, through, and up it they had to stagger again. Notwithstanding these difficulties of ground, the way in which the innumerable pad-elephants wheeled, like Achilles's myrmidons, after every double of the tiger was astonishing, tenait du prodige, as the French say. Gradually, however, the ring of elephants, as inexorable as fate, drew narrower and narrower. At last it drew into a perfect ring (only two or three elephants deep instead of one) enclosing a space not much larger than a drawing room. Within this the tiger indisputably was; but where? The elephants had beyond question driven him foot by foot before them; he had not broken the line; they had now made a circle, not thirty feet in diameter inside; but yet no tiger was to be seen or heard. Not a blade of the tall grass waved. A hundred keen and anxious eyes scanned the scanty space. The Maharajah threw his hat at a clump of grass behind which he felt certain (and he judged rightly) the tiger lurked, but the tiger did not betray himself. Then, by the Maharajah's order some of the elephants were made to break down a tall tree, about five inches in diameter, which fell with all its branches just over the spot which must contain the striped game. Still the striped game would not show its stripes. Numbers of impatient men tried to force their mahouts to make the elephants press into the ridiculously small ring, but in vain; the elephants would not go. At last, when we were thinking about hand-grenades, fireworks, what not, out burst of his own accord the tiger. But what a small one! To think that three hundred elephants should be kept at bay by this absurd little creature. Yet kept at bay, and indeed put to flight, they were. It was a general trumpeting, and backing, and twisting of the clumsy colossi, any one of which had only to put his foot on the little tiger to blot him out. Instead, however, of making his charge good, and breaking the line as he might have done, the tiger, or tigret (for that would be a proper designation for him) hesitated like so many prettier creatures still, and was lost. He turned to get back into his cover, and in that moment of hesitation and retreat, short as it was, received a ball from the Prince's rifle which, though it did not kill him, though it did not even paralyse him, nevertheless hung a clog about his activity, and made ultimate escape impossible. Yet the gallant little beast made subsequently no fewer than three venomous charges, and at each charge sent the elephants flying. But in one of these he received another ball from the Prince well behind the shoulder, which must in any case have proved finally fatal. For the moment, however, it only made the game little wretch desperate. This time he charged home, the elephants gave way, and he was through the famous Nepaulese line—through, but not safe; he was sorely wounded, and there was the deep and broad nullah in front. He plunged in; but as he emerged to ascend the opposite bank a third bullet from the Prince struck him in the spine, and he fell back dead into the stream. He proved to be very small, about what is called a twelve-anna cub, three-quarters grown; but so long as valour and not bulk has fame, that little tigret deserves the respect of his conquerors.—Pioneer Correspondent.

STATION TALK.

LAHORE, Feb. 28.—The annual meeting of the Senate of the Punjab University College was held on the 26th, Saturday, in the new Montgomery Hall, and there was a good muster of both native and English members, Mr. Egerton, C.S.I., Financial Commissioner, being in the chair. Among the visitors was Mr. E. B. Eastwick, the Oriental traveller and author, who is spending a few days in Lahor as the guest of Mr. Boulnois. The Registrar read a report of the financial position of the University, its progress during the past year, and present position, which seemed sufficiently satisfactory; the state of the Oriental College, which has been without a European Superintendent for some months, being nevertheless a matter for congratulation. The total income is roughly Rs. 67,000, and the expenditure Rs. 51,000. Mr. Egerton addressed the Senate and students present, saying that he regretted the absence of Sir Henry Davies, the President, which compelled him as Vice-President to take the chair on the occasion. He considered the condition and progress of the institution decidedly satisfactory, and that the fact of examinations in various branches of knowledge, especially for Oriental degrees, having been held at Lucknow and other places by the Punjab University College, showed that it supplied a want, not only in the Punjab, but even in the North-West Provinces. Mr. Egerton then proceeded to distribute the prizes and certificates to the successful students to the number of some hundred and seventy, after which the meeting broke up. The total number of students examined in all branches in 1874-75 was three hundred and two, in 1875-76 three hundred and eighty-nine, an increase of eighty seven—a very satisfactory increase. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor is to arrive to-morrow at Maler Kotla, and marching by Sirhind and halting at various places whose names you have probably never heard, and which would not interest you if you had, reaches Nahan on the 20th March. Soon afterwards he is to go to Simla to meet the new Viceroy, Lord Lytton, and nominally to stay ten days or a fortnight. We all remember, however, how Sir Henry Davies's visit to Simla during Lord Mayo's Viceroyalty in 1871 was prolonged, but there were a number of Punjab Bills before the Council that year to justify and explain it; so heads of departments who have houses at Murree see no reason as yet for any great anxiety. Certainly Murree without the Government would be a very provincial place indeed. The Lahor Volunteers have been, during the last week, under canvas in a camp of instruction, which was brought to an end on Saturday evening by the annual review of the corps, the inspecting officer being Colonel Swinhoe, R. A. There were about 150 of all ranks on parade. After the usual salute and march past, with the manual firing exercises, the arms and accoutrements were minutely inspected. The company officers were then called to the front one by one, and their knowledge of their duties tested by causing them to manœuvre their companies. The battalion was then reformed and put through a few movements, including skirmishing and blank firing. Colonel Swinhoe expressed himself as on the whole satisfied with the condition and efficiency of the regiment.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DOVETON COLLEGE.—Mr. Donald Stewart, of the University of St. Andrews, has been appointed Classical Master to the Doveton College, Calcutta, and is expected to arrive by the middle of March. He comes out highly recommended both as a scholar and a teacher.

ACCIDENT TO CAPTAIN MORTON.—Captain G. de C. Morton, Private Secretary to his Honour the Lieutentant-Governor of the Punjab, has had a bad fall from a camel, but fortunately has sustained no injury further than a few bruises and a shaking, which will confine him to bed for a few days.

DEADLY FUN.—People have been placing stones on the railway line between Bankipur and Dinapur, simply, as one of them confessed, for the fun of seeing a train upturned. Fortunately, they were found out before any mischief ensued. The Behar Herald tells us that they have been committed to take their trial at the Court of Sessions.

THE NATIVE PRESS.—Referring to Sir Richard Temple's complimentary notice of the Vernacular Press in his minute on the Bengal Administration Report of 1874-75, the Bharut Sungskaruk says that if Sir Richard is convinced of the loyalty of the Vernacular Press, let him show his confidence by renewing the official publication of its opinions. The discontinuance of this publication has done it a material injury.

NATIVE RAILWAY GUARDS.—We read in a letter from Assensole to the Railway Service Gazette that "the native guards are slowly increasing in numbers, and so are the punishments which have to be inflicted upon them for neglect of duty. A few days back, one of them detained the train he was in charge of thirty-two minutes at Burdwan; another left his train at the same station, and did not turn up again until some hour or two after it had been despatched in charge of an European guard. They have each been fined two days' pay."

CAPTURE OF ELEPHANTS.—We learn that the elephant-catching operations of the Bengal Kheddah Establishment, Dacca, have been successfully prosecuted this year by Mr. Sanderson, an officer of the Mysore Government, but who is at present officiating at Dacca. The Kheddah party reached their ground in the Chittagong Hill Tracts on New Year's Eve, and on January 31st completed their third capture, making a total of 85 elephants. Several of them are reported to be tuskers of value. A pair of newly-caught tuskers was sold at Dacca, a short time ago, for Rs. 16,000 the pair. The Kheddah operations have been closed, as the large number of elephants, considerably above the average annual capture, is a sufficient charge.

SUCCESSFUL SPORT.—A letter from Sambalpur, dated February 17th, gives the following account of the Deputy-Commissioner's successful shikar trip to Patna. The Deputy-Commissioner says:—"The police officer got first shot. I followed up on the elephant, and shot her within ten yards. She made a vicious but elegant charge at the elephant's head, but I am happy to say she dropped like a snipe at his feet with my bullet through her eye. This makes a bag of four tigers in one beat, and two tigers left for the next day. The man-eating tigress in question has caused great loss of life in many villages in the Patna district, and I hear that the rejoicing amongst the natives was great at her death. The day before she was shot a woman had fallen a victim to her partiality for human flesh.

MR. BARCLAY.—We regret to learn that Mr. G. Barclay, who lately came out to resume editorial charge of the Englishman, has been ordered home again by the doctors.

A RINK AT SIMLA.—The fortunate people who are able to spend the greater part of the year at Simla will be happy to hear that preparations are already going on for making a skating rink at the Assembly-rooms.

MR. BEAUFORT.—We understand that Mr. Beaufort, the Judge of the Twenty-four Parganahs, Bengal, who has lately been employed on the Commission appointed to investigate the accounts of the Nawab Nazim of Bengal, goes home in six weeks, his fifty-five years having been attained whilst the Commission was still sitting.—Times of India.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN JENKINS.—(PESHAWAR, March 8.)—A sad accident occurred here on Saturday. Captain Jenkins, of the 20th N.I., who was expecting the return of his wife, rode out on the road to meet her, but the night being wet, and the roads very slippery, it is supposed his horse came over with him, as he was picked up insensible near the Commissioner's house, and although at first hopes were entertained of his recovery, he died on Monday, and was buried on Tuesday morning.—Pioneer Correspondent.

THE CHOLERA.—WE (Indian Daily News) understand that an outbreak of cholera of a malignant type has broken out in a locality called Goa Bagan, in the neighbourhood of the Normal School, near Cornwallis-square, and that energetic measures are being taken by the health officer to stamp out the disease as soon as possible. Suggestions were made, we hear, to dig up the whole surface of the locality, and to station a staff of policemen on the spot, to prevent the people living thereabouts from having recourse to the excellent sanitary measures they are in the habit of adopting for spreading this and kindred diseases, viz., washing the clothes of diseased persons, and making use of the water of the filthy tanks in these bustees for domestic purposes.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—The Darjiling paper reports a melancholy accident which happened at Dobri on Feb. 16 to Mr. M. Clarke, only son of Mrs. Clarke, of Darjiling. The young gentleman was on his way from Darjiling to Assam, in order to take up an appointment in tea, and halted at Dobri to await the arrival of the up-steamer. In the afternoon he went, with another gentleman, to bathe in a creek of the Brahmaputra, and while in the water was, it is supposed, seized with cramp. He called out to his companion, who at once proceeded to his aid, but, being caught by the drowning man, he, with much difficulty, succeeded in escaping from his clutches, and sharing his fate. Poor Mr. Clarke was drowned, and his body was only recovered on the 21st.

JALRAPATAN.—Captain Abbott, lately Officiating Settlement Officer in Alwar, has, we hear, been appointed to the Political charge of Jalrapatan, in Rajputana. Government would, we believe, be only too glad to employ natives of the stamp of Nawab Faiz Ali Khan in all appointments of this kind if it could, but the Native Chiefs themselves, curiously enough, oppose this policy. They distrust any new minister unless he is a European. Vernacular papers, observing this statement, will no doubt accuse us of romancing, but none the less is what we state the case. Not long ago, for instance, the most conservative Chief in Rajpootana, an old man with a very young heir, when speaking to a European officer about the probability of a long minority for his State, remarked that although he had always resisted British interference himself, he heartily hoped after his death no native would be placed in authority in his dominions. No native would be disinterested, and he would greatly prefer a European officer.—Pioneer.

PENANG.—Many of our readers, says the Englishman, will regret to hear that Lieutenant G. A. Colvill, 3rd Buffs, died at Penang on the 29th February. Referring to this sad event a friend writes:—"On the 20th of November, 1875, the head-quarters of the Buffs left Calcutta, their band playing, and all of them, officers and men alike, in the highest spirits at what they thought was going to be a brilliant campaign in Perak. Notwithstanding that the Buffs was one of the most popular regiments that was ever stationed in Fort William, only a handful of spectators assembled to witness its departure from among us; but those who did will not easily forget the simple though affecting scene. The colonel, who had only just recovered from a long and painful illness, but who veiled all traces of it under a cheerful and resolute bearing, rode at the head of the regiment on a cobby little horse, which it was thought would be admirably suited for the work he would have to do in the campaign. The adjutant, the very picture of a soldier, mounted on a strong little white pony, and the rest of the officers, many of whom were mere boys, were brimful of hope and glorious expectations; while the men, without exception or exaggeration, were as fine a body of rank and file as could be found in any regiment or in any service. The embarkation was rapidly effected, and then, the band playing 'Auld lang Syne,' and the men cheering, the transport got under way, and was very soon lost to view."

THE LATE MR. W. CARPENTER.—(NAGPUR, March 6.)—Mr. Carpenter, C.S., Officiating Commissioner of Nagpur, I regret to say, died on Sunday night, the 5th inst., at 9 P.M., and was buried this evening at five o'clock. He was very much liked in the Central Provinces, and his loss will be severely felt by one and all. His place will not be easily filled up, and the Government have lost in him a very valuable public servant. He has left, I am told, a son six years old in England. Mr. Carpenter was a widower. A telegram was despatched to England to ascertain if he had any other relatives living, and an answer was received in the negative. Dr. Beatson, Civil Surgeon, was very kind and attentive the whole time, and did all in his power to restore consciousness, but it was of no use, and he expired exactly the ninth day after the unhappy accident. Mr. Carpenter must have had a very strong constitution to have borne up so well and for so many days. Another man in his place, I fear, could not have held out so long. A post mortem examination was held this morning, and it was found that death was caused from concussion of the brain. I am told that Mr. Carpenter objected to ride in the races at Kamptee, and complained of feeling nervous, but his friends persuaded him, and the poor man, not wishing to displease them, at last agreed to ride his own horse in the hurdle races. There were a few military officers of distinction present at the funeral from Kamptee.—Times of India Correspondent.

THE RATE OF EXCHANGE.—Among the many suggestions on the subject of exchange with which the Indian and even the home papers are now deluged, is one that the Indian Railway Companies should reduce their charge for goods and bring into the European markets some of the vast produce of India which now can only be sold at a profit within a few miles of where it is produced. It costs as much to carry a hundred tons of wheat from Jubbulpore to Bombay as it does to carry the same amount from Chicago to Liverpool! So it is tolerably clear that the wheat of the Nerbudda Valley can only be sold near the Nerbudda Valley; and not only is the outside world deprived of so much grain and so much competition, but the railway companies themselves are deprived of the profits of carrying so much freight. The companies do not seem to see that it is more profitable for them to carry a million maunds at an anna a maund than a thousand at four annas, and the consequence is that Indian lines have little to do, run few trains as slowly as they can, and pay little or nothing; and while the country is also largely taxed to supply their deficiences by paying guaranteed interest, these very companies are keeping back the country and crippling its resources by excessively high rates. Cutting a rod for one's own flagellation is hardly an exaggerated image of the double toll which Indian railways take out of Indian tax-payers. On the subject of exchange and the remedies for the present state of things it is hard to see why India and England should have different currencies, being part of the same Empire and under the same Sovereign, and it is clear that if the rupee was current in England or was called a florin, and the sovereign was current in India, there would be no such thing as exchange. Of course, we should at first deluge England with silver, but there are plenty of complaints about the want of "change" at home, and things would no doubt find their own level in time. But no doubt all such currency questions abound in difficulties which are only known to those who study them most.—Pioneer Correspondent.

CAPTURE OF DACOITS.—Captain Kilgour, the Superintendent of Police, Madura, has succeeded in breaking up a notorious gang of dacoits and cattle-lifters known as the "Meylur Gang." Out of fifty persons who belonged to this gang, ten only remain to be accounted for, two of whom escaped from custody.

COTTON AND INDIGO IN MADRAS.—The latest official statement of cotton and indigo cultivation in the Madras Presidency up to the month of November last shows that there were 1,246,193 acres under cotton, and 277,253 acres under indigo in 1875, and 1,165,590 acres under cotton, and 187,867 acres under indigo at the same period in 1874.

TRADE OF MADRAS.—In the month of January last the total amount of goods imported into Madras by sea was valued at Rs. 34,46,471, against Rs. 28,79,805, the total value of goods imported in January, 1875. The value of goods exported was Rs. 33,92,579, against Rs. 23,82,376, the value of goods exported in January, 1875.

EXPENSES OF THE PRINCE'S VISIT.—The Madras Government have paid Messrs. Deschamps and Co. 57,000 rupees for furniture and fittings supplied to Government House and the Banqueting Hall against the Prince's visit. Messrs. Taylor and Co.'s bill of 28,000 rupees for horses supplied on the same occasion is now before the same Government.

RINKING IN INDIA.—A pleasant addition to the attractions of the Lal Bagh is to be made (says a Madras paper) in the shape of a skating rink. As is the case with the Darwinia, it is proposed to charge a small fee for the use of the rink, and an estimate of the probable cost has been called for, with the view of its being ready by next June. The Eden Gardens in Calcutta, the Byculla Club, the Madras Club, and the People's Park at Madras, are all fired with the ambition to be the happy possessors of a rink, but Bangalore hopes to be the first to take the lead in India.

CHOLERA IN SOUTHERN INDIA.—When it was announced that the Prince of Wales had been deterred by the prevalence of cholera in parts of this Presidency from visting the Annamallays, Neilgherries, Bangalore, &c., the statement was made that the alleged presence of cholera was grossly exaggerated, and that the Prince might with impunity have carried out his original programme. Statistics now being published serve to justify the local Government's reluctance to advise the Prince to carry out that programme. In the District of Salem, the deaths from cholera in the month of November numbered 1,563 in a population of 2,037,212 persons.

DEATH BY DROWNING.—A sad accident occurred in Coorg on the night of the 1st March, whereby a Coorg planter, Mr. G. F. Waller, Manager of the Jygoonda Estate, near Veerujendorpett, and formerly of the Rajawelle Estate in Ceylon, and a maistry of the same estate, were drowned. It appears Mr. Waller went in a boat to fish by torchlight on the Kiggutanand river, and was accompanied by the maistry and three coolies. From some cause, of which different accounts are given, the boat was accidentally upset, and its occupants precipitated into deep water. The three coolies saved themselves by swimming, but the maistry, in the struggle which ensued in the water, clutched hold of Mr. Waller to save himself, and unfortunately held Mr. Waller's arms, so that the latter was prevented from saving himself, and both he and the maistry were drowned. Mr. Waller's body was found after a long search, by an assistant on the estates who happened to have remained in the bungalow; and on Thursday the remains were conveyed to Mercara, where they were interred on the following day.

GIFTS BY A MAULMAIN MAGNATE.—We read in the Rangoon Gazette that the wealthy Karen Forester, Moontaw, the Peabody of Maulmain, who has already spent nearly a lac of rupees in building zayats, bridges, and roads in several parts of Tenasserim, is now about to make an offering of a magnificent umbrella or Tee to a large pagoda on the platform of the Shwadagon. It is being manufactured in Maulmain, and will shortly be taken up to the pagoda. It is to be richly gift and profusely ornamented. A spacious pandal is being erected close to the railway bridge on the brigade ground, where entertainments on a large scale will be gratuitously provided. A wealthy Burmese lady of Rangoon is, it is reported, a contributor towards the work of repairing the pagoda on which the Tee is to be placed, and also bears part in the other expenses. It is part of the Buddhist faith to admit participation in these religious offerings, not from economical motives, but because the participator is supposed to reap a portion of the future "merit" accruing from good works, without any diminution of the principal donor's share.

RAILWAY BRIDGES.—The unsubstantial nature of the construction of many bridges and other masonry works on the Madra Railway has been pretty well proved of late years, failure after failure of important works having taken place when the test of a severe monsoon was applied to the several structures alluded to. Minor works also are not to be exempted from the category of ill and badly executed contracts. From recent proceedings of Government we learn that it has been necessary to apply to the Supreme Government for sanction to spend a considerable sum of money in the construction of four bridges between Madras and Arconum, a distance of about twenty miles. These bridges it appears were originally built with foundations of insufficient depth, and they now require to be reconstructed in a more substantial manner in this respect. How many contractors, sub-contractors, and others have been enriched at the expense of the Madras Railway Company, through not being forced to execute their work properly, who can tell.—Madras Athenæum.

TONGHOO.—General Knox Gore, commanding British Burmah, arrived here on Feb. 9, on a tour of inspection. He came across from Thyetmyo, and is accompanied by Colonel Thornton, R.A., and Lieutenants Gore and Alves. One hundred and fifty men of the 17th Regiment N.I. proceeded yesterday (13th) to Shoaygyeen, to relieve the detachment stationed there. The two remaining companies of the 67th Foot are under orders to start on the 21st for Rangoon; the men of the 89th, which are to relieve them, are on their way up, and will be here about the same time. News has been received from the Kareenee Boundary Commission. One of their Police Guard had run amuck, stabbing two or three of his comrades, and then polishing himself off in the same way. There was also some well-known blackguard Burman, an agent of the King of Burmah, with Prince Koonti, with whom he has no right to be, for his withdrawal was once before demanded, and was promised by the King. As he is not likely to be there for any good purpose, the Government will probably insist on his being withdrawn.—Madras Athenæum Correspondent.

SIR SALAR JUNG'S PROPOSED VISIT.—Our Haidarabad correspondent, writing on the 6th inst., says:—"In commenting last week on the projected visit of Sir Salar Jung to the 'barbarous' countries of the West, you were pleased to ascribe his invitation to the Duke of Sutherland. You were wrong; at least the people hereabout say and swear you were. The Duke of Sutherland may be a very big man in his own way, but then our Sir Salar Jung is also a big man in his way, and a considerably bigger man in Haidarabad than the Duke of Sutherland is in Great Britain; and from whom then should the Minister accept an invitation but from the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Sutherland being merely the mouth-piece for conveying the Royal request? So says everybody hereabouts. But I merely give you the gup without vouching for its accuracy. Another correspondent gave you some popular gup a short time ago—which, by-the-bye, I heard myself for true gospel—and thereby fell into error. It may be that I am doing the same. Major Neville, the local Commander-in-Chief, accompanies the Minister as the fidus Achates of the latter. Thus the head of the State and the chief of the army will both be absent from their posts at one and the same time. Sir Salar Jung's nephew will act in his absence, and Major Neville will be represented by—well, never mind, in the meantime. Rest assured there will be no disturbance here. He will not attack the British garrison at Secunderabad, nor will he invade the island of Bombay.—Times of India, March 13.

SIR ARTHUR PHAYRE.—There was a rumour lately at Mauritius that the Governor, Sir Arthur Phayre, was about to retire, having been offered the reversion of the Governorship of Bombay, when Sir P. Wodehouse retires, and that Sir Arthur Kennedy, at present Governor of Hong Kong, will be appointed Governor of Mauritius.—Times of India.

SIR C. STAVELEY.—H.E. the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, accompanied by his staff, visited Hog Island on Friday morning, March 10. The method of working the hydraulic lift, and the various uses of the machinery and appliances, were explained by Captain Brebner, I.N., the officer in charge, who was in attendance.

THE PLAGUE IN THE EUPHRATES VALLEY.—The plague, we are sorry to learn, has broken out in the Valley of Euphrates. The Political Resident at Bagdad, Colonel Nixon, has telegraphed the fact to the Government of Bombay, suggesting that vessels entering the harbours of India from those parts should be watched. The Government has decided that all vessels from the Gulf of Persia entering Bombay harbour shall be subjected to examination, and from that rule even the British India steamers will not be exempt.

THE DAKHAN RAYATS' COMMISSION.—Through the Government filter, the following drop of information reaches the public:—"The Report of the Dakhan Rayats' Commission is in the hands of the Supreme Government. The widely-varying, and, in one instance, extravagant character of the remedies proposed, is eloquent of the of extreme intricacy of the subject and the almost hopeless differences opinion with regard to it among experts. The report will, we believe, not even be discussed during the present Viceroyalty; we should question anything being done even in the next. The recent inquiry has hardly scratched the surface of the subject, which is one for systematic and far-reaching investigation all over India—after that, if possible, for some imperial measure of relief, with moderate facilities for local adaptation."

THE PRINCE IN BOMBAY.—His Royal Highness looked remarkably well, and is only slightly sun-burnt. He was dressed in his favourite costume, the undress of the Prince of Wales's Hussars, of which he is colonel. Great crowds of people—principally Hindoos and Parsees—had assembled outside, and directly the Prince appeared welcomed him with loud shouts. "God bless you, Prince of Wales, and you Sir Bartle Frere," was lustily vociferated by a Parsee stentor, whose voice was distinctly heard above all the clamour. As the Prince appeared on the steps of the station the band of the Marine Battalion played "God Bless the Prince of Wales," and presented arms. When the procession left the regiments formed up and marched to quarters. The following is a list of officers who, in addition to the suite, will accompany his Royal Highness to England:—Major General the Hon. A. Hardinge; Colonel Annesley; Captain Gough, 10th Hussars; Lieut. Rose, 10th Hussars; Lieut. Wood, 10th Hussars; and in addition to the above-named two native officers, two sergeants and two privates, all of General Probyn's old regiment, will visit England by the kind invitation of his Royal Highness, and under the guidance of the gallant General himself. His Royal Highness and some of his suite dined with Admiral Macdonald on board the Undaunted last evening.—Times of India, March 13.

PROPOSED LOAN IN ENGLAND.—Our Calcutta correspondent has telegraphed to us that it was understood that the loan would be issued, and that its amount would be £12,000,000. From London we hear that Lord George Hamilton has given notice of a motion for the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the effect of the fall of silver on exchange with India. We may infer that there is an intimate connection between the two facts: the loan of twelve millions sterling will be issued to obviate the necessity of drawing on India for the home charges until the Select Committee has had time to inquire into the best means of remedying the present condition of things. There is little room to doubt that the remedy that will suggest itself is an alteration in the currency—in other words, the substitution of a gold for a silver standard. That step ought to have been taken before the rupee had fallen to 1s. 8d., but it is better that it should be decided on now rather than that it should be deferred until the rupee goes down to 1s. 6d. The mere announcement that Government was about to do something served to steady the market. In the morning quotations showed that silver had improved by an eighth, and people were thankful for the trifling advance, for they regarded it as a symptom that the fall had been checked. Bank bills on demand were to be had for 1s. 8 1-16d.; the previous day the rupee was only worth 1s. 8d. for transmission to England. The loss incurred in remitting at this rate to meet commercial or domestic charges is ruinous, and of course the European community loses most heavily. It is satisfactory to know that at the close of business subsequently exchange went up another 1-16th, the rupee being worth 1s. 8⅛d. This was beyond doubt attributable to the belief that a loan would be raised in London, in order that the Council drawings might be intermitted for the best part of a year, so as to give time for radical measures being taken.—Times of India.

THE PRINCE'S WILD ANIMALS.—The collection of animals as presented by the various Princes of India, which his Royal Highness intends to take to England as specimens of the Zoology of India, is being rapidly completed. The Serapis, on leaving, might be compared to a Noah's Ark from the variety of birds and quadrupeds and "creeping things," with which she will be freighted on her return voyage. By the Jubbulpore mail train on Wednesday the animals presented by H.H. the Maharajah of Cashmere to the Prince of Wales arrived from Lahore in charge of Mr. Burke, of the Lahore Menagerie. They consisted of a pair of Cashmere ponies, a hog-deer, a magnificent sambur or bara singha, four shawl-goats of the long-haired species, two pairs of Cashmere sheep, a four-horned ram, a Thibetan mastiff, and a chicori or pheasant. The ponies are not a match either in size or colour, but are fine specimens of their kind, and though not remarkable for equine beauty, are very strong and sturdily set animals, admirably suited for rough mountain travelling. One is a dark chestnut Yarkand or ghoont, and the larger pony is a white and bay piebald Chargosha, very prettily spotted. The sambur is a stately looking deer with splendid antlers, measuring over four-and-a-half feet at the shoulders, while the hog-deer is a smaller specimen of the deer tribe with short straight horns. The former is extremely wild, and even dangerous. He had, in fact, to be placed in a horse-box by himself, and requires more than a dozen men to hold him. The long-haired, beautifully white, shawl-goats are quite tame, as well as the ram and sheep. The dog, however, looked very unhappy and miserable after the journey. He is a great black hairy beast, some two feet and a half high, with a head something like an English mastiff, drooping ears, and powerful jaws. The chicori is similar in general appearance to the English pheasant. The whole convoy arrived in good condition, and the ponies were immediately taken on board the Serapis, but the other animals were not removed until dark.—Times of India, March 13.

AFFAIRS IN MUSCAT.—(MUSCAT, Feb. 16.)—There are two of her Majesty's cruisers riding at anchor in Muscat Cove, the Rifleman and the Nimble. The former, carrying the flag of the senior officer of the Persian Gulf squadron, arrived yesterday from the Gulf under a cloud of canvas, looking a model of perfection as far as beauty goes; and the seamanlike manner in which she was manœuvred when making for her moorings proves that there are still in the navy men of the old stamp, who understand the handling of a ship without the power of steam. Amongst the arrivals I must not forget to mention that of the barque Taria Topun, the last ship of the season of the fleet of American clippers, calling at this port, consigned to the firm of Messrs. W. J. Towell and Co. Though the European residents of Muscat can be told off on one's fingers there is no lack of amusement in the place, thanks to the crews of H.M.'s ships, who are promoting social gatherings and doing all they can for us poor exiles. Under their talented and popular manager, Mr. J. K. Masse, the serenaders of H.M.S. Nimble gave an entertainment on the quarter-deck of their vessel, which was tastefully decorated. Mr. Jones's songs, as usual, were loudly encored, and the satisfaction of the audience with the whole of the performance was very warmly expressed. The second part of the performance was looked forward to with great interest and excitement, as from the programme it promised to be a rich treat. Jugglery and sleight of hand everywhere find their votaries, and the successful performance of Lieutenant Hill, R.N., a late acquisition to the Nimble's company, having been transferred from the Undaunted, met with warm applause. Owing to the exertions of Mr. Maguire, ably seconded by the officers of the Rifleman and Nimble, a Gymkhana meeting has at last been convened. Rifle matches, sack races, greasy poles, archery, and Badminton promise the lovers of sport a fund of amusement. The Teazer was to have relieved the Nimble on this station, and considering that the latter vessel has had trying and arduous duties to perform in these waters, and that she is small, badly ventilated, and uncomfortably fitted, it is singularly unfortunate for her that the Teazer should have been sent on special duty, and the relief of the ill-starred Nimble thereby retarded sine die.—Times of India Correspondent.

MR. LAYARD.—The Hon. Mr. Layard, Government Agent, Central Province, and the oldest member of the Ceylon Civil Service, has been made Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George.

CIVIL.—The Record-keeper, Mr. R. Van Cuylenberg, resumed his duties on the 1st March, after twelve months' leave in Europe. During that time he has perfected his knowledge of the Dutch language; and in Holland made himself acquainted with the contents of some of the ancient Dutch records having reference to Ceylon.

A VERY OLD RESIDENT.—The death is recorded this week of Mr. Don Hendrick Perera Abeysingha Weerekon, aged one hundred and six years. He never smoked or took any alcholic drink. He was sensible to the last. He was a boy at the taking of Kandy, and knew the time when land was sold at a rupee an acre, and Colpetty and Slave Island blocks for 2s. 6d.—Ceylon Times, March 2.

CHINCHONA.—Mr. MacIvor, the Government Superintendent of Chinchona plantations in South India, is now on a visit to the interior of Ceylon, after a residence in India of about a quarter of a century. A supply of fish has been procured for the Newera Eliya Lake, Mr. MacIvor bringing them from Ootycamund. They numbered thirty-two, and were of three kinds, tench, rudd, and carp. Mr. MacIvor says two or three years must elapse before the lake will be sufficiently well stocked to allow of fishing. Mr. MacIvor does not seem to fancy the Nuwara Eliya soil very much for chinchona; the sub-soil is sour, and he thinks that after a few years' growth the roots would canker, and the growth of the trees would gradually become stunted. He says tea will grow, however.

LOSS OF THE "STRATHMORE."—The British ship Sierra Morena, Captain Kennedy, bound from Sunderland to Kurrachee, came into port on Thursday, February 24, with twenty persons, being part of the passengers and crew of the ship Strathmore, which was wrecked on the 1st July last on the largest of Crozet group of islands, latitude 46.15 S., longitude 15.0 E., called the Twelve Apostles' Rock. The Strathmore was on her voyage to Otago, New Zealand, and was seventy-five days out, when the disaster occurred. Captain Kennedy reports that on the 26th January he was boarded by an American whaler, Young Phœnix, in latitude 42·41 S., longitude 53 E., having forty-four persons on board, rescued from the Strathmore. Owing to insufficient supply of water Captain Kennedy could only accommodate twenty persons to Galle, namely, the second and third mates, carpenter, sailmaker, first and second stewards, cook, and one seaman, three first class, and nine third class, passengers. The captain and chief mate of the Strathmore were drowned, besides others. Five persons died on the island. The survivors experienced the greatest privation on the island, being bereft of suitable clothing, and having to subsist on a species of bird, large flocks of which inhabited the place. The whaler treated them with great kindness, and supplied warm clothing. There was one lady passenger. The vessel struck at four in the morning, and but for the timely rescue by Captain Giffard, the crew would have suffered greater privations, as the food supply was lessening.

BUST OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.—Mr. Adams Acton, who is now in Bombay, has been commissioned to execute a bust of the Prince of Wales for the Public Library of the city of Jullundhur.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The Eastern Telegraph Company (Limited) announce the payment of an interim dividend of 2s. 6d. per share.

KNIGHTHOOD.—The Gazette announces that the Queen has been pleased to appoint Major-General the Hon. Francis Colborne, C.B., commanding the troops in China and the Straits Settlements, a Knight-Commander of the Bath, and Captain Alexander Buller, Royal Navy, as Companion of the Bath.

THE "STRATHCLYDE."—On Tuesday evening the body of a female picked up between Ramsgate and Pegwell Bay on Sunday afternoon was identified by Major Graves, of Southsea, as his niece, Miss Bowring. The deceased was one of the passengers on board the Strathclyde.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—The directors of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China have declared a dividend at the rate of 4 per cent. for the half-year ended Dec. 31 last, which, with 4 per cent. paid in October, makes 8 per cent. for the year 1875.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—At the annual meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, on April 19, the directors will recommend that a dividend be declared for the half-year ending Dec. 31 last, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, and that £25,000 be transferred to the reserve fund.

INDIAN LOANS.—Two Parliamentary Papers have recently been issued showing the loans raised in England and India. The amount of debt outstanding on the 30th of September last of loans raised in England was £48,597,033. Of loans raised in India the amount of debt outstanding on the 1st of April last was £69,849,959; the amount of debt incurred during the half-year ended the 30th of September last £2,476,460, and £2 173,992 money raised, making a total of the three amounts, £72,326,419. The amount of debt paid off or discharged during the half-year ended the 30th of September was £338,826. The amount of debt outstanding on the 30th of September last was £71,987,593.

EASTERN EXTENSION TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The half-yearly report of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company states that the gross earnings amounted to £109,366. 14s. 10d., and the working expenses to £41,515. 12s. 4d., including £13,209. 12s. 11d. for the late repair to the cable. The balance of profit is £67,851. 2s. 6d., out of which an interim dividend of 1¼ per cent. has already been paid, and it is now proposed to make a further distribution of 1¼ per cent., which will be the final payment for the year 1875, making 5½ per cent. over that period, and leaving £40,268. 16s. to be carried to the reserve. Of the 3,200 debentures sanctioned, 2,649 have been issued, and the proceeds devoted to the laying of the New Zealand cable. The amount was entirely subscribed by the shareholders.

INDIAN IMPORT DUTIES.—A meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce was held on Weduesday to consider the policy of the Secretary of State in the Government of India with regard to the import duties on cotton goods into India. The Chamber passed a resolution affirming that it had read with great satisfaction the despatches of the Secretary of State for India, dated July 15, and November 11, 1875, to the Government of India at Calcutta on the subject of the duties now levied on cotton and cotton goods imported into India, showing, as those despatches do most conclusively, that the maintenance of the duties is opposed alike to the best interests of the people of India and to the principles of free-trade which have been uncompromisingly adopted by England, and that the members of the Chamber, on behalf of the manufacturing and commercial community of this district, desired to record their sense of the soundness of the commercial policy so ably advocated by the Secretary of State for India.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—On Thursday the ninth ordinary general meeting of the members of this company was held—Colonel Holland in the chair. The report of the directors stated that the company was duly represented at the St. Petersburg Telegraph Conference, held last June, and that the decisions arrived at appeared likely to prove beneficial both to the public and shareholders. The receipts for the past year amounted to £76,864. 18s. 1d., as compared with £67,770. 13s. 7d. for the year 1874. The expenditure for the year, exclusive of maintenance charges, amounted to £17,813. 6s. 10d., against £15,257. 15s. 2d. The directors had determined to recommend the shareholders to place £6,000 to reserve and contingency fund, and to carry the balance remaining to the current year. The resolution for the adoption of the report was seconded, on which Mr. Obach moved as an amendment that a dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. be declared, &c. The amendment was lost, and the original resolution was carried with three dissentients.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—The directors of the Oriental Bank Corporation, at the meeting of shareholders on the 20th inst., will announce a dividend of 5 per cent. for the half-year, making, with the dividend previously paid, 11 per cent. for the year ended 31st December, 1875.

THE FALL IN SILVER.—On Thursday the Select Committee upon the Depreciation of Silver resumed its sittings, under the presidency of Mr. Goschen.—Mr. Wilkins, bullion broker, thought that the fall was undoubtedly due largely to panic, for it had occurred notwithstanding diminished imports. If the French Government kept up a silver currency a large portion of the increased production of the United States would be absorbed.—Mr. Campbell, manager of the Oriental Bank, was of opinion that the depression of trade in India was also the cause of the depreciation of silver.—Mr. Crauford, chairman of the East India Railway Company, and former governor of the Bank of England, attributed the fall in silver to the greater quantity of the metal produced, concurrently with its demonetisation by Germany; and in the second place to the prodigious increase in the amount which the Indian Government in this country drew upon India, added to by a large number of bills of the same character representing the interest upon a part of the Government debt, which interest amounted to three-quarters of a million in the year, concurrently with a serious stagnation of trade. As a rule, there was not an article grown in India which could be sold at a profit in this country, and not a thing exported to India which could be sold without a loss. That had been the condition of things for the last three or four years. The fall of twopence in the pound upon cotton alone represented a loss of three millions sterling.

ARMY AND NAVY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY.—The annual meeting of the Army and Navy Co-operative Society (Limited) was held at the Westminster Palace Hotel, on the 24th March; Admiral Sir Richard Collinson, K.C.B., in the chair. From the directors' report it appears that during the eighth half-year, from 1st August, 1875, to 31st January, 1876, the sales on the trading account amounted to £361,627. 12s. 7d., and that the miscellaneous receipts from advertisements, and sale of annual tickets, &c., were £1,846. 16s. 9d., making a total of £363,474. 9s. 4d., being an increase over the corresponding period of last year of £114,059. 9s. 8d. The gross profit on the trading account was £28,287. 6s. 9d., added to which there were the miscellaneous receipts of £1,846. 16s. 9d., increasing it to £30,134. 3s. 6d. The working expenses on the whole amounted to £22,307. 16s. 2d., leaving a net profit of £7,826. 7s. 4d. Deducting the miscellaneous receipts, the actual net profit on the trading account has been at the rate of 3¾d. in the pound as against 5¼d. in the previous half-year. Reductions in prices, as promised in the last report, have been effected throughout the departments generally, and will continue to be made as far as can be with safety. The stores have now been open for four years, and subjoined is a summary of the progress which has been made:—Sales, including tickets, &c., first year, £130,280. 6s.; second year, £269,374. 10s. 5d.; third year, £435,452. 12s. 4d.; fourth year, £664,434. 9s. 8d. The new works for the enlargement of the premises at 117, Victoria-street are now in active progress. The report was adopted, and a dividend declared at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax. Major McCrea, the managing director, and Captain E. Lewis, the assistant manager and treasurer, who were the retiring members of the committee, were unanimously re-elected, and were congratulated by a number of speakers on their efficient conduct of the society's business. The auditors were re-elected, and the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, March 27. — THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—The Earl of SHAFTESBURY gave notice that, in the event of the Royal Titles Bill being carried through a second reading, he should, on going into Committee, move an humble address to her Majesty in these terms:—"That this House ventures to approach her Majesty in sincere and earnest devotion to her Majesty's person and dignity with an humble and hearty prayer that she may be graciously pleased to assume a title more in accordance than the title of Empress with the history of the nation, and with the loyalty and feelings of her Majesty's most faithful subjects."

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, March 28.—MADRAS IRRIGATION WORKS.—Mr. SMOLLETT asked the Under Secretary of State for India whether there was any intention to enforce payment from the directors of that prosperous reproductive undertaking the Madras Irrigation Works, of the debentures in arrear due by that company, for repayment of which two years' grace was given in 1874; and whether there was any difficulty in taking possession of those works in default of payment of the instalments as originally fixed.—Lord G. HAMILTON: If a company whose receipts do not meet their working expenses is a prosperous reproductive undertaking the Madras Irrigation Company comes within that category. (A laugh.) The two questions of the hon. gentleman refer to matters which have for some time past been under the special attention of the Secretary of State and his Council, but I am afraid that they are matters which do not admit of a very satisfactory solution. As far as the Secretary of State is concerned, he will do all in his power to reduce the burden which this company has imposed on the revenues of India.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, March 30.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—The Duke of RICHMOND and GORDON moved the second reading of the Royal Titles Bill, expressing a hope that the motion would be agreed to unanimously. The object of the Bill was, he said, practically to enable the Queen to assume the title of Empress in connection with her Indian possessions. He believed that the additional title which her Majesty would be advised to assume would be acceptable to the people of India, and if it had been assumed at the time of transfer of the Indian territories from the East India Company to the Crown no objection would have been taken to it. It was, too, he said, a very remarkable circumstance that until very recently no petitions had been presented either in favour or against the assumption of the proposed title, and the feeling of the press in this country before the question was brought within the arena of party was in favour of its assumption. Having shown that her Majesty had already been recognised by Indian authorities by the title of Empress, the Duke of Richmond and Gordon concluded by declaring that the Government proposed nothing which would impair the ancient dignity of the Crown.—The Duke of SOMERSET observed that when the Indian dominion was transferred from the East India Company, no such title as Empress was added to the titles of the Crown, and at that time the Queen had in the Prince Consort one of the best counsellers any monarch ever had; but now it was proposed to give the Sovereign a new-fangled title, which, if it meant anything, meant military power. The Prime Minister said that hordes which interposed between another Power and India have been subdued, and that in order to defend India he must make the Queen an Empress. Well, a good deal has been said of the cheap defence of nations, but he never heard of such a cheap defence as that. The Prime Minister was a man of brilliant genius and a man of Oriental imagination. He had become intoxicated by the atmosphere of the Court, and, desirous of paying to her Majesty a great compliment, he thought nothing would do so well as to make her an Empress. He had literary tastes of a high order, but he is not the man to despise nursery rhymes when they are appropriate, and their lordships could imagine him walking in with his Bill and saying, "Is not this a dainty dish to lay before the Queen?" The Prime Minister was given to vagaries of a wild and poetical character, but their lordships had a right to expect that the common sense of noble lords on the front bench opposite and the good understanding of the noble and learned lord on the woolsack would have saved them from this title. They could not have Lord Derby's opinion about it. He was away in a foreign Court, where the Duke of Somerset supposed he was practising his unaccustomed lips to pronounce "Empress." How was the assumption of this title to be regarded by the other Courts of Europe? What rank in the order of precedence was her Majesty to be allowed as Empress? Was she to come in at the bottom of the Imperial list? He opposed the measure, not in the spirit of party, but because it is contrary to the Constitution.—Lord NAPIER and ETTRICK said he thought it desirable as a matter of policy that her Majesty should assume some title distinctly marking her connection with India, thus making it manifest to the people of that country that their destiny was perpetually united with the Crown and Kingdom of England.—Lord GREY declined to sanction the assumption by the Sovereign of a new title which would by degrees overshadow the old historic title of King or Queen of England. He entreated the Government, therefore, to consider whether it was consistent with the honour and dignity of the Crown to press forward such a proposal in the face of the strong public feeling against the title of Empress, and whether they might not, by making a timely concession, obviate the necessity for a division upon the address of which Lord Shaftesbury had given notice.—Lord LAWRENCE, while thinking that the new title would have no effect upon the mass of the Indian people, suggested that the act would lose much of its grace in the eyes of the native princes, and the educated classes, if a title were assumed that was not unanimously approved by the English people.—Lord WAVENEY and Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY having expressed themselves opposed to the use of the new title, Lord GRANVILLE repudiated the charge that the opposition to the Bill was founded on party considerations, and expressed an opinion that with regard to such a measure as the present, affecting her Majesty's dignity, the Government should have put themselves in communication with the Opposition. He believed that the manner in which the bill was introduced in the House of Commons, taken in connection with the successive revelations of the object of the Bill, had convinced that Assembly that full confidence had not been shown it. With regard to the feelings of the people of In dia, there appeared to be no evidence either in one direction or the other; and as to the idea of localising the title, he said he did not like the Queen of England having something like an alias. It was impossible for him not to believe that the dignity of the grand old historic title of Queen would be tarnished. He did not intend to oppose the second reading of the Bill, but would, nevertheless, give his cordial support to the resolution of which Lord Shaftesbury had given notice. —Lord SALISBURY adduced, in proof of the new title being acceptable to the people of India, the fact that the Indian authorities were agreed on that head. He argued, moreover, that the title of Empress was an accurate expression of the paramount power of the Queen over the native rulers, and described its so-called unpopularity as resting only on the gossip of society and the clubs. There had indeed been some rumours of public meetings hostile to the measure; but the fact was that there had been less excitement on the subject than on the vivisection of rabbits.—Lord KIMBERLEY was pleased to find that Ministers in that House had not repeated the trivial and mischievous argument that the title of Empress was to have an effect upon the advance of Russia in Asia.—The debate was brought to an end by the LORD CHANCELLOR, who explained that the ordinary use of the title of Empress would be restricted to India, but that in legal documents in which the full style and title were usually set out the new style and title would have to be given at length.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FRIDAY, March 31.—INDIAN FINANCES.—Viscount HALIFAX asked for the production of the dissents of Sir Erskine Perry and Sir H. Montgomery to a telegram from India in reference to Lord Northbrook's financial reforms.—The Marquis of SALISBURY said the dissents had reference to a confidential communication, and as it was not thought desirable that this document should be made public, he could not consent to the production of the dissents.—The Duke of ARGYLL remarked that the Secretary for India had in his own hands the entire control of the Imperial government of India. The only check on him was this, that he could not give money grants without the consent of a majority of his Council, and it was doubtful whether this provision extended to measures which involved expenditure. This made it all the more necessary that a check should be kept on the Minister by Parliament, and Parliament could not do so without having full information. He pressed for the production of the dissents.—The Marquis of SALISBURY did not resist the production of the documents on account of their own importance, but because he objected to establish a precedent for the making public of dissents from a private communication.—Earl GRANVILLE pointed out that Parliament might be deprived of much useful and necessary information simply by putting the word "confidential" over every communication that it was desired to keep from its knowledge.—The Marquis of SALISBURY having promised to produce the Governor-General's answer to a more recent despatch as soon as it came to hand, the subject was allowed to drop.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, March 31.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Sir W. HARCOURT: On Monday next I will ask the First Lord of the Treasury whether, in the event of her Majesty being advised by her Majesty's Ministers to assume the additional title of "Empress of India," it is intended that such title shall be employed in all public instruments and documents of State not relating to India, in which the full statutory style and title of the Queen is now set forth, and in particular writs of summons to Peers of Parliament, and writs for the election of members to the House of Commons; patents for the creation of dignities of the United Kingdom; patents of appointments to offices under the Crown, such as that of Lord Chancellor, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, First Lord of the Admiralty, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the law officers of the Crown; instruments relating to the creation of bishops in England —(laughter)—for giving her Majesty's assent to Acts of Parliament; instruments relating to the summoning or prorogation or dissolution of Parliament; licenses for the meeting of Convocation; commissions to the lords-lieutenant and justices of the peace of the United Kingdom; Royal commissions for inquiry and report into matters having no relation to India; patents for inventions in the United Kingdom—(laughter)—writs to local authorities directing the publication of Royal proclamations; commissions of officers in the Army; charters of incorporation; and other purposes in the United Kingdom, and other like instruments issued under the authority of the Crown; and, if so, in what manner he intends to give effect to his undertaking that the public style and title of Empress shall be limited to India and Indian affairs, and not extended to acts of State relating to the Government of the United Kingdom. (Laughter and cheers).

Mr. E. SMITH: On going into Committee of Supply that day month, to call attention to the papers relating to the famine in India.

A FICTION EXPLODED.—A very sentimental story from Madras appears to have attracted notice in Calcutta. A man has been hanged by mistake, it seems, according to this shocking narrative, by reason of a message from the High Court reprieving him, and intended for despatch by telegraph, having been put aside by the signaller, forgotten, and never sent. Discussion turns on the punishment the signaller ought to receive, and we should have joined in this to point out that the punishment had been better earned by the officers of the High Court, who had been careless enough to fire off their telegram into space without ascertaining whether it had hit the mark; but that one's interest on the subject is paralysed by two circumstances: the telegram was only delayed a day, and arrived in ample time to prevent the man from being hanged.—Pioneer.

A CHRONOLOGICAL AND HISTORICAL

BY

ARTHUR ALLEN DURTNALL, of the High Court of Chancery.

Price, fully Tinted, mounted on Roller and Varnished, 20s. Size, about 40 in. by 50 in.

Showing, at one view, all the principal nations, governments, and empires which have existed in that country from the earliest times to the suppression of the Great Mutiny, A.D. 1858; with the date of each historical event according to the various eras used in India. By this Chart, any person, however ignorant of the subject, may, by an hour's attention, obtain a clear view of the broad lines of Indian History, and of the evolutions which have resulted in the dominion of her Majesty as EMPRESS OF INDIA. It will be found invaluable for EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES, especially in Colleges and Schools, where an Indian career is in contemplation. It will also be found of permanent utility in all Libraries and Offices as a work of ready reference for the connection of events and dates. Besides the History of India, it includes the contemporaneous histories of Afghanistan, Central Asia, and Europe.

A RELIEVO MAP OF INDIA.

BY HENRY F. BRION.

In Frame, 21s.

"A map of this kind brings before us such a picture of the surface of a given country as no ordinary map could ever do. To the mind's eye of the average Englishman, India consists of 'the plains' and 'the hills,' chiefly of the former, the hills being limited to the Himalayas and the Nilgiris. The new map will at least enable him to correct his notions of Indian geography. It combines the usual features of a good plain map of the country on a scale of 150 miles to the inch, with a faithful representation of all the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus bringing out into clear relief the comparative heights and outlines of all the hill-ranges, and showing broad tracts of uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a very practised eye. The plains of Upper India are reduced to their true proportions; the Central Provinces, Malwa, and Western Bengal reveal their actual ruggedness at a glance; and Southern India, from the Vindhyas to Cape Comorin, proclaims its real height above the sea-level. To the historical as well as the geographical student such a map is an obvious and important aid in tracing the course of past campaigns, in realising the conditions under which successive races carried their arms or settlements through the Peninsula, and in comprehending the difference of race, climate, and physical surroundings which make up our Indian Empire. Set in a neat frame of maplewood, the map seems to attract the eye like a prettily-coloured picture, and its price, a guinea, should place it within the reach of all who care to combine the useful with the ornamental."—Home News.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a most simple form. Take some good compound, such as

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

LAMPLOUGH'S

PYRETIC SALINE.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, March 20; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, March 18; Calcutta, March 17.

THE death of the Bishop of Calcutta is a leading topic in the local papers. The fatal issue of his illness seems to have been quite unexpected. The Pioneer says of Dr. Milman, that his death will be a very heavy loss to the Christian population of India. "An absolutely unselfish enthusiast for his work, his final illness had been brought on under circumstances fitly in harmony with his whole Indian career. A man who never allowed discomfort to stand in the way of duty, he systematically laughed at heat and cold, fatigue and illness." His journey northwards "would never have been undertaken at all, had he been ordinarily careful of his health, for he had already been warned that he ought to take rest, and had indeed arranged to leave the country for six months at the expiration of his present tour. But this had been mapped out as a duty to be performed before the holiday should be taken, and it probably never occurred to the Bishop that the interval might be spent in any other way than in doing all the work that he could crowd into the time." The Friend of India, after touching on his sterling honesty, deep, solid piety, his broad culture, and lovable character, and the kindly interest he took in the people of India, holds that perhaps the most striking feature in the Bishop's character was his devotion to work and duty. "Whether we agreed with him or differed from him, it was impossible not to feel that here was a heroic worker, a single-minded, self-denying toiler in the service to which he had devoted his life—a man whose motto was 'Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might,' and whose meat and drink was to do, as far as he could discover it, the will of the Master he served."

THERE is little to add to the particulars already known through telegrams concerning the late Bishop's illness. It appears that during his long journey from Calcutta up to Pind Dadan Khan, in the Punjab, he was exposed to alternations of heat and cold, dryness and rain, that would have tried the strongest constitution. One night he spent in a dooly between Gujarat and Chillianwala, when it rained hard, and the next night was spent in a boat on the Jhilam. The result of this exposure and over-exertion of mind and body was that, after reaching Peshawar, he succumbed while staying with Colonel Sir R. Pollock, K.C.S.I., on February 28th, to severe bilious diarrhœa. On March 3 he was doing well, when he suffered a relapse, which so exhausted his little remaining strength, that his doctors resolved to move him with all speed into the healthy air of Rawul Pindi. Accompanied by Dr. Courtney, he was taken to Attok, on the 8th, and on the 9th to Rawal Pindi. But his case even then was hopeless. He grew rapidly worse, and died at ten o'clock on the morning of the 15th March.

AT the meeting of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, on March 14, Sir W. Muir presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Presidency Banks Bill. According to the proposed amendments the banks will be authorised to advance money on stocks of the United Kingdom, to undertake and charge for the care of title-deeds and plate, and make loans to individuals or firms not exceeding six lakhs; but they are not to discount, buy, lend or open credits on paper not carrying names of two persons or firms, with separate responsibility, or for more than three months. All three banks will be permitted to establish agencies at other Presidency towns, so that the Bank of Bengal will be able to keep up its present agency at Bombay. One bank must not purchase business of other banks, and the greatest number of votes allotted to each shareholder is to be raised to twelve.

ON the same day Mr. Hobhouse introduced his Bill for the better control of dramatic performances. By the present law, although persons taking part in an objectionable play may be punished for defamation, sedition, or obscenity, Government has no power to prevent such plays from being acted. Mr. Hobhouse quoted two recent instances of the need for legislation, that of the Chá-kár darpan, a calumnious satire on those engaged in the tea industry, and the more recent case which led to the issue of the Viceroy's Ordinance giving the Bengal Government temporary power to control such performances. The Bill, which is framed upon the model of the Ordinance, does not seek such large powers as the English law creates, but is believed to be sufficiently stringent for India.

THE amendments introduced into the Calcutta Municipal Bill at the meeting of the Bengal Council on March 11 included a scheme of cumulative voting, accepted on the motion of Mr. Bell. Under this system, a man may, if he pleases, concentrate all his votes on the one candidate whom he approves, instead of giving one vote for each. Another amendment, carried by the casting vote of the President, was to the effect that a man might vote in every ward where he had property entitling him to a vote, instead of selecting only one ward. A proviso was, however, added that no man should vote in more than five wards. It was further agreed that the chairman of the Municipality should have the casting vote whenever an equal number is recorded for each of two candidates; so that the chairman will not only have his votes like other ratepayers, but an additional vote for every tie that may occur.

LORD NAPIER was expected to leave Calcutta on the 3rd of April, and with Sir Frederick Haines proceed direct to Simla. Colonel Moore continues on the Commander-in-Chief's Staff.—General Sir Neville Chamberlain, the Madras Commander-in-Chief, had left for Calcutta. It is supposed that his visit has something to do with the reorganisation of the native army.

SIR JUNG BAHADUR, Prime Minister of Nepal, arrived at Lucknow on the afternoon of March 15. A guard of honour of the 6th Native Infantry paraded at the railway station to receive his Highness.

IT was rumoured in Calcutta that Sir Michael Westropp, the Chief Justice of Bombay, has sent home his resignation, and that Mr. Justice Macpherson, of the Calcutta Bench, may probably succeed him.

THERE has been a serious outbreak of those irrepressible Moplahs at the village of Kolatur, in the Calicut collectorate. Four women and the chief native of the village have been killed, and several were seriously wounded. The Collector and a detachment of European troops, with a strong police force, hastened to the spot from Calicut.

THE Viceroy—that is Lord Northbrook—has appointed Colonel Walton an Honorary Aide-de-Camp on his Staff. This is a compliment which the Colonel has well deserved, for the pains he has taken with the Calcutta Volunteers for so many years.

SMALL-POX was still raging in Bombay, the deaths from that disease numbering forty-five daily, or double the average weekly number of deaths from all causes.

IT has often been asserted that the city of Haidarábád in the Dakhan is so given over to all kinds of lawlessness, that an Englishman passing through it would carry his life in his hand. Let us hear however what an English traveller, who with his wife has lately visited the "Lion City," has to say on this subject :—

The picturesque ride, which was protracted through the byways as well as the highways of the "Lion City," ended with a charming breakfast at the palace of his Excellency the Mukhtar el Mulk (Prime Minister) Sir Salar Jang, whose visit to England, in April proximo, will add interest to a name already widely known and highly respected. The morning showed us not only a glimpse of Haydarabad, but an apercu of the general errors which afflict it. Forty years ago it was a turbulent den, into which Europeans could not enter without insult or injury, and where lawlessness and recklessness formed the rule of life. But, although a couple of generations, and, let me add, the progressive measures of an enlightened Minister, have completely changed the condition of things, still popular and even official opinion, whose watch is always an age or two behind time, refuses to recognise the development of order. "You come from a place where you may be murdered at any moment," was the address of a high official to an Englishman who had taken service under the Nizam ; and the "cut-throats, brigands, and assassins of Haydarabad" may still be found in all Anglo-Indian newspapers. Yet during the last thirty-five years not a single Christian has been murdered, I am assured, in these Moslem dominions, and the only European who was wounded suffered the consequences of his own fault. No violence was offered, even by the enraged peasantry, to the gentlemen sportsmen who engaged on a battue of the prince's tame deer.

The foregoing remarks are taken from a letter in which Captain Burton, the well-known Háji, describes to the editor of the Times of India a ride he took the other day through the capital of the Nizam's country. It is true that Captain Burton has a special tenderness for Mohammedans ; but his experiences in this case tally with those of other recent visitors to the same city, and bear out the belief expressed, we think, by Sir George Yule, a former Resident, that the Prince of Wales would have been as safe from danger in Haidarabad as in any part of British India. If Haidarabad were half as full of "cutthroats, brigands, and assassins" as it is sometimes said to be, Sir Sálar Jang would hardly have ventured to set out on a visit to England which may involve an absence of several months from the dominions entrusted to his special care.

SOME further details of the Indian Budget statement have been telegraphed home in the past week. The "actual" revenue for 1874-75 was £50,570,177, instead of £48,984,000, as estimated two years ago. The actual charges were £48,013,187, thus making the regular surplus £2,556,990, instead of £1,889,000, as estimated. This, however, takes no account of the famine expenditure, which amounted to £2,237,860 ; while the public works extraordinary amounted to £4,249,566. The excess of actual over estimated surplus is attributed mainly to an improvement in receipts from land and opium, the customs, and salt duties. The regular estimates for 1875-76 give the actual figures for ten months and estimates for the remaining two months. The income was estimated for that year at £49,820,000, but is now expected to be £50,991,000. The charges, which were estimated at £49,314,000, are now expected to be £49,088,000. Thus the surplus expected is £1,903,000, against last year's Budget estimate of £506,000. This, again, leaves out the famine charges, which are £656,000, and Public Works Extraordinary, which are £4,143,000. The improvement is spread over most heads of the account. The charges exceed the Budget estimates, chiefly under the heads of loss by exchange, Provincial allotments, and Public Works ordinary.

THE Budget estimates for 1876-77 show the following figures : —Revenue, £50,480,000; Ordinary Expenditure, £50,336,000 ; Surplus, £144,000 ; Public Works Extraordinary—that is, reproductive—£3,759,000. There is to be raised a loan of £3,000,000, of which £260,000 will be borrowed from Sindia and Holkar for railways ; the remainder by the Secretary of State in England. There is to be no borrowing in India, nor any fresh taxation. The cash balances in India at the end of 1875-76 were £16,243,214, and at the end of the next year £13,552,614, which is probably as low as they can safely fall. The Opium Duty is estimated at six millions, a point to which it has never fallen. The Excise revenue is rising rapidly, and a large increase is expected. The Customs are prosperous, and Sir W. Muir believes that commerce will be stimulated by the recent tariff reductions. An increase of revenue is estimated in Salt, Stamps, Mints, Post-office, Public Works, and State Railways ; a decrease in Telegrams, Irrigation, and Miscellaneous. An increase of charges is expected in the interest on the Debt, Law and Justice, the Army, State Railways, and guaranteed interest, with a decrease on Inland Revenue Administration, Marine, and allowances. We are glad to find that no charge is made for famine relief this year.

WITH regard to the rate of exchange Sir W. Muir remarks that the sudden depreciation of silver, and the consequent enhancement of charge to the Government in laying down the yearly sum required in England of about fifteen millions, without doubt, cast a grave shadow on the future. He holds, indeed, that the danger, from whatever point of view considered, is the gravest which has yet threatened the finances of India. "War, famine, and drought have often inflicted losses on the Exchequer far greater than the charge which threatens us in the present year ; but such calamities pass away. The loss is known and limited, and after it is provided for the finances again stand on sure and stable ground. This is not the case with the present cause of anxiety ; its immediate effects are bad enough, but what adds to its significance is that the end cannot be seen, that the future is involved in uncertainty. It may be that in the course of time the difficulty will be lessened or removed ; it may be that the depreciation will continue and may involve the Government in embarrassments more serious even than those it now contemplates. It would, at the present moment, be unwise to speculate on either of these alternatives." In view of such a state of things the Government "is bound to review its position in respect of the considerable expenditure hitherto made yearly on reproductive works from funds raised by public loan. With a sudden loss on the year's estimate of one million sterling, and with no assurance that the loss may not, for a time at least, assume still larger dimensions, the Government felt that it is not now justified in adding to future obligations by incurring any avoidable debt even for the construction of works admitted to be beneficial to the country and in themselves remunerative. The Government would, therefore, if practicable, have altogether refrained, under the present prospect of affairs, from borrowing for this purpose." That, however, says Sir William, is a course which could not be taken at once without great loss, as it would be wasteful suddenly to check extensive works already begun. It is necessary, therefore, to borrow three millions, which, excluding the contributions from Holkar and Sindia, will be raised in England. His last words are as follow :—"It is at least satisfactory to know that this misfortune, coming as it has so suddenly and from so unexpected a quarter, finds all the springs of our revenue sound and prosperous."

AT 8 A.M. on the 2nd of April the men-of-war in the harbour of Alexandria saluted the Prince's standard. In the forenoon the Prince of Wales visited the Grand Duke Alexis on board the Russian corvette Svetlana, and thence proceeded to the Raleigh and the British men-of-war. Salutes were fired and the yards were manned in honour of the visit. The Grand Duke Alexis and the officers of his suite lunched on board the Serapis. The Prince dined on board the Svetlana. Sir B. Frere left at noon for Trieste, en route for England. It appears that although the visit of the Prince to Cairo was made at a season of grave anxiety, nothing could exceed the cordiality of the welcome and the splendid hospitality of the Khédive, who was entertaining the Grand Duke Alexis at the El Noussa Palace, while the Prince of Wales was at Gezireh. On the following morning the Serapis and her consorts weighed anchor and steamed away to Malta.

THURSDAY last, the day of the arrival of the Prince of Wales at Malta, was kept as a close holiday and occasion for general festivity, the only drawback to which arose from disappointment at the inability of the Prince to execute his promise inadvertently given to lay the foundation-stone of a Roman Catholic asylum for orphan children. His Royal Highness leaves Malta on Tuesday next, and is expected to arrive at Lisbon on the 22nd inst. The British Mediterranean Squadron has already arrived in the Tagus.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram from Paris, a private despatch, dated Bombay, April 7, 3.15 A.M., announces the arrival of Lord Lytton in Bombay Harbour. The Viceroy was to have landed in the afternoon, and leave Bombay on Sunday for Allahabad and Calcutta. The Viceroy, his family, and suite were in excellent health.

A TELEGRAM to the Daily News from Rangoon announces that Mr. Grosvenor's party reached Yunnan Foo on the 6th of March.

IT seems to be now admitted, even by the Chinese officials in Yunnan, that Li Hsieh-tai was actually concerned in raising the force which repelled Colonel Browne's expedition. He even wrote to the Governor of Yunnan announcing his intention of stoutly guarding his district; and though the latter at once warned him to prevent the levying of the trainbands in which the Momain notables were engaged, the order arrived only after the event. In compliance with the prayer of the Yunnan Commission, Li Hsieh-tai has been suspended from his official rank and ordered to Yunnan-fu for trial. This confirms the belief that the punishment of Li Hsieh-tai was clearly understood to be an essential element in the reparation demanded for Margary's murder. Now that the Imperial Commissioner has got to the point of admitting Li Hsieh-tai's complicity in the late events, it is possible that his eyes may soon be yet further opened. There is much still to explain in the conduct of the Governor of Yunnan himself. As the North China Herald points out:—

> It is next to impossible that full details of the crime should not have been known in Yunnan-foo at the time the Governor declares he was receiving reports of Li Hsieh-tai's projects, and warning him to be quiet. Why, the news of the murder had reached Shanghai and Peking before the very earliest date on which the Governor acknowledges to have heard a word on the matter from a district in his own province; and not only will the question of dates tell against him, but that of neglect to a degree that can hardly fall short of connivance in not sending such instructions beforehand as to prevent the obstruction. Not only was Margary the bearer of despatches from the Tsungli Yamen, announcing his mission and its object, and requiring for it all assistance, but despatches were supposed to be sent ahead of him to the same purport. Why did not the Governor send forward such instructions as would prevent the blunder Li Hsieh-tai is alleged to have made, instead of waiting till Margary had passed three months before suggesting the employment of quieting measures? Altogether, Li Han-chang and his colleagues go so far to inculpate the Governor, one way or another, in this second memorial, that we await the third with greater and increasing interest.

THE fact of the steady decline in the value of the rupee is one which has long been disturbing the minds of our countrymen in India. It was therefore with general satisfaction that they heard, by a recent telegram from England, that the India Office had at last taken up the matter, and moved for the appointment of a Select Committee to consider the question in all its bearings. The columns of the local papers are filled with articles and letters discussing the causes and probable duration of the present fall in the value of silver; and each paper suggests its own remedies. That the sovereign should be made a legal tender in India; that a coin should be struck having currency both at home and in this country; that the Indian Government should impose a seigniorage on the coining of silver —these are only a few of the many suggestions thrown out in different quarters. One of the most important contributions to the consideration of the subject is a paper lately published by Mr. R. H. Hollingbery, Assistant Secretary to Government in the Financial Department, and which, although the Government disclaims any responsibility for its correctness, is put forth under its direction, and issued from the Official Press. Mr. Hollingbery ascribes the fall in the price of silver to the enlarged production of the metal, the augmented home draughts on India, the diminished balance of trade in favour of that country, the somewhat reduced production of gold, and the cessation of currency demand for silver in Europe and the United States. The last of these causes of depreciation he looks upon as likely to be permanent, and he regards in a similar light the increasing production of silver, and the enlarged amount of the Secretary of State's draughts, and of the tribute from Dutch India to Holland. He comes therefore to the conclusion that a fall below the present rate of 54d. an ounce is inevitable. This is a pleasant prospect for all persons with fixed incomes payable from India, or those who are obliged periodically to remit money to England—forming nearly, if not quite, nine-tenths of the Anglo-Indian community. They find that the rupee, instead of fetching its nominal value of 2s., is now worth only 1s. 8½d., representing to them a loss of about 14 per cent.

ACCORDING to a correspondent of the Bombay Statesman the consumption of silver, except for currency uses, "has been for years stationary, if not on the decrease." He has been told that there is now scarcely such a thing as a solid piece of silver-plate made in England; while the amount of silver required for electro-plating is infinitesimal, and in a commercial sense scarcely worth mentioning.

BY no writer here or in India has the question of depreciated silver been more ably or thoroughly discussed than by Mr. Ernest Seyd, whose pamphlet is now before us. After dealing with the causes of the present fall, Mr. Seyd suggests a remedy which may sound idle to believers in the perfection of a single gold standard, but which, to our thinking, justifies itself. So long as different countries keep up different standards of value, the difficulty now growing upon us will not, he thinks, be got over, nor will it be surmounted by the general adoption of a gold standard. The only possible solution he finds in a general agreement to adopt a gold and silver standard in England and Germany, as well as in India and France. For this purpose a general conference, in which England should take the lead, ought to be summoned without delay in order to avoid much worse evils than those already in prospect. We should like to know what sound economical objection can be raised against the double standard of value. Does the experience of France or Belgium, where the double standard has long prevailed, tend to justify the present belief in the superiority of a single standard? Gold and silver being equally useful for currency purposes, a fall in the value of one metal might be balanced by an increased employment of the other; and a double standard would surely prove the best safeguard against frequent or serious fluctuations in the exchange value of either currency. In applying the principle of a double standard, Mr. Seyd would introduce into India a new silver currency based on the English sovereign. Taking the usual proportion of 15½ of silver to one of gold for his basis, he finds the sovereign equal to 10⅝ rupees. The addition of one anna to each rupee would give the required proportion of ten rupees to the pound sterling. To get over the difficulty of dealing with seventeen annas to the rupee, Mr. Seyd would coin a new silver piece worth thirty-four annas, or four full-valued shillings sterling, five of which would thus go to the pound. If this new piece, which he would call an "Albert," were offered on the legal tender basis of Rs. 2.2, while the old rupee coinage was altogether stopped, the people of India would soon learn to accept the new coinage, especially "as coins of the dollar size have always been in favour with the Eastern nations." This new coinage once set going, some further changes might then be safely made in the fractional components of the Albert. In the first place, its value in pice might be altered from 408 to 400. Next, instead of thirty-four annas, the new coin might be divided into twenty parts, and each of these again into ten copper pieces worth two pice each, so that the pound sterling would represent 1,000 pice. By-and-by, when the present rupees had been called in, it would be feasible to issue half-

Alberts under the name of rupees, as token money on the same terms as the English florin. Once put in circulation, the new Indian dollar would soon gain a footing in other Eastern countries, including China. So thinks Mr. Seyd, and we see no reason for differing from him. It is pretty clear however, as he himself points out, that no remedy will wholly suit the occasion, unless all Europe will adopt the double valuation in gold and silver.

THE Right Honourable Holt Mackenzie, whose death occurred on March 31, at the great age of 89, was a very distinguished member of the Bengal Civil Service in the days of the Marquis of Hastings and Lord Amherst. The son of a distinguished father, Henry Mackenzie, author of the "Man of Feeling," Mr. Holt Mackenzie went out to India as a "writer" in 1807. Ten years later he rose into the Secretariat, and shortly afterwards to other high offices under Lord Hastings. He accompanied that Governor-General as Secretary on his tour through the Upper Provinces in 1821. At that time the revenue settlement of the North-Western Provinces was the question of the day, and the tide of opinion had already turned against the extension to those provinces of the permanent settlement of Bengal. Thanks mainly to the wise counsels of Holt Mackenzie, Regulation VII. of 1822, as issued by Lord Hastings, decreed the adoption of the village settlement for the North-West Provinces. By this enactment, which Mr. Raikes, in his "Notes on the North-Western Provinces," calls "the Magna Charta of the village communities," the village became the recognised unit of assessment for the land revenue, and the rights of the village communities in their ancestral lands were formally perpetuated, as against the claims of encroaching Talukdars. Much time elapsed indeed in the process of inquiring into conflicting claims and perplexing tenures, and the final settlement of those provinces was reserved for Lord Bentinck and Mr. Mertens Bird. But to Holt Mackenzie and Lord Hastings belongs the credit of entering on the path which their successors followed, and of defining those rights of property in land which had heretofore been ignored. It was Holt Mackenzie, we believe, who was asked by M. Jacquemont, the French traveller, to explain to him in half-an-hour's talk all about the land revenue systems of India. The experienced Secretary's answer was a lesson to the lively Frenchman—"I have been trying for twenty years to understand them, and I am not sure that I understand them now." In 1831 Mr. Mackenzie retired on his pension. During the next three years he sat at the Board of Control, and finally obtained a seat in the Privy Council, in whose proceedings, whenever they had to do with India, he took for many years an active part.

IRRIGATION IN FIROZPUR.

"THE account of the progress of irrigation works in the Province would not be complete without some notice of a remarkable development of irrigation, by means of inundation canals from the Sutlej, effected in the Firozpur district. . . . In the space of a few months ten canals have been constructed, with an aggregate length of 213 miles" (really 257 miles), "with capacity for watering an area of 100,000 acres; and the work has been accomplished, without costing a rupee to the State, by the district establishments, unassisted save by a surveyor subsidised from the District Funds."

The foregoing extract from the last Administration Report of the Punjab briefly records the successful issue of an experiment which Mr. Clements Markham has described at greater length in the March number of the Geographical Magazine. The district of Firozpur, stretching for 105 miles along the left bank of the Satlaj, covers an area of 2,962 square miles, with an average of 204 souls to the square mile. A scanty rainfall of fifteen inches yearly makes irrigation a necessity, if regular crops are to be raised in these arid tracts. In some places nothing but costly perennial canals would suffice for that purpose; but there are large breadths of lower ground which might easily be watered by cheap perennial canals, or by inundation channels filled at certain seasons from the overflow of the Satlaj. For that end many such channels offer themselves in the old beds of the river, which is continually changing its course. Very soon after taking charge of the district as Deputy Commissioner in 1874, Captain Grey, who had watched the progress of similar works in Bhawalpur, saw how much might be done with proper management to supply cheaply the wants of his own district. With the help of his young Assistant, Mr. Fanshawe, of Mr. Barns, the engineer who had already achieved so much for Bhawalpur, and of two native engineers brought over by Mr. Barns, he proceeded to carry out his self-appointed task.

Surveys were soon made and estimates of cost prepared. The latter were sent with full instructions to the Tahsildars, or native revenue-officers of the district. To each village the Tahsildars allotted its due share of the work to be undertaken. The first-class villages, which would benefit the most therefrom, were to supply twice as much labour as those of the second class, which would only get the surplus water. For every 100 cubic feet of excavation, the amount of a day's work, each villager was to receive his 2½ annas, and the same wage was offered to labourers from outside. The whole of the ground surveyed was marked out in separate allotments of 330 feet each, with a Patwári or village accountant placed as overseer over every three miles. The Lambardárs or village headmen had sticks given them to show the depth of the needful diggings. The villagers brought their own tools, and "there were to be seen every size and shape of mattock, every conceivable shift for a basket." They worked away merrily and with a will; one gang of 350 from Fattehgarh marching down to beat of drum and enlivening its labours with frequent strains of music. While the poorer villagers lent their labour, some of the leading natives advanced money, which has already been repaid.

Ten canals have thus been opened out in the course of a few months, three apiece in the Zira and Muktsar Tahsils, and the remaining four in the Firozpur Tahsil. The three in the first-named section make up a total length of 119½ miles, and those in the Muktsar Tahsil of 62⅔ miles. The length of one in the Firozpur Tahsil is not given; it seems to be about 17 miles; but the Barnswah, so-called after Mr. Barns, extends for 30½ miles from Sobraon on the Satlaj to Firozpur town, and the other two are 17½ and 22 miles long respectively.

These ten canals "now extend from one extremity of the district of Firozpur to the other, without a break, the tail of one overlapping the head of the next for 110 miles, and extending to 6 or 8 miles from the river." Their total length is said to be 257 miles, and the whole cost of their construction, including the value of the land, does not exceed a lakh and a half of rupees, or at the old rate of exchange about £15,000, to which the district fund contributed only Rs. 22,563, a sum that can easily be recouped in five years. By that time they will probably irrigate 300,000 acres of land; while, even if we put the value of the water thus supplied at the very low rate of one rupee an acre, they will have repaid the whole capital cost, besides leaving a margin of one lakh and a half for cost of maintenance and extension.

All this serves to show what valuable results may be attained under right management by cheap and simple means, without the costly interference of the Public Works Department. It justifies the arguments used by Captain Grey in his recent papers on Irrigation, and it brings out the good effects of enlisting local interest in works of local usefulness. "Never before," as Mr. Markham well puts it, "had the Government been drawn into such close relations with the villagers; and the people have learnt for themselves what great things may be accomplished by systematic and combined efforts." To Captain Grey, Mr. Barns, and all who worked under them, down to the humblest villager, belongs, each in his own degree, the credit of carrying out an enterprise which may in time convert the sands of the Satlaj valley into green fields. It is pleasant in this connection to notice the address presented, before the end of last year, by the Zamindars of Firozpur to the able engineer without whose guiding hand Captain Grey's scheme might long have waited for execution. After avowing their want of fit words to express their gratitude to Mr. Barns, the Zamindars say:—

We remember how anxious you felt for us when you visited our district before, and cannot forget how graciously you spent a full month of your most valuable time last year when you returned from England, and were on your way to Bahawalpur, and when you would naturally have preferred taking rest after so long a voyage, in going round the district for our sake, examining every nook and corner of it and forming best plans for the construction of canals in our Tahsils. Nor did your benevolent design stop there, but you continued from time to time to give suitable directions and issue proper instructions calculated to finish what you had begun and give us a selected painstaking surveyor to work for us. The result of which we see at this day, that there are canals opened for about 250 miles in length; a result which our unaided and undirected efforts could never have achieved, nay, one which we ourselves at first disbelieved to be possible to attain. These things had been in the contemplation of many officers here for the last twenty years, but had never been commenced, owing to various difficulties and impediments in the way of their achievement. But we thank God that through you now we have obtained the blessings we so anxiously desired and so dearly love.

We can make no return to you for all that you have done for us, except that it will be, as long as we live, our daily and earnest prayer to God to bless you with his own blessings, both in time and eternity. Amen.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The Bombay Gazette holds that all possible ground for dissatisfaction would have been removed if the Native Princes had been distinctly forbidden to make presents of very great value to the Prince of Wales, and if Mr. Disraeli could have restrained his brilliant imagination from revelling in the idea that, as Prime Minister of England, he would give India a new dynasty of Emperors, as powerful and magnificent as the East ever knew. It should have been considered that the Prince came merely to crown the edifice built long ago, and to see for himself the country of which the Queen assumed the direct Sovereignty eighteen years since. It was in this character of representative of their Queen that the natives of India welcomed him; and her Majesty and the English Government might well have remained satisfied with the success of their first experiment, instead of immediately making it the excuse for trying another. It is something of which England may well be proud, that the Heir to the Throne has travelled about India for four months, and not a hand has been lifted against him or a seditious word spoken in his hearing. No theory as to the prostrate condition of the people will explain this phenomenon; for everywhere his Royal Highness has gone freely about amongst the natives, and, wherever he has not been received with as much enthusiasm as it is in the nature of the people to show for any ruler, the crowds have at least been curious and good-natured, rather than malignant. If the discontent with British rule had been general and active, surely one man would have been found among so many millions to avenge their wrongs on the whole British nation. The perfect immunity of the Prince proves conclusively, in our opinion, the decay in India of the old sentiment of reverence for the dynasty of the Moguls, and the popular recognition of the supremacy of the British Government as an established fact which there is no gainsaying. The fearful struggle of 1857-58 did good in clearing the ground of relics of by-gone empires, and bringing the natives face to face with a knowledge of the actual political state of the country. There are, of course, still dangerous classes in India, who make use or are made use of by intriguing Native Princes, but the mass of the people now desire no other rule than that of the British Government. And, as regards almost all the Native Chiefs, the visit of the Prince of Wales has been distinctly and emphatically beneficial in reconciling them to the subordinate but yet important position which they must henceforth occupy in the Empire. Their sense of self-respect has been flattered by interviews with one who is himself a Prince and not a mere official' and his Royal Highness has completed the conquest of their hearts by the graceful cordiality of his address, and by the readiness with which he has acknowledged their claims to rank as Sovereign Princes. In the cases, more particularly of Scindia and Cashmere, we believe that the Prince has, by his friendly treatment of these Chiefs, made them much more devoted to the British Government and more willing to admit the paramount authority of the Queen over all India than they were a year ago. This impression, even if it be transient, was worth a journey to India to produce. So far, indeed, as the Prince himself is concerned, he has played his part to admiration. He is not responsible for the blunders of others; and he no doubt knows as well as any of his critics that there is no Royal road to good government, and that a Royal progress, however successful, cannot permanently improve the condition of a country which is not blest with sagacious rulers. But he has achieved the difficult feat of winning for himself genuine popularity in India and of making the personal rule of the Queen of England more of a reality to both princes and people than it was before. It is a satisfaction to know that, in accomplishing this political purpose, he has at the same time enjoyed himself in India beyond even his sanguine expectations; and that he is now in a better state of health than when he came out four months ago. The whole country is united in wishing him a pleasant passage home and a cordial welcome from the English people, whom during his visit to India he has served so well.

OUR EXCLUSION FROM THIBET.

The Friend of India argues that the case of Thibet is altogether peculiar. We have never on any previous occasion had to deal with a nation which acted as it is doing. Many oriental kingdoms have tried to decline or unduly to limit commercial relations with our fleets, but in them we appeared as strangers from the West, and might bow with some grace to a national policy. Moreover, a civilised, or half-civilised, Government has never declined to receive our friendly messages. The distinctive features of our position towards the grand Llama are, that our nominal boundary is within sight of his, that our political boundary which includes Sikkim marches with his, that his government and people are well disposed towards us, and wish to meet us half way, and yet that, under the dictation of the Chinese, we are so rigorously excluded that not only has no Englishman made his way to the capital during the present century, but our official letters, sent through the friendly mediation of the Ruler of Sikkim, have been returned unopened. We have already referred to the fact that when Sir Richard Temple made his tour along the frontier he was received at each pass, not with a friendly greeting and a hospitable invitation, but by the raising of a written notice that his entry into Thibet was prohibited. Now, is any one nation justified in imposing on another his absolute isolation? Or, to put it more directly, have we a just grievance against China in that she excludes us from commercial and political intercourse with Thibet?

THE FALL IN THE VALUE OF SILVER.

The Friend of India thinks it is a long time since so valuable and opportune a State paper was submitted to the public, as the volume which has lately been issued from the Financial Department of the Government of India, on the "Production of Gold and Silver, the Demand for Gold, and Price of Silver." This most valuable statistical essay is exactly what was wanted, and its preparation reflects very great credit on the Finance Department, and in particular upon its author, Mr. R. H. Hollingbery. We have been so accustomed to have masses of crude figures thrust upon us as statistics by the Government, that it is most refreshing to be at last presented with an essay, which bears upon its face, the marks of long and patient preparation, collation, and thoughtful study; and we thank the Government sincerely for so valuable and opportune a publication. It will now be possible for us, with a reasonable degree of certainty, to speculate upon the probable course of prices, instead of arguing in the dark upon the matter. Mr. Hollingbery's essay will be of very great value as a text-book for guiding the special inquiries of the Select Committee of the Commons, which Reuter tells us has been appointed. The effects of the stoppage of the Secretary of State's drawings upon the position of the Presidency Banks and the Indian Money Market will be very serious, if silver in considerable sums does not follow the step. The cash balances would, of course, accumulate under the stoppage, but it does not follow that the State deposits with the banks will be increased thereby, the Government showing a disposition to decrease its balances in the hands of all the banks. It may be doubted whether all the Exchange Banks realise the full gravity of the situation; and a continuance of the course upon which some of them have entered may send the rates of discount up very much higher than now. It has been pointed out to us, moreover, that about 6½ millions of the Five-and-a-Half per Cent. Loan maturing in 1879 are enfaced for London, and that if some arrangement is not made for converting at all events this amount of the Loan into a Sterling Stock, this large sum will be coming back upon us in the next three years, competing with the Secretary of State's drafts, as well as with silver. The whole position is so complicated, and full of such obvious danger, that too great caution in the operations of the Exchange Banks cannot, we believe, be shown. We are moving in the neighbourhood of a financial cyclone, and the most careful observations should be taken of our position.

DECORATIONS FOR THE DESERVING.

The Pioneer holds that if the divine right of Kings affords an all-sufficient answer to the public criticism of their acts, it is idle to refer to the feeling which some incidents of the late Investiture will awaken. That the Prince of Wales is privileged to honour whom he may, no loyal Englishman—and all Englishmen are loyal here—dreams of questioning. But, nevertheless, we are not without concern in the manner of his bestowing. It is not only that the Order of the Star of India was specially created to mark distinguished services in India, and on that very ground that the C.B. decoration is wont to be denied, but that the C. S. I. has been often and recently refused in the case of officers justly recommended for it, simply because the number of Companions permitted by the Statute was said to be already complete. Now, in view of this position of affairs, there is surely an air of improvidence about some of his Royal Highness's selections for the honour, when we have regard to the character and claims of those still left out in the cold. We disclaim the slightest intention of lightly disparaging the pretensions of any of the fortunate gentlemen referred to. Indeed, in some instances, we can offer them unqualified congratulation. As for Major Bradford, for example, but for some pedantic rule turning upon his youth at the time—as though the greater the youth the greater the desert, were not the only true rule—he would have worn his C.B. in the days of the Mutiny. Then, no one grudges more distinction to men already so distinguished as Generals Probyn and Sam Browne; or denies the fitness of the bestowal, apart from all precedents, in the case of the Viceroy's Private Secretary. But to decorate a surgeon in order, apparently, that to him who hath may be given—for eminent in his profession though Dr. Fayrer unquestionably is, his deserts have already been richly rewarded; or to mark the services of a commander who sails his ship across a mill-pond with tolerable success; or the officer who, for the moment, fills the post of polite letter-writer to the Prince, is quite another affair. We do not believe that the Prince of Wales would willingly dissipate our time-honoured beliefs, or do violence to our local prejudices. We think it probable that those who failed to warn him of the position of matters as regards the Order, neglected also to apprise him of the splendid, the stupendous services rendered to the State in the hour of its extreme need, which remain unrequited to this day. Has H.R.H ever even heard of Seth Gobind Das, of Muttra, of the man who, when the Mutiny broke out, sent the timely warning which saved Agra; who kept open our communications; sheltered Europeans at his deadly risk; ransomed our treasure with his own; maintained an army for us, and placed horses, servants and fortune at the disposal of the State? Does his Royal Highness know that Gobind Das was rewarded with a beggarly pittance and an inferior title; that even now he would gratefully come to receive from the Royal hand one of those honours lavished on the royal entourage? Again, nearer home, here at Allahabad, on the Bench, to which his merits of another kind have lifted him, is Mr. Robert Spankie, who, then the Magistrate of Saharunpore, saved a whole district in the Mutiny; a man perhaps careless to remember claims which the guardians of the nation's honour have forgotten. And such cases as we have cited are typical ones only. We cannot but think his Royal Highness has been allowed to lose a great opportunity. To have sought out and signalised the unrequited claims of '57 would have been a princely and most gracious task. As it is, Englishmen in India will retain their predilection for heroes of their own making; dividing their sympathy, for the moment, between those who are denied their Star of India decoration and those who wear it.

STATION TALK.

PESHAWAR, March 4.—In my letter of last week I informed you of the affair between our outpost at Fort Mackeson and the hillmen, on which occasion the Affreedis tried to cut off the grass-cutters' ponies belonging to the detachment. But the Duffadar, and the guard of the 8th B. C. with them, held the enemy in check until the arrival of a party of the Native Infantry and a few sowars, which caused them to retire to the hills. From the bullets that were picked up it is evident that the weapons in the possession of the Affreedi are mostly rifled, and one or two decided Enfield bullets, found after the engagement, afford proof of these gentlemen having at some time or other succeeded in stealing Enfields from our own men. Now, knowing that the tribes all along the frontier are for the most part thus well armed, why is it that our cavalry regiments here are still carrying that useless pop-gun—the smooth-bore carbine; surely it is full time to give them and all the Bengal Cavalry the breech-loader. But to return to the doings at Mackeson, I have to tell you that on Sunday last Captain Tytler, 8th B. C., at present commanding the Fort, received information from the police that the thannah at Eymud Chiboutra, at the mouth of the pass, was to be attacked that night, and finding that the police, some forty in number, felt decidedly uncomfortable at the thought of having to defend themselves with their wretched arms against upwards of a thousand Affreedis, he assisted them by a party of twenty men of the 27th N.I. and a few sowars; but the enemy did not carry out their intention, and the force assembled at Mackeson, including a party of forty sowars 8th B. C., who made the cavalry detachment there equal to one entire troop, was doubtless instrumental in preventing them from coming on to the plain. The Adam Kheyls, consisting of the Okar-wal-Gurgoon Kheyl, Dhurree Log, and others, will, I anticipate, obstinately hold out in their refusal to allow the road to be made. Already men of the Aurokzai and Zukka Kheyl and other neighbouring tribes have rendered the dwellers in the pass assistance, but having only brought with them five days' food, they listened to the advice of the high priest, and have, I believe, returned to their homes. What the action of our civil authorities will be in the event of their not being able to give them their own way about the road I cannot say, but there is not the slightest doubt that if the military have to be called on to bring these gentlemen to reason, a general rising of all the tribes, from one end of the frontier to the other, will be the immediate result. The pass men say that no money will tempt them to give in about the road, and that if they were to do so they would become the laughing stock of all the surrounding tribes, and would be nothing more than ryots of the Government. So, as matters now stand, if we insist on the road we must fight for it.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

ALWAR.—Not very long ago we were rejoicing over the tranquil state of Alwar. The brave old Lakdir Sing was dead, and the triumph of the Thanna party seemed complete. Not a trace could be detected of any political disturbance whatever; and yet, it seems from the recent attempt to upset the train in which he travelled, that Mangal Sing, the young Maharajah, has still his enemies. The investigation into this ingenious attempt at murder is, we believe, still going on; but for obvious reasons the inquiry is at present a strictly private one.—Pioneer.

TRAFFIC IN GRAIN.—Mr. G. F. Tavenor, Traffic Manager of the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, has recently visited Ferozpur, with a view to making arrangements to provide for the immense traffic in grain and seed which has commenced between that city and Karachi. We are informed that the demand for carriage is at present far in excess of the supply.

THE REVENUE.—From the official returns we see that the revenue of the Government of India, for the first seven months of the current financial year, was £28,532,773, and the expenditure £33,111,118. During the same period of last year the revenue amounted to £29,004,604, and the expenditure to £33,038,323, which shows a decrease in the revenue of £471,831, and an increase in the expenditure of £72,795.

THE CURRENCY PROBLEM.—The Calcutta Statesman understands that the Government of India has a very valuable paper in the press on the subject of the Currency and the Exchange question, and that it will be published immediately. The same paper says that it is rumoured that large shipments of silver are coming out on private account immediately, and adds, we forbear to name the amount we have heard rumoured, but we believe the operation is a fact.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal returned to Calcutta at daybreak on Sunday morning, the 12th March, after having visited the Singhbhoom and Manbhoom districts, and seen all the principal native chiefs and all the headmen among the Kols of the Kolhan, or country of the Kols proper. His Honour was much pleased, it is understood, at observing the contentment of these people as distinguished from the Kols of the Chota Nagpore country.

THE KARENNI BOUNDARY.—The settlement of the Karenni boundary question is still going on prosperously; and the King of Burmah is probably beginning to grasp the absurdity of struggling with the Government of this country. Some time may, no doubt, elapse before he lets the world know that he has repented past follies, and up to the present moment, we believe, he has expressed no curiosity to see Colonel Duncan in boots; but even this last sign of giving in must come in due course, and we need be in no hurry for it.—Pioneer.

THE LATE MR. W. CARPENTER.—The following appears in the Central Provinces Gazette of the 11th March:—"The Chief Commissioner deeply regrets to have to announce the death, on the evening of the 5th inst., from injuries the effects of an accident, of Mr. C. W. Carpenter, C.S., Officiating Commissioner, Nagpore Division. Whilst Government loses in him a very valuable public servant, the Chief Commissioner, in common with his numerous friends in the North-Western and in these Provinces, deplores the loss of one whose sweetness of disposition endeared him to all, and whose many sterling qualities gave promise of a brilliant future career."

SIR R. TEMPLE.—It seems to be generally understood that the Lieutenant-Governor is not likely to retain his appointment to the end of the term, and speculation is rife as to the name of his successor. According to the Pioneer's Calcutta correspondent, Mr. Clive Bayley's chances are, in official circles, spoken of as being about the best. Other names are also mentioned, and some of them are perhaps better known than that of Mr. Bayley, whose reputation must be acknowledged to be of rather an official than a public character. The hon. gentleman is well known to be conscientious and hard-working—a most useful Government servant—but his claims to the Lieutenant-Governorship are not of a nature to strike people generally as being the strongest that could possibly be put forward.

A NEW WAX INSECT.—A wax insect found in Chota Nagpur is believed to be the same as that observed in Madras by the late Dr. J. Anderson. Its occurrence in the Chota Nagpur District is an interesting discovery; and if collected in large quantities in the same manner as is done with stick-lac, the wax obtained from it would prove a useful and profitable article of commerce. The insect, of which the wax-covered female only is known at present, is named Ceroplaster ceriferus, and is allied to the Pela of the Chinese, who have long made use of it for commercial purposes, and propagate it in much the same manner as is done in certain parts of India and Burmah with the lac insect. The wax of the Pela is there a considerable article of trade.

THE AFRIDIS.—The Lahor paper has received encouraging news from the Peshawar frontier. The recusant tribes are at length beginning to come to their senses, and have sent word to the British authorities expressing their willingness to make good all the damage they have caused, and to allow the road which it was proposed to make from the top of the Kotal to the level portion of the road. "This of course is nearly all that the authorities required; but it is hardly likely that the tribes, after having defied us for some time, and having thrown down the glove, will be allowed to settle matters so easily, more especially as it would be decidedly infra dig to abate one jot or tittle from our original demands." The blockade which is now kept up has pressed sorely upon the Afridis, whose chief occupation is that of carriers. This is now stopped, and consequently their cattle and camels are eating their heads off, while their owners are beginning to find that inability to follow their occupations is not altogether profitable, and that submission is the best policy.

OPIUM CULTIVATION.—The Statistical Reporter tells us that a proposal for the utilisation of green manure, and especially of indigo refuse, in the cultivation of opium, has recently been considered by Government. It has been pointed out that green manures would be peculiarly applicable to districts like Tirhoot and Sarun, where, from want of firewood, the ryots are in the habit of using their cow-dung for fuel. It has been said that the indigo plants is the most suitable for green manuring, and that as green manure is the form best adapted for the opium soil of Sarun and Tirhoot, it would be advisable to encourage the cultivators, through the Opium Department, to grow indigo plant, "which, after it has passed through the steeping process, should be returned to the opium field, to strengthen the soil for the next year's crop."

THE NEW COINAGE.—The loyalty to the wishes of the British Government shown by the Maharajah Holkar in instantly falling in with Sir William Muir's project for minting native rupees has already been freely recognised. It is satisfactory none the less to discover that virtue in this case is not its own barren reward. We believe that the Maharajah gains, besides the proud consciousness of loyalty, something like four annas in the rupee on exchanging his own dumpy coins for ours. Then he is saved the expense of keeping up a mint, and receives Rs. 20,000 a-year as compensation for submitting to this advantage. There is yet another pull in favour of the Indore Treasury under the new arrangement. Taxes assessed under the old coinage will in future be paid in the new. It would in fact require a good accountant to sum up the substantial considerations which co-operate with loyalty in inducing the Maharajah to support the Financial Minister's measure.—Pioneer.

WEATHER AND CROPS.—The Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 2nd March, 1876, that rain fell during the week in Shikarpur, in Sind, in fair quantity in the south-eastern and lower Delta districts of Bengal and in Sylhet, to some extent in a few other districts of Central Bengal and Upper Assam, and in the north-western districts of the Punjab. None is reported from other parts of India; no change is announced from Madras or Mysor. In Bombay the rabi harvest continues. In the Central Provinces and Berar the harvest is also in progress and the expected outturn good. Reports from Central India and Rajpootana are favourable. In Bengal, except for the rain, which has been beneficial where it has fallen, no change is reported. In Upper Assam rain is much wanted. The rabi cuttings are commencing in the North-Western Provinces; prospects are generally good. The same is the case in Oudh. In the Punjab rain is much wanted in the southern districts; in the north-eastern districts prospects are good.

THE CASE OF AMIR KHAN.—The petition that Amir Khan might be liberated has been finally refused by the Viceroy. We find no difficulty in understanding this refusal, for the arguments against mercy are very powerful. After Amir Khan had been convicted before the Sessions Judge of Patna in 1871 of conspiracy against the Queen, an appeal in his favour was rejected by Sir Richard Couch; and Messrs. Louis Jackson and Macpherson concurred in the confirmation of the first sentence. Amir Khan was to suffer imprisonment for life, and now he has only been confined for six years. A petition has been presented for his release, urging that when he committed his crime he was a man of mature age, and holding a good position in society. Now, these certainly are no extenuating circumstances. Amir Khan was not a poor outcast, whose crime might to some extent be condoned, because of his wretchedness, but the criminal whom Lord Northbrook refuses to pardon by his wealth and position was able to lead others astray, and to be himself on that account all the more dangerous an enemy to the State. The Viceroy, too, would naturally hesitate before reversing a sentence that has already been confirmed so emphatically.

RAWUL PINDEE, March 8.—The riot case has ended. Twenty-three sepoys of the 21st P.N.I. have been convicted, fourteen of whom have been sentenced to various terms of imprisonment, ranging from one year to two months, and the remainder fined Rs. 10. Considering that two of the persons assaulted died from the injuries they sustained, the rioters have every reason to congratulate themselves upon the extreme leniency of the magistrate. Whether the military authorities will further notice the matter and discharge the sepoys concerned in the riot, which should certainly be done, remains to be seen. The members of the local police force justly expect shortly to be decorated with a special medal, which, with the view of combining durability with economy, will be made of leather! for the eminent services rendered by them during the riot, and it is furthermore hoped that a C. S. I.-ship may be found for the head of the police, who certainly deserves it. The Lahore vernacular newspaper is very severe in its strictures on the conduct of the Rawal Pindi police; but then, considering that there were only six constables on duty, and the remainder of the force busily engaged in their domestic pursuits, what else could be expected of the police but an ignominious retreat. They will do better next time, let us hope. The 1-8th Regiment marched in this morning en route to Peshawur. The regiment have had a very pleasant march of it up from Delhi. Lieut.-Colonel Buist, B.S.C., doing general duty here, retires on colonels' allowances, and will shortly leave for England.—Times of India Correspondent.

THE CATTLE FARM AT HISSAR.—From the 1st April next the Government Cattle Farm at Hissar, which is now under the Stud Commission, will be transferred to the Commissariat authorities. As the latter department has the most interest in the stock produced, the change seems only natural. This farm, being some way off the main lines of communication, has been visited by very few people, but to its apparent success everyone can testify who has seen the splendid bullocks used in all the Government carts and artillery wagons; and what is more to the point is that these magnificent animals are turned into the service at a cheaper price than they could be bought for at the different cattle fairs. Hissar has always been famed for its cattle, but the farm counts among its animals picked breeding stock from Mysore, Sind, Guzerat, Hurriana, and Nagore, all of which are equally noted for their bullocks. A certain number of sheep, too, are bred there, crosses between English rams of the Southdown, Leicester, and Cotswold breeds, and Bicaneer ewes. Every year two hundred bulls and a similar number of rams are picked for distribution gratis among the cattle and sheep-breeders throughout the Presidency. This liberality on the part of Government is not generally known. Any of our readers who may take to cattle or sheep-farming can always get good sires by applying to the Government farm at Hissar. The only drawback to the situation of the farm is that the rainfall is very small, and frequently there is a great dearth of fodder. To palliate this all that seems required is the reservation of some grass lands near the canal, or in some other place where the rainfall is greater, to which the young stock might be sent in bad years. Colonel Sibley, Deputy Commissary-General, and Colonel Fulton, Superintending Engineer, have, we believe, been to Hissar to try and arrange some plan for improved pasturage. The farm has been under the charge of Colonel Robinson, of the Bengal Cavalry, for the last twelve years, and he is to be congratulated on the way he has made it succeed.—Pioneer, March 11.

Madras.

THE GOVERNOR.—The date of the Duke of Buckingham's departure for the Neilgherries is not yet known. It is supposed that the Ladies Grenville will precede him by a fortnight or three weeks, and that his Grace will not leave till early in April. The pandals erected at Trichinopoly for the reception of the Prince of Wales are being kept up, in the hope that his Grace will pay the town a visit shortly.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—The Madras Mail says :—His Excellency Sir Neville Chamberlain, Commander-in-Chief of Madras, accompanied by his Military Secretary and an Aide-de-Camp, embarked on board the mail steamer Mirzapore for Calcutta, on Tuesday afternoon. His Excellency's departure may be assumed to be in connection with the question of the re-organisation of the Native Army, which is under the consideration of a Committee appointed by the Government of India, and which is now sitting in Calcutta.

MYSOR.—A large number of rayats from the Sirsa taluk, in Mysor, have found their way to Bangalor, and the object of their visit is to represent personally to the Chief Commissioner the deplorable state of affairs in the taluk, and the hardships they and their families were undergoing owing to the failure of the crops. Sirsa appears to have suffered severely from the want of rain, and it is the general impression that Mr. Dalyell will treat the applicants with the consideration they deserve.

THE WEATHER.—The Madras Mail says :—"No rain" is still the cry from all parts of the mofussil. Do our readers know what that means? Tanks dry, wells drying up fast, a parched and thirsty land, a suffering people and much cattle. Efforts for relief should be projected, but "mum" is the word. It is better to prophesy smooth things, because the other plan means money, of which Government stand in need, and after all rain may come. That is statesmanship, and our rulers hope on, hope ever, scorning to be taught.

THE BURMAH RAILWAY.—Mr. Molesworth, Consulting Engineer for State Railways to the Government of India, should have been in Calcutta by the 3rd of this month, but his return was put off to the 9th, and then indefinitely. He went from Madras to Burmah, where he is inspecting the railway. It is getting on slowly, for engineering in the jungle is difficult. The light-hearted Burmese, too, have a great predilection for idleness ; and if anybody happens to fall ill, all the others take this as a good excuse for running away from their work. The decision about a mountain railway up the Coonoor Ghat must, of course, await Mr. Molesworth's return.—Pioneer, March 11.

SIR SALAR JUNG.—Our (Deccan Times) city correspondent informs us :—It is reported in the city that his Excellency Sir Salar Jung will proceed to England in the beginning of April next, and will stay there for a period of about six months. His Excellency's visit will no doubt greatly tend to improve many of the customs of the city, and will also set a good example to other noblemen of Hyderabad, in acquiring a knowledge of foreign countries. Nawab Shahab Jung, the Miscellaneous Minister, it is rumoured, will leave Hyderabad in a day or two, for the purpose of ascertaining the progress the schools in his Highness the Nizam's Dominions have made. The Director of Public Instruction will, most probably, accompany him on his tour. On Wednesday last the body of a boy, aged fourteen years, was found in a city drain, known by the name of Nawab Shums-ool-Oomrah's Nullah. The corpse was taken to the police-court, and inquiries are now being made as to who the murderer could be. Cholera is still raging within the city. On the 23rd and 24th inst. the number of persons that fell victims to the epidemic was forty.

COTTON.—The quantity of cotton shipped from ports in Sind, in the Bombay Presidency, to foreign or external ports, during the month of January, 1876, amounted to 4,755 bales, weighing 1,853,712 lbs., or 2,896 candies and 272 lbs., of the value of Rs. 4,31,950 ; and for the month of February, 1876, amounted to 8,314 bales, weighing 32,51,024 lbs., or 5,079 candies and 464 lbs., of the value of Rs. 8,23,800.

BARODA.—Sir T. Madhava Rao has determined to establish dispensaries, and to give encouragement to the practice of vaccination in the Gaikwar's territory. The new Public Health Department is to be placed under the charge of a European officer.

A NATIVE SHOT BY A SOLDIER.—The Baroda correspondent of the Indian Statesman reports that "four men of H.M.'s 83rd Regiment, while out shooting at Wasud, on Friday, the 25th ultimo, shot a native dead. I have been informed that the native abused one of the men, and he in consequence shot him, after which he made good his way to this place, but the telegraph having proved swifter, he was apprehended when he arrived here by the civil power. The man is a prisoner, as well as his three companions, and no doubt they will be sent to Bombay for trial."

KHELAT.—We have received private advices from Khelat to the effect that his Highness the Khan had succeeded in forwarding reinforcements via the Mulla Pass to his troops in Kutchi. The troops of the Khan's standard, we further learn, on hearing of the arrival of the reinforcement at Emidoon, at once marched to Mittree and offered battle to the Sirdars, but the latter with their forces retired to the hills. The troops also left for Dadur. Everything is very quiet on the Frontier. A good downpour of rain fell when our correspondent wrote, and, in consequence, the prospects of the crops are excellent.—Sind News, March 9.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE PRINCE.—On Saturday last Mr. Anandrao Raghunath, a native artist of this city, had the honour of an interview with his Royal Highness the Prince on board the Serapis. He was introduced to his Royal Highness by the Right Hon. Sir Bartle Frere, after which Mr. Anandrao presented three beautiful oil paintings (size 2 ft. by 2½ ft.) executed by him. They were as follows :—1, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, in full military dress ; 2, her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales ; 3, a drawing of a Hindu lady. In addition to these, Mr. Anandrao presented Sir Bartle Frere with an oil painting of that honourable gentleman's portrait. In a letter written by Sir Bartle Frere under the direction of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, it was stated that his Royal Highness graciously accepted these gifts. —Times of India, March 20.

THE DEPUTY-SHERIFF.—We understand that the competition for the appointment of Deputy-Sheriff of Bombay, which will be vacant in a few days, in consequence of the retirement of the present incumbent, lies between Mr. A. F. Turner, of the firm of Messrs. Chalk and Turner, solicitors, and Mr. E. Vanderstratten, of Messrs. Hearn and Cleveland. The Chief Justice (Sir M. Westropp), we are informed, refuses to consent to the appointment of Mr. Turner, except on the condition that he at once ceases to practise as an attorney, and Sir Michael also declines to allow the new Deputy-Sheriff to receive fees of any kind whatever, as has been customary. These conditions are considered by the legal profession sufficient to debar any of the "learned community" from the appointment ; and we also understand that the Chief Justice has, in addition, imposed other still more stringent conditions affecting the profession to which he belongs.—Times of India.

THE SIND FRONTIER.—Latest advices from Las Bayla, received by the Sindian state that Sirdar Mohim Khan Ghurginari, the leader of the Ghurginari tribe, was attacked at Gidhar lately, by the troops of the Khan of Khelat ; the Sirdar with his family was compelled to fly the country ; Gidhar was looted and the Fort destroyed. The whereabouts of Mohim Khan cannot be ascertained, but it is supposed that he is somewhere about Haran. The next step by the Khan's troops was to proceed to Mir Lalla Sumaladu's country, in pursuit of Mohim Khan ; not finding him there they inquired for his son and his wife ; these not turning up the troops attacked Meer Lalla and killed him, taking seven of his women into captivity. The whole of Beluchistan is, from all accounts, in a blaze. People are anxiously awaiting the action of the British Government in reference to the ex-Jam. Should his release be much longer deferred, the consequences will be most disastrous ; the whole country will be up in arms, and the safety of the Khan would not be worth an hour's purchase.

A CURIOUS OVERSIGHT.—A very singular error has just been discovered in the annual official statement of the trade of British India. It appears that the coasting trade of Madras and Bombay, which amounts to about twenty million sterling, has for years past been omitted from the returns altogether. We quote the Government of India on the subject :—

The errors in question in the Madras accounts represented the entire omission from all published statements of the value of the coasting trade between British ports in that province, amounting in 1874-75 to no less a sum than £4,974,716. In Bombay the errors consisted of a similar omission, up to the year 1873-74, of the value of a trade which amounts in 1874-75 to £13,049,870, and of a discrepancy of over two millions sterling between the annual account of trade and navigation published in that Presidency, and the annual accounts (Part II.)-published by the Government of India, compiled from figures furnished monthly by the local authorities —the trade with Cutch, Kattywar, and foreign Konkan having been omitted from the local monthly returns. It does not appear that any blame is to be attributed to the officers who compiled the accounts in Madras and Bombay, the instructions given for the preparation of the forms prescribed by the Government of India in 1871 having been misunderstood. On the discovery of these errors a complete revision of the figures for the years and for the previous four years became necessary, and much delay ensued in the issue of the volume, which was in the press as long ago as October, 1875. The delay, however, has been more than compensated by the rectification of vital errors which had run through successive volumes of statistics published by the Government of India. It is believed that under the strict system of classification which has now been adopted, the recurrence of such mistakes is impossible. The review of the account is so full that further comment on the results of the trade of the year is unnecessary. The Governor-General in Council wishes it to be understood that the opinions expressed in the review are those of the compiler individually, and that his Excellency in Council is not prepared to endorse them. But whether the facts justify in every case the conclusions drawn from them or not, the facts themselves are clearly set out, and the details carefully arranged, and the paper is a useful résumé of the extent and direction of Indian trade in all important particulars for 1874-75, and for various periods preceding that year. Copies will therefore be circulated, with copies of this resolution, and of the accounts on which the review is based, for general information.

Did any Government, we wonder, ever before have to own to such a blunder as this? It is almost enough to destroy one's faith in Indian statistics for ever. And we seem to have no security that other official figures are not equally fallacious. "It is believed," calmly says the Governor-General, "that under the strict system of classification which has now been adopted the recurrence of such mistakes is impossible." "It is believed." By whom? Not, we fear, by any one outside the Secretariats.—Friend of India.

DEPARTMENT OF MILITARY PAY AND ACCOUNTS.

In G.G.O. No. 154 of 1869 the offices of Military Pay and Accounts in the three Presidencies were formed into one department in direct subordination to the Government of India—the Departmental officers being placed on one roster for promotion, and for employment wherever they might be required in the interests of the public service.

2. H.E. the Viceroy and Governor-general in Council has now resolved to reorganise the department in grades, and to make the staff salary personal, so that each officer will receive the salary of his grade wherever and however he may be employed.

3. As a general rule, promotions will be made with due regard to seniority, and the department will ordinarily be recruited by young officers in the grade of Assistant Military Accountants. But the Government of India reserves to itself the discretion, which it has always exercised, of making promotions on public grounds irrespective of seniority, and (when desirable) of admitting officers into the Department otherwise than in the lowest grade.

4. The Department of Military Accounts will accordingly be graded as follows, from April 1, 1876, but without injuriously affecting the substantive allowances of present incumbents:—

No. of each Grade and Class.	Salary.
1 Sub controller of Military Accounts	Rs. 2,500	Consolidated salary.
1 Controller of Military Accounts	2,250
1 Ditto ditto	2,250
3 Military Accountants, 1st class, 1st grade, each	1,000	Staff salary.
5 Military Accountants, 1st class, 2nd grade ...	800	,,
5 Military Accountants, 2nd class, 1st grade ...	600	,,
5 Military Accountants, 2nd class, 2nd grade ...	500	,,
4 Military Accountants, 3rd class	300
6 Assistant Military Accountants on Rs. 100 a month, and after passing the final examination Rs. 150, and when at a Presidency town Rs. 200 a month.

5. The 6th grade of Assistant Military Accountant being regarded as a reserve, no appointment will be made to it, in the place of officers who may be officiating in the higher grades.

6. The offices of payment, examination, and account in the Department of Military Accounts will, from time to time, be classified in a separate schedule. Whilst departmental promotion may carry with it higher grade pay without necessarily involving any change of duties, the more important posts will, as a rule, be held by officers in the higher classes.

7. The roster of officers, according to the organisation now sanctioned, will be as follows :—

Controllers.

VETERINARY SURGEONS.

The following general order, by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India, is made applicable to the Bombay command:—

Adjutant-General's Office, Simla, Dec. 30.—With the sanction of the Government, the following rules, providing for veterinary attendance on the chargers of officers, who, under the present regulations, are not entitled to the services of a veterinary surgeon, are issued for information and guidance:—

Veterinary surgeons will in future be required to afford medical treatment to the bonâ fide chargers of all officers of the staff of regiments of British infantry, of native cavalry and infantry, and of officers doing general duty, who may wish to avail themselves of their services.

Officers so employing veterinary surgeons will be required to pay Rs. 24 per horse per annum, or Rs. 2 per mensem for broken periods; three-fourths of the above sums being for attendance, and one-fourth for Government medicines.

When an officer or veterinary surgeon leaves a station, payment will be made to the date of departure, but, except in the case of removal, any officer availing himself of the services of a veterinary surgeon for however short a period must pay Rs. 18 for each horse attended, but this payment will of course entitle him to veterinary attendance for nine months.

Veterinary surgeons will submit with their usual indents for veterinary medicines, a certificate on honour of the sums received by them during the past half-year, with a certificate from the paymaster or officer commanding the battery, stating in what month's account the portion due to Government will be credited.

The amount received by veterinary surgeons for Government medicines will be paid by them to the paymaster of the regiment or commanding officer of the battery with which they are serving, to be credited to the State on the regimental or battery pay list, supported by a copy of the certificates mentioned in the previous paragraph.

Horses, unless unfit to move, must be sent for treatment to the infirmary of the regiment or battery to which the veterinary surgeon belongs, provided there is sufficient accommodation.

At stations where there are two or more veterinary surgeons, the officer commanding the station will detail one of those officers for the duty in question.

The issue of medicines to officers' chargers need not be shown separately in the veterinary surgeon's returns.

2. The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct that officers wishing to avail themselves of the services of a veterinary surgeon under the above order are to register their names at the Staff office of the station where they may be serving.

MILITARY FURLOUGHS.—The undermentioned officers obtained leave (in March) to Europe, on furlough and medical certificate, under the Regulations of 1858, unless otherwise specified:—Capt. H. S. COLONIAL OFFICE.—The appointment of Mr. Richard Cayley, to be Queen's Advocate for the Island of Ceylon, is gazetted.

THE PRINCE'S INDIAN PRESENTS.—A portion of the presents made to the Prince of Wales in India will, it is understood, be exhibited at the new Indian Museum, South Kensington, and the remainder in the Bethnal-green Museum.

SIR LOUIS MALLET, who, owing to his health giving way, left India, on his return home by medical advice. after staying at Naples and in Italy about three weeks, has arrived in Paris. Sir Louis's health is improved, but is not restored, and he is expected to spend the summer in France to recruit it.

THE SILVER COMMITTEE.—The Select Committee appointed by the House of Commons to consider the causes of the depreciation of silver resumed their investigation on April 6, Mr. Goschen in the chair. Mr. Pietsch, manager of the London branch of the Deutshland Bank, gave considerable evidence as to the scarcity and circulation of silver.

THE ROYAL TITLES PROCLAMATION.—The Royal proclamation, announcing the assumption by the Queen of the new title, will not be issued till after Parliament has reassembled. Before the proclamation is made Mr. Fawcett will bring forward a motion similar in scope to Lord Shaftesbury's, and for that purpose will endeavour to secure Thursday, April 27.

THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE PENSION vacant by the death of Inspector-General of Hospitals Sir David Dumbreck, K.C.B., M.D., has been awarded to Deputy Inspector-General J. Burke, on the half-pay list. Mr. Burke was employed with the 50th Regiment throughout the Sutlej campaign of 1845-46, served with the "Buffs" at the siege and assault of Sebastopol, and throughout the campaign of 1860 in China.

THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—A meeting, in opposition to the Royal Titles Bill, was held at the Cannon-street Hotel, under the presidency of Mr. Morley, M.P., on Wednesday. An amendment, declaring that the Queen's relation towards India was correctly described by the title of Empress, was lost, and the meeting passed a resolution deprecating an alteration of the ancient style of the Crown by such an addition. The meeting also protested against the haste with which the measure had been passed through Parliament. Petitions were ordered to be presented—to the House of Lords against the third reading of the Bill, and to the House of Commons in favour of Mr. Fawcett's motion.

FAILURE OF AN INDIAN OFFICER.—At the Bankruptcy Court, on April 5, an application was made to Mr. Registrar Murray, sitting as chief judge, to continue an injunction granted last week under a petition for liquidation presented by Christian Disundt Grant, described as of Gipsy-hill, late a colonel in her Majesty's Indian Army. The liabilities as at present stated amount to £11,000 odd. The assets consist of furniture £170, also cash at bankers and stocks and shares, the amount of which is unestimated. Last week Mr. J. Folland Lovering was appointed receiver of the estate, and an injunction was granted, staying proceedings instituted by the Credit Foncier of England, the National Bank of Scotland, and the London and Yorkshire Banking Company for a week. Upon the application of Mr. Sewell, his Honour continued the injunction until the further order of the Court.

ROYAL SCHOOL FOR DAUGHTERS IN THE ARMY.—The Duke of Cambridge presided on Monday at the annual meeting of the supporters of this school. Alluding to the difficulty of obtaining subscriptions, he mentioned that if the accommodation of the school at Bath were increased the additional establishment at Roehampton might be abandoned, and suggested that the committee should next year be prepared to recommend definite action in the matter. It appears by the report read by the Secretary that the institution in other respects appeared to be in an exceedingly good condition, and Miss Kingdon was now paying the greatest care to the education of the children. His Royal Highness, having alluded to the donation of 100 guineas from Lady Gomm, concluded by expressing a hope that the area of the annual subscriptions might be enlarged for the benefit of the institution.

EASTERN EXTENSION, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).—The half-yearly meeting was held on Wednesday, Mr. J. Pender, M.P., in the chair. The Chairman moved the adoption of the report. An interim dividend at the rate of 1¼ per cent. had already been declared, and another of a similar amount would be payable on the 13th inst. The dividend would absorb £49,963, leaving £40,268 to be carried to the reserve fund for part payment of a duplicate cable to Rangoon. The debenture debt had been decreased by £1,500 during the current half-year, and since the 1st of January it had been entirely liquidated. Mr. Alderman M'Arthur, M.P., seconded the motion. In reply to questions, the Chairman said that the board were awaiting the result of certain negotiations with the Indian Government before signing the contract for laying the Penang cable, and a dividend at the rate of 1¼ per cent. per annum was declared. The report was adopted.

THE CONGRESS OF ORIENTALISTS.—The third meeting of the International Congress of Orientalists will take place at St. Petersburg this year. The Congress, which will assemble on the 1st of September, intends to hold ten sittings, four of which will be taken up by a discussion on questions relating to Russia in Asia. Siberia will be the subject of the first; Central Asia, including the independent principalities, of the second; the Caucasus, together with the Crimea and the other European districts inhabited by Asiatic peoples, of the third; Transcaucasia (Georgia and Armenia) of the fourth. At the three following sittings the Congress will discuss matters referring to other parts of Asia, divided into three groups:—First, Eastern Turkestan, Thibet, Mongolia, Corea, China, and Japan; second, India, Afghanistan, Persia, and the Indan Archipelago; third, Turkey, including Egypt and Arabia. The subjects treated of in these seven sittings will be confined to the geography, history, ethnography, and literature of the respective countries.

A GUARDSMAN'S TOUR IN KHIVA.—Captain Burnaby has returned to do duty with his regiment, the Royal Horse Guards, after an interesting tour in Central Asia, where he has been visiting the Khan of Khiva. His visit is the more remarkable as we believe that, with the exception of Captains Abbott and Shakespeare, who were sent to Khiva from India on a diplomatic mission to the grandfather of the present Khan, no Englishman has ever before been within the walls of the city. An engineer officer was sent last summer with a scientific expedition to Central Asia. He surveyed part of the Oxus, from the Sea of Aral to a part on a line with Petro Alexandrovsk, the Russian fort in Khivan territory, but was never permitted by the Russians to go within fifty miles of the capital. Captain Burnaby, it is said, would have been equally prevented, if, by changing his route at the last moment, he had not misled the Russians, and was thus four days in Khiva, and had been admitted to two private audiences with the Khan before the Russians were aware of his presence in the city. They then sent him a despatch from our military authorities at home, who, under the influence of strong diplomatic influence brought to bear by Count Schouvaloff, were induced to order Captain Burnaby's immediate return. The Russians have the greatest objection to any Englishman travelling in the territory that lies between themselves and India. This is not to be wondered at, as the Russian object is to paint the Turkoman in the blackest colours, in order afterwards to have an excuse for the annexation of Merv.—Army and Navy Gazette.

CAOUTCHOUC.—At the ordinary meeting of the members of the Society of Arts on Wednesday evening, Admiral Ommanney in the chair, Mr. Markham gave a description of the cultivation of caoutchouc-yielding trees in British India. The first instance of the conversion of the caoutchouc-yielding tree from a wild to a cultivated state occurred seventeen years ago. On the 5th of April, 1859, he submitted a scheme for the collection of plants and seeds of the various species of the febrifuge chinchona plants in South America and their introduction into India. At that time chinchona plants were uncultivated. Now, there were extensive chinchona plantations yielding larger percentages of febrifuge alkaloids than the trees ever did in their wild state, and extending over the Neilgherry Hills, the lower slopes of the Sikkim Himalaya, and the higher ridges of Ceylon. From these plantations, [some belonging to Government, others to private companies, about 140,000 lb. of bark was annually imported into this country, and the yield was rapidly increasing. The permanent supply of an indispensable medicine had been secured, and it had been brought within the reach of millions who formerly could never procure it. Thousands of lives would by this means be saved, and the material wealth of India and Ceylon would be increased by the addition of a valuable product to their list of exports. In 1870 Mr. Markham came to the conclusion that it was necessary to do for the india-rubber or caoutchouc-yielding trees what had already been done with such happy results for the chinchona trees. While the trees yielding quinine and the febrifuge alkaloids only grew wild on the slopes of the Andes, and all belonged to one genus, the caoutchouc-yielding trees were of several genera, and were found in the forests of India, the Eastern Archipelago, Africa, Madagascar, Mexico and Nicaragua, as well as in South America. Owing, however, to the enormous demand for caoutchouc, the most reckless fellings were now going on in all the tropical forests which yielded this valuable product, and the time had now come when plantations must be formed of caoutchouc-yielding trees in order to prevent their eventual destruction, and to provide for a permanent supply. It was well known that caoutchouc was now used for an infinite number of purposes. The imports into England in 1874 from South America were 70,866 cwt.; India, 9,341; Borneo, 7,101; Africa, 6,380; and Madagascar, 5,984. After giving a lengthy explanation as to the cultivation of these trees, Mr. Markham, in conclusion, remarked that so far as British India was concerned, the necessary measures had now been adopted with a view to secure a permanent supply of the best caoutchouc.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, April 3. — THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Lord SHAFTESBURY moved a resolution praying that the Queen may be graciously pleased to assume a title more in accordance than the title of "Empress" with the history of the nation, and with the loyalty and feelings of her Majesty's most faithful subjects. He said he proposed the resolution with regret, because he was unwilling to seem to place himself in opposition to the Crown, adorned as it now was by so many virtues; but he was convinced that the title of "Empress" attached to that of "Queen" was calculated in some respect to make the latter title ridiculous. As it had been said that the opposition to the measure proceeded from factious motives, he thought it right that some one holding a position of independence as regards Party should come forward, and he maintained that the great mass of the people of England repudiated the word "Empress," while it would not, in his opinion, be acceptable in India. The zeal and hospitality shown on the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales to India were shown to the son of the Queen and not to the son of an Empress, and he felt convinced that if the people of this country were polled, there would be found an overwhelming majority against the assumption of the proposed title. He did not deny that the natives of India would willingly concur in a title which brought them more in connection with the British Crown, but it must be a title of assimilation and not of distinction.—The LORD CHANCELLOR said it appeared to him that the issue which had been raised was very much narrowed, for there was now no controversy as to the propriety of the assumption of a title in addition to the present Royal titles, the only question being whether the new title should be "Queen" or "Empress," and he contended that the title of "Empress" was more suited to the character of her Majesty's rule over India, as a great part of India was governed, not directly, but indirectly, by the Queen. With respect to the sentiments of the people of this country, he had always understood that their opinions were to be gathered from their representatives in the House of Commons, and, therefore, he must regard Lord Shaftesbury's proposal as rather unjustifiable. The Bill before the House of Lords implied that an addition should be made to the Royal titles, and in that respect followed in substance the measure passed in reference to the union with Ireland. It was also the intention of the Government that the Proclamation to be issued under the Bill should be strictly and literally in accordance with the engagements given in the House of Commons, and should declare that the proposed addition to the Royal style and titles should be confined to India, and that in all writs, commissions, charters, and patents intended to operate in the United Kingdom, the Royal style should continue as at present. When the present measure went out to India, it would bear to the people of that country the assurance that their destinies were indissolubly united with the British Empire.—Lord SELBORNE remarked that the Lord Chancellor, among all the arguments he used in favour of the Bill, had not ventured on repeating the statement that the assumption of the title of "Empress" would check the progress of the Russians in the East, and Lord Selborne proceeded to say that he was at a loss to understand why the Sovereign should not retain, has she hitherto had done, the title of "Queen" in reference to India. He feared there might be some danger and no possible good in departing from the guarded and careful manner in which public documents had hitherto been drawn up in India, where it was not under the title of "Empress" that the Queen had become endeared to the people. In that country foreign Powers, such as France and Portugal, held possessions, and it was not to be assumed that the Queen of England could be Empress over those Powers. It was said that the Government intended to localise the title of "Empress," and that of itself was a proof that the Government knew the title of "Empress" to be unpopular in this country, and he objected on principle to any style or title being given to her Majesty which could not be universally applied.—The Bill was supported by Lord MIDLETON and Lord FEVERSHAM, and opposed by Lord SANDHURST, who declared that the proposed title could not be used with any propriety in reference to the potentates of India.—Lord ROSEBERY expressed his surprise that this measure of change should have proceeded from a Conservative Government.—Lord HARROWBY said that when the proposal was first suggested no objection was then taken to it, and he thought the title of "Empress" fittingly expressed the relation of the Crown towards India.—Lord CARNARVON stated that the course which had been pursued on this question put it out of the power of the Government to decline going to a division. It had been repeatedly stated that the title would be used not only in India, but would also be employed in England—an assertion which had been showed to be unfounded by the Lord Chancellor. The title of "Empress" would be evidence in India of the rule and powers of England.—Lord HOUGHTON pointed out that India was won by a body of persons under the modest title of an English Company, and he asked why the title of the Queen, who had ruled India since the Government was transferred to the British Crown, should now be changed. He believed the word "Empress" to be alien to the spirit of the British nation.—After an explanation from Lord LAWRENCE, the House divided, and Lord Shaftesbury's motion was negatived by 137 to 91.—In reply to Lord GRANVILLE and Lord SELBOURNE, who expressed a doubt whether her Majesty could by Proclamation limit the use of the new title to any particular locality, the LORD CHANCELLOR said he thought that her Majesty would be able legally to do so. He would, however, consider the point, and, in the meantime, he thought it desirable that the Bill should pass through Committee as it stood.—The Bill accordingly passed through Committee without amendment.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, April 3.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Mr. DISRAELI stated, in reply to Sir W. HARCOURT, that on the Royal Titles Bill becoming law the Imperial title would be used in the transaction of all affairs connected with the Indian Empire and all communications with foreign Governments; in other words, it would be used externally, and not in relation to the internal affairs of the country. As to the issue of writs of summons to Peers of Parliament, for the election of members of the House of Commons, the summoning, dissolution, or prorogation of Parliament, and other "details," these would be provided for in the proclamation.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, April 4.—THE EAST AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE.—Sir J. KENNAWAY called attention to the great development of the traffic in slaves by land within the dominions of the Seyyid of Zanzibar since the conclusion of the Treaty of 1873, as also to the want of systematic provisions for the slaves liberated by her Majesty's cruisers, and moved a resolution calling on the Government to invite and assist the Seyyid to take such further steps as may be necessary for the total suppression of the slave trade within his dominions.—Sir R. ANSTRUTHER and Mr. M. STEWART supported the motion.—Mr. BOURKE, on behalf of the Government, admitted that the more the condition of the interior of Africa became known the more necessary it was to return to the traditional slave trade policy of the country, and if we were strong-minded and resolute he did not doubt that we should put down the slave trade on the East Coast of Africa as we had already done on the West Coast. The demand for labour along the coast made the task very difficult, but we had made great progress, and among other proofs of this he mentioned the Treaty of 1875, and the recent prohibition of the slave trade in certain portions of his dominions by the Seyyid of Zanzibar. As to the slave trade by the land routes, he looked to the opening up of the interior by missionary efforts and the like, and circumstances had recently come before him to warrant indulgence in sanguine expectations on this point. The Government are considering whether it would be wise to establish a consulate and station at Mombaza.—Mr. FORSTER acknowledged the difficulties of the subject, and expressed himself satisfied that the Government was doing all in its power to put a stop to the slave trade.—Sir G. CAMPBELL, Mr. DAVIES, and Captain PRICE having spoken, the motion was agreed to.

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, April 6.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Earl GRANVILLE inquired what the intention of the Government was in relation to localising the title of Empress.—The LORD CHANCELLOR: In consequence of the statement made the other night, her Majesty's Government have given the most careful consideration to the suggestion that an amendment should be introduced into the Royal Titles Bill, conining the use of the new title to India. Such an amendment is not necessary in our judjment to be proposed to the Royal Titles Bill. After considering that question with the greatest care, the Government feel sure there will be no difficulty whatever in giving effect to the intention stated of excepting all commissions, writs, and similar documents operative in this country from the list of documents in which the new title should be set forth. Therefore it is not the intention of the Government to propose any amendment.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, April 6.—THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.—Mr. HARDY, in answer to Colonel JERVIS, said that, having made inquiry, he was informed that there was no trace at the War-office of a letter from Lord Napier of Magdala, dated Feb. 1, 1875, enclosing memorials from Colonel Stubbs, Major Stevenson, and R. Sadleir, R.A., and therefore the return of the War-office, dated June 25, 1875, was correct in its statement "that no memorials or letters addressed to the Commander-in-Chief in India by the officers of the Royal Artillery, complaining of the mode in which the warrant of July 5, 1872, has been carried out by the Government of India, have been forwarded to the War-office." With reference to a letter of Lord Napier of Magdala, dated Simla, August 8, 1875, that he had received many other memorials, but had not forwarded them, because he was awaiting a reply to his letter of Feb. 1, no answer had yet been given to that letter or any one of the officers concerned.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FRIDAY, April 7.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—On the third reading of the Royal Titles Bill, some discussion arose in consequence of a question asked by Lord GRANVILLE as to the power of the Crown to limit the use of the new title by proclamation.—Lord SELBORNE believed that down to the Union with Ireland, Parliament had not laid down any law as to the style of the Crown, but at that period the style and title were defined by Act of Parliament, and he maintained that when the present Bill passed and should be followed by a Royal

Proclamation the full style and titles must be used.—The LORD CHANCELLOR said it was the intention of the Government that no change in the style and titles of the Sovereign should be made in official documents operating in this country, and he contended that it was perfectly possible by Proclamation under the Bill to carry out that intention.—Lord HATHERLEY felt by no means satisfied that all doubt on the matter had been cleared away by the statement of the Lord Chancellor, and it was desirable that, when the Bill passed, it should pass in a perfect state. The insertion of half-a-dozen words would remove all difficulty.—Lord DENMAN trusted that Parliament would give the Queen credit for choosing a befitting title.—The Bill was then read a third time and passed.

THE COUNCIL OF INDIA.—The Marquis of SALISBURY, with reference to a discussion which was held a few nights ago, observed that towards the close of that discussion the noble earl (Earl Granville) suggested that the substance of the confidential telegram to the Governor-General of India might be laid on the table. He could not on the moment reply to that suggestion, but having looked into the matter, he thought he might produce the substance of the telegram. At the same time, he must express his regret that persons of such influence as the ex-Secretaries of State for India, Viscount Halifax and the Duke of Argyll had taken a course which left him no alternative but to produce the substance of a confidential telegram. Of course, if he refused to produce it after the discussion of the other night it would be said that there was something which he wished to keep back. On the other hand, in producing it he was reluctantly establishing a precedent in favour of the production of confidential documents.—The Duke of ARGYLL could again assure the noble marquis that neither he himself nor his noble friend (Viscount Halifax) had any wish to embarrass him. They had been under the impression that the despatch in question was only directed against the policy of Lord Northbrook. From what he had heard since, he believed that in the papers produced by the noble marquis Parliament had the substance of the despatch. However, if his noble friend thought well to produce more of it in a fresh paper, of course he had nothing to say against his doing so.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, April 7.—THE INDIAN BUDGET.—Mr. FORSYTH asked the Under Secretary of State for India how soon after the Easter Recess it was likely that he would make his financial statement with reference to the revenues of India.—Lord G. HAMILTON, who was nearly inaudible, was understood to say that so long as the Indian financial year ended on the 31st of March, as the whole details of the accounts had to be considered by the Secretary of State in Council, it would not be possible under the present system to introduce the Indian Budget before the first week in June.

OFFICERS' RETIREMENT COMMISSION.—In answer to Mr. COOPE, Mr. HARDY said the Royal Commission on the Retirement of Officers in the Army had not yet concluded some complicated calculations, and he was unable to say when the report would be in the hands of members.

RUSSIA IN CENTRAL ASIA.—Mr. BAILLIE-COCHRANE postponed his notice respecting the Russian occupation of the Khanate of Khokand from Friday, the 28th of April, to Friday, the 5th of May.

THE EX-GAIKWAR.—The Madras Times says:—It having been ascertained that the ex-Gaikwar of Baroda, who leads the life of a recluse in Doveton Hall, Nungumbakum, finds his time hanging heavily upon him, some of the local medical authorities kindly went to his rescue, and devised means for amusing the "leaden paced" hours of that deposed chief. An apothecary, equipped with a suitable apparatus, waits upon Malharao twice a week, and, to the bewilderment of the ex-Baroda chief and family, conducts experiments in chemistry. The apothecary in question receives a small remuneration for his performances, but whether Malharao receives thereby more instruction than amusement is a moot question.

LITERARY.—The very laborious work on which Dr. A. C. Burnell, of the Madras Civil Service, has been engaged for the last five years, in drawing up a catalogue of the Taujor Palace Library, is nearly completed, we are told. The catalogue will be published in England, and contains a list of the books and manuscripts systematically arranged, with an account of the authorship, antiquity and contents of each. Nearly half of the MSS. are on cadjan leaves, and are as difficult to decipher as to understand. The library at Tanjor is about the largest in Southern India, and contains a vast collection of manuscripts; and the Maharajah Sivaji, who could both read and write English fairly, bestowed much care upon it. Many of the most valuable cadjan manuscripts are much injured, and transcribers have been employed to make copies of them. The library, known in the vernacular (Tamil) as the Saraswati mâlei, is in a large hall in the palace, and is under the care of a native librarian, who has the assistance of Sanscrit pandits in classifying and arranging the works. It might be well perhaps for the Royal Asiatic Society to undertake the restoration of the decaying MSS., for the value of such ancient documents cannot be rightly estimated.

CHART OF INDIA.

BY

ARTHUR ALLEN DURTNALL, of the High Court of Chancery.

Price, fully Tinted, mounted on Roller, or in Case, 20s. Size, about 40 in. by 50 in.

Showing, at one view, all the principal nations, governments, and empires which have existed in that country from the earliest times to the suppression of the Great Mutiny, A.D. 1858; with the date of each historical event according to the various eras used in India. By this Chart, any person, however ignorant of the subject, may, by an hour's attention, obtain a clear view of the broad lines of Indian History, and of the evolutions which have resulted in the dominion of her Majesty as EMPRESS OF INDIA. It will be found invaluable for EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES, especially in Colleges and Schools, where an Indian career is in contemplation. It will also be found of permanent utility in all Libraries and Offices as a work of ready reference for the connection of events and dates. Besides the History of India, it includes the contemporaneous histories of Afghanistan, Central Asia, and Europe.

A RELIEVO MAP OF INDIA.

BY HENRY F. BRION.

In Frame, 21s.

"A map of this kind brings before us such a picture of the surface of a given country as no ordinary map could ever do. To the mind's eye of the average Englishman, India consists of 'the plains' and 'the hills,' chiefly of the former, the hills being limited to the Himalayas and the Nilgiris. The new map will at least enable him to correct his notions of Indian geography. It combines the usual features of a good plain map of the country on a scale of 150 miles to the inch, with a faithful representation of all the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus bringing out into clear relief the comparative heights and outlines of all the hill-ranges, and showing broad tracts of uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a very practised eye. The plains of Upper India are reduced to their true proportions; the Central Provinces, Malwa, and Western Bengal reveal their actual ruggedness at a glance; and Southern India, from the Vindhyas to Cape Comorin, proclaims its real height above the sea-level. To the historical as well as the geographical student such a map is an obvious and important aid in tracing the course of past campaigns, in realising the conditions under which successive races carried their arms or settlements through the Peninsula, and in comprehending the difference of race, climate, and physical surroundings which make up our Indian Empire. Set in a neat frame of maplewood, the map seems to attract the eye like a prettily-coloured picture, and its price, a guinea, should place it within the reach of all who care to combine the useful with the ornamental."—Home News.

COCKLE'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS.

SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

A GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST, with a prudent use, has saved many a life; and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound, such as

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers. Others might be used, but as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel sprizg, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer,

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, March 27; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, March 25; Calcutta, March 24.

A TELEGRAM from Karáchi to the Times of India asserts that the Upper Sind frontier district has been annexed to the Derajat division of the Punjab. Major Sandeman, escorted by a detachment of troops from Jacobabad and the Punjab, proceeded towards the Bolan Pass to concert with the Chiefs of that country measures for the safe passage of caravans through the Pass. We are also assured that the report of Sir William Merewether's intended journey homewards is incorrect.

ACCORDING to the Bombay Gazette the real meaning of the last political move on the Sind frontier is that the Government of India had resolved to give Major Sandeman's pacific policy a last trial, and, if that failed, to interfere by force of arms in the affairs of Beluchistan. Major Sandeman's first mission to Khelat, says the Gazette, "effected nothing. The Khan and the Chiefs watched with some curiosity the new symptoms of political activity suddenly displayed by the British Government; and no ill-feeling was shown to the British Envoy personally. But the feuds between Prince and nobles were not composed, and, whether or not the shooting down of the Sirdar Nurudin the day after Major Sandeman left Khelat was a justifiable act of precaution on the part of the Khan to save himself from assassination, it is obvious that this deed of violence showed how slight an impression had been made by Major Sandeman's overtures of conciliation. Since the Envoy's return to the Punjab the whole border of Beluchistan has been ablaze; and Lord Northbrook seems to have been at last convinced that nothing short of an abandonment of his policy of inaction will avail to put an end to the anarchy reigning beyond the frontier." The same journal believes that an attempt will be made to maintain the Khan upon his throne, without letting him play the tyrant over his Sirdars. The Pioneer on the other hand speaks of a widespread rumour that the Indian Government "meditate something like a coup de main in Khelat on behalf of the Khan; that our political officers, aided by the presence of a sufficient and respectable force, have been charged to assist the Khan in re-asserting his sway over his refractory Chiefs, and to so strengthen his position as to enable him mainly himself to restore that peace and order within his territories which have been the object of Major Sandeman's recent negotiations." If this be the case, the disastrous result of a recent fight between the Khan and the Brahoï Chiefs may force Government to show its hand at once.

OUR latest difference with the Kohát Afridis appears to have arisen from a praiseworthy attempt of the local Government to turn the energies of those wild Pathans to some useful purpose. The Kohat Pass, which the Afridis have hitherto kept open for us on payment of a yearly black-mail, lately fell into disrepair. There was some talk of mending it, and fair payment was offered the Afridis if they would undertake the work themselves. This they would have done, it seems, had not certain fanatical mollahs gone about among the tribes saying that the English only wanted to annex the country, and turn the tribesmen into Government rayats. When they waxed insolent, our authorities took the most effective way of bringing them to their senses. "If you would rather not have us use the pass," they said, "your pay shall be stopped, and all trade between you and us shall be stopped likewise." Travellers from Peshawar to Kohat had to go round by way of Attok, and the Afridis were cut off from all communication with British territory. This quiet but powerful pressure soon began to tell. We learn from a Lahor paper that Colonel Sir F. Pollock, Commissioner of Peshawar, was about to leave for Kohat, that he might effect a settlement with the recusant tribes. It is also reported that a metalled road may yet be laid down through the Pass. The conditions for that end are not more unfavourable in Khelat than in the Peshawar district; and the commercial, let alone the military, advantages of such a road are undoubted.

SPECULATION was busy in India about Sir Salar Jung's trip to England. The Indian Government are supposed to dislike the step, partly because the weight of the minister's presence cannot be withdrawn without some risk to public order; partly, also, to save Sir Salar from a bootless errand. It is no secret—says the Pioneer—that "Sir Salar meditates bringing the claim for the restitution of Berar before Parliament, and that he has secured advocates in both Houses. But Sir Salar will find the occasional sympathy evoked by the ingeniously-timed publication of the letters between Mr. Saunders and himself a broken reed, and that nowhere out of the Serapis, if even there any longer, do people muddle up the minor matter of that correspondence and the great political question at issue, between which there is not the faintest connection."

MR. P. THWAITES, Principal of the Húgli College, died at Calcutta on March 21. Only a few days before the Indian Daily News was expressing the regret of the students in the College at the coming departure of their Principal, who, owing to failing health, was going on leave.

AN old officer of some note in his day has also died. Lieutenant-General Colin Troup, C.B., whose death occurred on the 19th March, had retired from active service, and was permitted to reside at Meerut. The late General served against the Bhils in 1827, and throughout the Afghan campaigns from 1839 to

1842. He was present at the storm and capture of Ghazni, and was taken prisoner during the retreat from Kabul in January, 1842. During the Satlaj campaign, he led the 48th Regiment at the battle of Aliwal, for which he was promoted to Brevet-Major. He entered the Army in 1820, became a Captain in 1835, Major 1846, Lieutenant-Colonel in 1853, and Lieutenant-General in 1872.

GENERAL DONALD STEWART is gazetted to the Divisional Staff.—Sir Neville Chamberlain, the Madras Commander-in-Chief, reached Calcutta on the 18th March, and was staying with Lord Napier.—Lieutenant-Colonel Buist, of the Bengal Staff corps, doing general duty at Rawal Pindi, will shortly retire on Colonel's Allowances.—Major H. Mallock officiates as Deputy Director-General of Telegraphs, in addition to his own duties as Director of Construction.

THE cup and watch which Lord Napier gives annually among the prizes he so generously distributes to the troops has been won this year by the Royal Scots. A sergeant of the 10th Hussars wins his Excellency's sword.

WE note that the lucrative post of Purchaser of Remounts for the Royal Artillery, rendered vacant by the promotion of Colonel Price, C.B., R.A., to Major-General, has been given to Colonel C. H. Henry, C.B., Royal Artillery, Aide-de-Camp to the Commander-in-Chief.

THE construction of the Sindiah State Railway having at length been entrusted to Messrs. Glover and Co., they seem to have lost no time in entering on the most important part of their work, the erection of the bridge over the river Chambal. This river will be crossed by fourteen openings of 200 feet each, the girders being 115 feet over summer water level; each pier founded on two large wells twenty-six feet in diameter, sunk to a depth of fifty feet below the bed of the river. In connection with the pitching and completion of the first curb, an interesting ceremony occurred on the 4th March. The Maharana of Dholpur and the Political Agent, in company with Mr. H. D. LaTouche, Executive Engineer in charge, and his Assistants, together with the friends of Major Dennehy and family, went down to the bridge of boats, thence embarked on two large barges, and paddled down stream to the site of the railway bridge. On arriving there the Maharana led the party, now including Mr. Glover, to a large tent pitched conveniently for viewing the ceremony. The Maharana, having been presented with a silver hammer by Mr. Glover, was led forward, and clenched the last rivet of the first curb of this bridge. A religious ceremony then took place, at the close of which the Maharana laid the first stone of the well-steining, declaring, after the usual taps with a mallet, that it was well and truly laid.

THE Friend of India has the following sensible remarks on the difficulty of trying in these days to restrict that freedom of the press in India which Sir Charles Metcalfe finally proclaimed nearly forty years ago. The official mind is proverbially touchy, but as the Lord Chief Justice once remarked, public men have no business to be thin-skinned. Even if the native papers sometimes utter foolish things against the Government, it is really too late to enter on retrograde measures of repression. "Let them rave," but keep an eye upon them.

The vernacular papers afford a sort of safety-valve for the harmless escape of the noxious and inflammable gases that are naturally generated in certain strata of native society. That these fluids are exceedingly annoying in the purer atmosphere into which they find their way is true enough, but they have not as yet led to any real danger, and we can hardly suspect that they ever will. But if kept down half-smothered and struggling in their native regions, seeking a vent which they can no longer find, the danger of a catastrophe may become very real indeed. If they cannot ascend and so get dissipated in a region where their evil properties are futile, they must spread laterally till they gather power to burst upward with the destructive force of an explosion. The danger thus hinted at as a probable effect of repressive press legislation may perhaps be imaginary, but seems to be at least as real as the dangers arising from the foolish grumbling and weak malignity of many native prints. Certainly the greatest caution is needed in any attempt to fetter their present freedom. It is one of the effects of our English rule and the English education we have provided, and if it be true, as it undoubtedly is, that an enemy has sown tares somewhat profusely among our wheat, it may still be well to let both grow together for a little longer, lest in destroying the tares we do serious injury to the healthy crop. And the evil plant can not be destroyed in the way that is apparently proposed. By pruning its upper branches, we shall make it, as we have indicated by another figure, spread or laterally, and gain in strength as it loses in height. It may or may not have been a mistake to concede full liberty to the press; it is a privilege, which, once conceded, can never without serious risk be withdrawn.

THE following is the full text of the Prince of Wales's letter to Lord Northbrook, as published in the Gazette of India for March 17:—

H.M.S. Serapis, Bombay, March 13, 1876.

My dear Lord Northbrook,—I cannot leave India without expressing to you, as the Queen's representative of this vast Empire, the sincere pleasure and the deep interest with which I have visited this great and wonderful country.

As you are aware, it has been my hope and intention for some years past to see India, with a view to become more intimately acquainted with the Queen's subjects in this distant part of her Empire, and to examine for myself those objects of interest which have always had so great an attraction for travellers.

I may candidly say that my expectations have been more than realised by what I have witnessed, so that I return to my native country most deeply impressed with all I have seen and heard. The information I have gained will, I am confident, be of the greatest value to me, and will form a useful foundation for much that I hope hereafter to acquire.

The reception I have met with from the Princes and Chiefs, and from the native population at large, is most gratifying to me; as the evidence of loyalty thus manifested shows an attachment to the Queen and to the Throne which I trust will be made every year more and more lasting. It is my earnest hope that the many millions of the Queen's Indian subjects may daily become more convinced of the advantages of British rule, and that they may realise more fully that the Sovereign and the Government of England have the interests and well-being of India very sincerely at heart.

I have had frequent opportunities of seeing native troops of all branches of the service, and I cannot withhold my opinion that they constitute an army of which we may feel justly proud. The "march past" at Delhi of so many distinguished officers and of such highly-disciplined troops was a most impressive sight, and one which I shall not easily forget.

I wish also to state my high appreciation of the Civil Service; and I feel assured that the manner in which their arduous duties are performed tends greatly to the prosperity and the contentment of all classes of the community.

I cannot conclude without thanking you, and all those in authority, for the facilities which have enabled me to traverse so rapidly so large an extent of country; and rest assured I shall ever retain a grateful memory of the hospitality tendered by yourself and by others who have so kindly received me.

Believe me, my dear Lord Northbrook, yours very sincerely,

ALBERT EDWARD.

WE regret to learn by telegram that there have been serious agrarian outbreaks in the Bastar district of Madras. It is reported that 30,000 rayats had assembled. Troops have been sent from Vizagapatam, and will doubtless speedily restore order. In the North-West Provinces, too, discontent has appeared among the Rayats. Last Sunday week several thousands assembled before the Government house at Allahabad to complain of an increase in the Land-tax. They seem however to have dispersed quietly after stating their grievances.

ACCORDING to latest telegraphic advices, Major Sandeman started for Khelat on Tuesday, April 4, with an escort of 1,000 men, which will protect the trading caravans through the Bolan Pass. He will probably remain at Khelat till the caravans return in the autumn, but he may possibly advance to Kandahar. It is reported that the Government contemplates the early annexation of Sind to the Punjab, an arrangement long since suggested and greatly to be desired. The Beluchi Chiefs have presented a memorial asking for the release of the Jam of Las Baila, deported by Government some time ago. Last September the Amir of Kabul sent troops to coerce the feudatory Mir of Maimana, suspected of coquetting with the Russians. Nothing was heard of the progress of the expedition till the other day, when news was received that the Maimana forces were completely routed, and the Mir reduced to submission after a reported loss of 3,000 men.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram from Calcutta a public meeting was held on April 8 in honour of Lord Northbrook. Sir R. Temple was the chairman, but the attendance was not large, consisting chiefly of natives. The marked absence of non-official Europeans was noticed. The Rajah Ramanath Thakur proposed, and the Chief Justice seconded, the first resolution, that the meeting desired to record its high sense of the eminent public services of Lord Northbrook, especially as regarded the financial, commercial, and police departments, the reduction of taxation, and the famine relief. A small party, supposed to represent the Indian League, attempted to move an amendment, but the meeting refused to listen to it, and the resolution was carried. It was further resolved to erect a statue and to prepare an address. A committee was appointed to collect subscriptions. Among the speakers were Sir R. Temple, Mr. Bullen Smith, Mr. Inglis, the Maharajah of Benares, the Maharajah of Vizianagram, Rajah Jotendra Thakur, and Keshab Chandra Sen. Lord Northbrook was to leave to day (the 15th) for England.

FROM the same source we learn that Lord Lytton arrived at Bombay on Friday last, and was received by Lord Napier, Sir F. Haines, who had arrived the day before, Sir C. Staveley, Sir Salar Jung, and the principal officials. He landed under salutes from the vessels in port and the forts, and left Bombay on Monday for Calcutta. Lord Napier started for Bombay last week, and if the Orontes was ready in time, would take his passage in her; otherwise he comes home by passenger steamer. Notwithstanding the pressure put on him by the Indian Government, Sir Salar Jung sails for Europe this week. It is said that the main object of his visit is to procure the cession of Berars. If so, we trust he will not succeed.

LORD LYTTON arrived in Calcutta at 6.30 P.M. on April 12. Upon reaching Howrah he was received by several high Government officials, by whom he was escorted in procession to the Government-house. The way was lined with British and Native troops. There were large crowds of spectators, and the Viceroy met with a warm reception. On reaching Government-house his Excellency was received by the Lieutenant-Governor and the civil and military officers, while Lord Northbrook met him at the top of the grand staircase and conducted him to the Throne Room. He then proceeded to the Council Chamber, where he took the oaths of office. After the ceremony Lord Lytton made a speech, saying that he had now become, by the Sovereign's favour, the inheritor of a great duty bequeathed by great men, whose talents and even lives had been exacted by the unsparing nature of the duties of the office. He had not shrunk, and would not shrink, from the great task before him, relying on the support of his colleagues, the sympathy of his countrymen, and the confidence of his Sovereign. The recent development of events both in Asia and Europe, and the increasing proximity of the Eastern and Western worlds, while rendering more difficult the complete duties of the Government of India, added to their importance and grandeur. Lord Lytton then alluded to the recent discussion in Parliament respecting the relative position of the Home and Indian Governments, and said he would always welcome the timely constitutional co-operation of the Home Government as a guarantee for the freedom of their discussion and the dignity of their authority. He spoke generally of the confidence reposed in him by Lord Salisbury and the Ministry, and said he would equally rely upon the sympathy and support of his own colleagues. He would endeavour to keep a strict watch over the economical management and continuous progress of the Government, while providing with unbending firmness for the safety and repose of the Empire. It was his fervent prayer that a Power higher than any earthly Government would bless their counsels, directing them to the honour of the country, the authority of the Sovereign, the wellbeing of the millions committed to their care, and the security of the chiefs and princes of India in their just rights and heritable possessions, and enable him to reach his term of office and merit the esteem and regard with which Lord Northbrook had left.

LORD NAPIER, late Commander-in-Chief in India, left Bombay on the 10th current for England. Altogether Lord Napier's Indian service ranges over nearly half a century, and includes every great campaign outside Europe, from that on the Satlaj to the Abyssinian war.

AT a meeting held in Calcutta on Tuesday, April 11, Lord Northbrook took the chair, and resolutions were passed urging the public to assist in the creation of a bishopric at Lahor, in memory of the late Bishop Milman.

LORD NORTHBROOK embarked this morning in the steamer Tenasserim from Calcutta on his return to England. He was saluted with viceregal honours.

WE learn by telegram that Sir Salar Jung, Prime Minister of the Nizam of Hyderabad, sailed from Bombay, on Saturday last, on board the Italian steamer Asta, for Naples. He was accompanied by a retinue of sixty persons.

A SINGAPORE telegram states that Mr. Davidson is gazetted Acting Queen's Commissioner of Perak, and Mr. Paul Assistant-Commissioner.

IT is reported at Singapore that fresh disturbances have broken out in Malacca. The Governor, Sir W. F. Jervois, and fifty men of the 80th Regiment have started thither.

THE presentation of colours to the 98th Regiment by the Prince of Wales took place at Malta on Friday, April 7. The regiment did good service in China and the Punjab, but it bears no distinctive appellation, though it was known as the Prince of Wales's Tipperary Regiment when it was first raised. The march past of 4,000 of the garrison, including Artillery, British and Maltese, the 42nd Highlanders, 71st, 74th, and 101st Regiments, showed that discipline and drill are well attended to. The Prince lunched with the 98th Regiment, and attended a very brilliant and crowded ball at the Malta Union Club in the evening, after a State dinner at the Palace.

ON Saturday, the 8th, the practice from the batteries at floating octagon targets sixteen feet long, at 1,200, 1,500, and 2,000 yards, from 11-inch guns, 110lb. breech-loading Armstrong guns, 80lb. and 64lb. Palliser's converted guns, began soon after noon. The Prince drove to St. Elmo, and took up a position on the concrete roof of the magazine below the lighthouse, attended by the Governor and Lady Van Straubenzee. The shot practice was "only fair." The time-fuse shell practice was good. The Maltese Artillery came out well. Windows were smashed by the 11-inch guns all over St. Elmo. Fears had been expressed that the lighthouse might come down. The works, however, stood better than was expected, though the concrete roof shook at every discharge. The general fault of the shot practice was that the shots were short. The Prince then leaving St. Elmo drove to Lascaris platform, overlooking the great harbour, to witness a general fire opened from all the works with blank cartridge, to resist attempts of an enemy, represented by two gunboats, one from east and the other from west, to force an entrance to the grand harbour. The parapets were lined with infantry. Every sea-face battery opened—says the Times correspondent—"at very ridiculous distances," on the two gunboats, and continued blazing away till the ammunition was exhausted. It was very pretty, but rather useless, except in so far as it revealed the power of defence in unexpected places. Everything was soon hid in smoke, and the noise was tremendous, while the gunboats were miles away. When all was over they steamed near in, firing, and claimed the capture of the place. The Prince lunched at Sir Victor and Lady Houlton's, and after a dinner at the Palace went to the Opera, where there was a creditable performance of La Muette de Portici.

ON Sunday the Prince, after Divine service, drove with the Governor and party to Vedalla, a country seat, to lunch. He dined with the 71st Regiment at Ricasoli.

ON Monday, the 10th, his Royal Highness witnessed some torpedo experiments at Sleima Creek, which were not quite so successful as had been anticipated. Only two of the torpedoes exploded, the first one with a shock like an earthquake, partially destroying the raft against which it was driven, while the second, although less violent, was of great effect. At two o'clock, after a visit to the Orphan Asylum, the Prince inspected the Naval Hospital, afterwards lunching with Admiral Drummond on board the Hercules, and witnessing the regatta held in his honour. In the evening the Prince gave a State dinner on board the Serapis, followed by a display of fireworks on the deck of that vessel.

AT a quarter-past eight on Tuesday morning, under salute from the forts and the ships in harbour, which manned their yards, the Serapis steamed out of Valetta Harbour signalling adieux, and followed by the Osborne and the Raleigh. She was expected at Gibraltar to-day, proceeding thence to Lisbon.

THE Serapis, with the Prince of Wales on board, accompanied by the Osborne and Raleigh, arrived at Gibraltar at eight o'clock this morning, and was received with salutes from the forts and from her Majesty's ships Devastation and Swiftsure, and the Spanish frigate Vitoria. The Prince was to land at noon, and be entertained by the Governor at a banquet of ninety covers to-night.

WE observe that a new loan has already been announced for India to the amount of £4,000,000, bearing interest at 4 per cent. Tenders will be received at the India-office on Friday, the 28th inst. The stock to be issued will not be redeemable until the 10th of October, 1888, but on and after that date it may be redeemed at par on one year's notice being given. Tenders will not be received for amounts less than £500, and a deposit of £5 per cent. on the amount applied for must accompany the tenders. It was intimated in the Budget Statement of Sir William Muir, as published on the 31st ult., that loans to the amount of £2,700,000 would have to be raised in England during the current financial year. As no powers have been obtained from Parliament for new loans beyond the limit previously fixed, it may be presumed that the present loan is merely the unissued balance of sums already authorised.

THE City Article in yesterday's Times states that "the Indian Government are doing their best, whether wisely or not remains to be seen, to cure the evil which has made their Council bills unsaleable at what has been understood to be the prescribed minimum of 1s. 9d. per rupee. The increased tightness of the Calcutta Money Market has led to a further advance in the Bank of Bengal rate of discount, and, as a consequence of that, the rate of exchange has risen to 1s. 9¼d."

A TELEGRAM from Calcutta, which appeared in the Times of Thursday, announced that the Bank of Bengal had again raised its rate of discount, making the terms for bills having more than thirty days to run 13½ per cent. Whereupon the writer of the article complains that "At a time when there is little or no speculative business doing, and the export trade of the country is more depressed than it has been for many years past, we see great tightness in the Money Market and the Presidency banks putting up their rates to an unusually high point. As we have before explained, this unsatisfactory state of things is attributed to the continued gradual withdrawal of the Government balances, with the object of influencing the exchanges."

THE recent death of Captain F. J. Sidebottom Venner, late of the Bengal Army, demands a passing notice at our hands. The deceased officer entered the 62nd Bengal Infantry in 1843, and obtained his company in 1857. Retiring from the service a few years afterwards, he employed his leisure in writing for the Press, and in attending the meetings of the Geographical Society, of which he became a member. His chief contribution to this journal was a series of humourous letters signed by Faiz Ali Khan, which aimed, not unsuccessfully, at expressing the ideas of a native Indian Mussulman about things and persons in this country, in that kind of foreign English which an average Bengali might be expected to use.

MR. JULAND DANVERS, the Government Director of Indian Railway Companies, has returned from India and resumed the duties of his office. He has just been absent five months, and during that time has travelled over all the railways in India, from Tuticorin, the terminus of the South Indian Railway opened by the Prince of Wales in December last, to Jhilam, the most northerly point to which the Punjab State Railway has been taken. We are not aware of Mr. Danvers's impressions on the condition and prospects of the railways in India. These we shall probably learn from his annual report, which will, we presume, appear in the course of the year. We would only surmise, from what has reached us through Indian sources, that he is persuaded by personal observation that the railway system of India might be most advantageously extended, and that the management of the existing lines is conducted with an earnest desire to increase traffic and revenue, but that a more liberal scale of charges and a more comprehensive view of the peculiar requirements of the country would have a very salutary effect on the future prosperity of these undertakings.

MISSIONS TO TIBET.

IN rescuing from oblivion the record of Bogle's Mission to Tibet, undertaken just a century ago, Mr. Clements Markham has done good service not only to the interests of geographical research, but to the memory of perhaps the greatest Englishman who ever ruled our Indian Empire.* It enhances the many claims of Warren Hastings on our admiration to find that, in 1774, in the first years of his rule, he despatched one of his ablest young officers, George Bogle of the Bengal Revenue Board, on the first mission ever undertaken by an Englishman into Tibet. With a statesman's eye to the advantages of unrestricted trade between Bengal and the neighbouring countries, Hastings sought out the best man he knew for the purpose of establishing friendly intercourse with the Teshu Lama of Tibet. The immediate results of Bogle's mission were all that could be desired. It was something to have been the first Englishman who ever crossed the Tsanpu—which has since been identified with the Brahmapútra—in its upper course. Still more remarkable, if less encouraging, is the fact that Bogle remains the only European who has ever enjoyed familiar intercourse with any of the Grand Lamas of a country still so little known, even to its Indian neighbours, as Tibet. The Teshu Lama received Bogle in the friendliest manner, and, from the date of the Envoy's return home in 1775, Hastings took care that the new relations thus opened should not be closed through his fault. He corresponded frequently with his new friend in Tibet, and kept up a regular intercourse with the rulers of Bhutan, while trade between India and Tibet was further promoted by the yearly fair at Rangpur, established after Bogle's return, and kept up till 1832, when an economical Commissioner ordered its discontinuance. During the next few years Dr. Hamilton, Bogle's old companion, was twice sent on a mission to the Deb Rajah of Bhutan, who was never so friendly as the Teshu Lama.

It was not till 1779 that Warren Hastings found leisure from more engrossing duties and ever-thickening troubles to think of repeating the mission to Tibet. His friend the Teshu Lama had already secured the good-will of the Chinese Emperor towards the English; and it was arranged that Bogle should meet the Lama at Peking, and if possible return with him to Tibet. But the death of both these persons within six months of each other deranged for the moment Hastings's plans. In 1783, however, a fit successor to Bogle was found in Captain Turner, of the Company's army, who afterwards distinguished himself at the first siege of Seringapatam. The Regent who governed for the infant Lama received Turner's mission with all due friendliness. But the retirement of Hastings in 1784 was followed by embroilments between Tibet and the aggressive Gurkhas of Nipál, and Hastings's successors let things drift until erelong the passes into Tibet were strictly closed against our countrymen; a state of things which has continued with very small amendment to the present day.

The story of Turner's mission was published in 1800; but through a series of strange mishaps Bogle's journals and reports were never given to the world until, with immense pains and after some fruitless searches, Mr. Markham succeeded in rummaging out the precious MSS. from the boxes where they had so long lain entombed. These papers, as now printed, are full of interest and instruction in many ways. Bogle was fortunate in his opportunities of seeing life and manners in Tibet, and he used those opportunities well. It is evident from all he says that the Teshu Lama was anxious to cultivate a friendship with the English which would have "tended to increase his influence," and that he used his best endeavours to bring the Emperor of China round to his own views. Had he lived a little longer, and Hastings's successors followed in Hastings's steps, the intercourse which India's present rulers are seeking to reopen might have been long since established on a sure footing.

The latter part of the volume contains the narrative of a journey to Lhasa made by Mr. Thomas Manning in 1811-12. Mr. Manning was the only Englishman who has ever made his way to the capital of the Dalai Lama, and gazed on that sacred personage himself. Having seen much of the Chinese in their own country and mastered their language, he set out from Calcutta with little if any help from Lord Minto, and made his way in the guise of a medical practitioner to the capital of Tibet. There he stayed for several months, had more than one interview with the Dalai Lama, and when orders from Peking forbade his longer stay, he returned safely to Calcutta in 1812. His journal, though consisting merely of hasty jottings, gives some interesting and many amusing details, told with characteristic humour and racy frankness.

But there is a good deal more in the book than these two journals. In an introduction of a hundred pages, Mr. Markham has brought together from all available sources a mass of condensed and accurate information about Tibet, Bhutan, Sikhim, and Nepal, which gives the book its chief value as a work of reference. It is a masterpiece of careful research into all matters bearing on the geography, history, politics, and social life of the countries above-named. The results of European visits to Tibet, from Friar Odoric in the fourteenth century to Manning in the nineteenth, are concisely described, as well as the various journeys of English travellers or envoys to Bhutan. Mr. Brian Hodgson's labours in connection with Nepal, and the researches of Drs. Campbell and Hooker and Mr. Blanford in Sikhim, are duly recorded. The story of our relations with Bhutan to the present moment is followed by an account of the explorations hitherto carried out by Colonel Montgomerie's "Pandits" in Tibet. Then comes an interesting biographical sketch of Bogle and one of Manning. An appendix contains the travels of three Romish priests, who visited Tibet in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries; and the volume is further enriched with maps old and new, and with ten well-chosen illustrations, including an excellent likeness of the great Indian Governor, who had no warmer admirer or more zealous servant than Bogle himself.

* Narratives of the Mission of George Bogle to Tibet, and of the Journey of Thomas Manning to Lhasa. Edited by Clements Markham, C.B., F.R.S. Trubner and Co. 1876.

LAKE VICTORIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Nature, by the geographical situation in which she has placed Bactria, seems to have destined it to be the great emporium for the wares of South-Eastern Asia; and, in proportion as we penetrate into early history, we become convinced that Bactria, like Babylon, must have been one of the earliest seats of international commerce, and consequently, if not the birthplace, one of the cradles of infant civilisation.—Page 22 of Heeren's "Manual of Ancient History."

SIR,—On the 1st and 15th of July, 1872, your readers were informed of the rapid progress of the Russians towards India. In October of the same year the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs addressed a celebrated Despatch to the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg for communication to the Russian Government.

Early last month the Russian official Gazette published an Imperial ordinance, decreeing that the Khanate of Khokan be incorporated in the Empire, and that it be formed into a Province under the ancient name of Ferghana.

The question that now arises is, What are the boundaries of the province of Ferghana?

Between the 36th and 40th degrees of north latitude and the 71st and 75th degrees of east longitude lies the high table-land which is supposed by many to have been the cradle of the human race, and which from time immemorial has been called the Roof of the world. Through this land flow from east to west the two great tributaries of the river Oxus, the Northern called the Murchabi or Bartang, and the Southern the Panjah; they meet at Kila Wamar, and the united river descends from the plateau a few miles south-east of Kolab at a pass called Durwaz, or the Gate.

The question is, To whom does the great plateau belong?

Lord Granville stipulated that the southern undefined part of this plateau, called Wakhan, was to continue to belong to the Affghan dynasty, while from the latest maps it appears that Shignan and Roshan belong to Bokhara, a State subject to Russia; while on the east the district of Sarikol has been held since 1869 by the Mohammedan Ameer of Yarkund by right of conquest. The capital of Sarikol is Tash Kurghan, in lat. 37 deg. 42 min., and long. 75 deg. 20 min.; it is 10,250 feet above the sea, and was famous in ancient times as the capital of the nomad hordes of Northern Asia (Turan), whilst Balkh, the mother of cities, 1,200 feet above the sea, was the capital of the civilised world (Iran).

I believe that it will be admitted by all that up to the present time neither England, nor Russia, neither the Affghans nor the Yarkundees have attempted to define the boundaries between Wakhan Shignan and Sarikol on the Roof of the world.

But another difficulty now presents itself. Hordes of nomads have hitherto been accustomed to pass the winter within the territories belonging to the Khanate of Khokan (i.e., Russian Province of Ferghana), but have migrated in the summer to the magnificent grazing lands of Shignan and Wakhan. Are they henceforth to be considered the subjects of Russia, or of Kabul, or of both? Are not these rude shepherds likely to cause disputes between the two Governments?

Again, the Indian Government has made strenuous and expensive efforts to encourage trade between the Punjab (Kashmir) and the country of Yarkund; it despatched, in 1873, an embassy headed by Sir Douglas Forsyth, who successfully negotiated a commercial treaty with the Ameer. It has been found by experience that the routes by the Changchenmo Pass (19,100 feet above the sea), and by the Karakoram Pass (18,317 feet above the sea), are not suitable for trade; and native merchants, therefore, who have been unsuccessful in obtaining material assistance from the British Government, find it more convenient to carry their goods to Zebuk, or Zeibuk (lat. 36 deg., 32 min., long. 71 deg., 25 min.), an entrepot of trade one march south-west of Ishkashim, which is, on the Panjab, the southern tributary of the Oxus. From Zebuk I understand English goods are smuggled into the Bokhara districts of Kolab and Kabadian, and conveyed through Wakkan to Yarkund.

The Russians discourage free trade, and will punish with severity infractions of their customs laws; they will soon be in a position to check smuggling into any of the provinces north of the Oxus, and we must be prepared to hear of their interrupting our trade between India and the Yarkund country. They can easily check that trade by giving a hint to the Ferghana nomads, who pass their summers on the pasture lands surrounding Victoria Lake (13,900 feet above the sea), or on those of the little Pamir.

Whatever may be the value of the private trade between India and the Yarkund country there can be no doubt that as soon as the Russians can prevent the Ameer (the Atalik Ghazi) from drawing supplies of rifles and ammunition from India, a decisive step will have been taken towards reducing to subjection to Russia the ruler of Eastern Turkestan, that rich country called in ancient times Bucharia Minor, which has been successively inhabited by the Getœ, the Sakœ and the Vighurs.—Your obedient servant, T.

Zebuk is nearly halfway between Balkh, the former capital of Iran, and Tashkurghan the capital of Turan; four marches to the north of it are the Ruby mines, which in our maps are included in the Affghan territory, but the proprietary right to which is likely to be disputed by Russia.

Three marches to the south-west of Zebuk are the lapis lazuli mines; about fifty miles north of the entrepot is Darmarakht on the right bank of the Punjab—Darmarakht is admitted to be in Shignan (Russian).

THE DANGER OF GOVERNING INDIA FROM DOWNING-STREET.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—So much diversity has marked the opinions entertained regarding the principles on which India should be governed that the recent debate in the House of Lords, when two important points connected with the administration of that country were incontrovertibly established, must have been hailed with satisfaction by all who feel an interest in the safety and welfare of our great dependency.

Those two points were—first, that India, according to the unanimous opinion of Statesmen of all parties, ought to be governed in Indian interests, and, as much as possible, in India; and—secondly, that Lord Salisbury's proposal to abolish the import duty on Manchester goods involves a sacrifice of Indian interests.

As long, however, as the responsibility to Parliament rests on the Secretary of State, it is difficult to see how he can reasonably be prevented from exercising his own discretion as to the share in the government of India which he will keep in his own hands, and that which he will allot to the Governor-General in Council. The first of the above two propositions must therefore resolve itself into a mere piece of advice, tendered to the Secretary of State; and India, until the above difficulty, created by our Parliamentary form of Government, can be solved, must be left to be dealt with by that officer as he may think fit, subject, in theory, to his responsibility to Parliament; but, through the indifference of Parliament to Indian affairs, virtually armed with irresponsible power.

In the time of the East India Company the Government of India was restrained from abusing its power by the necessity of conciliating the millions over whom it ruled, without a standing army capable of enforcing unpopular demands, and by the obligation of the company to render periodically a satisfactory account of its administration, in order to obtain a renewal of its charter. These wholesome restraints were swept away in 1858, and the administration of India has since then been subjected to no periodical review or complete investigation whatever. Parliament, engrossed by home politics and party strifes, pays no attention to Indian questions, and legislative measures affecting the most vital interests of our great dependency are passed without debate and almost without inquiry. On the other hand, the necessity of conciliating the people of India or of securing their co-operation in our administrative measures has ceased to be imperative, as we now maintain a European force in India, which is capable of putting down all resistance and manifestations of popular discontent.

To the Executive charged with the Government of India, such a condition of things may appear favourable; but the thoughtful will discover in it the existence of much danger and the germ of great evil. Already it has led to extravagance, to relaxed watchfulness in the Public Works and other departments, to unsound speculations that have turned out as ruinous as those of the Khedive of Egypt, to disregard of public feeling and private rights, to illegal and oppressive action of the Executive in its dealings with the people, and, lastly, to experimental Government; one of the most dangerous experiments undertaken being that of governing India direct from this country, whereby the power, influence, zeal, and responsibility of the local Government have been considerably weakened. The danger involved in such an experiment will be manifest, when it is considered that the Secretary of State, who, in addition to his legitimate functions (viz., those formerly exercised by the East India Directors and the Board of Control) now assumes important duties of the Governor-General in Council, is personally unacquainted with the country and the people that he governs, and possesses but very imperfect means of appreciating the effects of the measures he adopts. Lord Salisbury, when addressing the Manchester Chamber of Commerce last year, admitted that he had laboured for eight years under the erroneous impression that any amount of expenditure upon irrigation works in India was justifiable and wise. If so great an error could have subsisted so long, in respect of financial undertakings, the results of which are generally ascertainable with almost mathematical precision, what must be the case with political and administrative measures, among a people who possess no constitutional means of making their wants and feelings known, and who are proverbially cautious and guarded in the expression of their views upon the actions of their rulers? Misery and disaffection may germinate and ripen before a Secretary of State, who had unconsciously sown the seed of those evils, even suspected their presence.

Of the many dangers to which India is exposed by the practice of having the details of her administration referred home for settlement, the risk of her interests being sacrificed to those of the Imperial Government, or of the Cabinet of the day, is, perhaps, not the least. It is difficult for a Cabinet, and dangerous to its very existence, to resist the pressure brought to bear by any powerful section of Parliament, be the demand ever so injurious to India. The Indian tariff question, which is believed to be the immediate cause of Lord Northbrook's resignation, may be taken as a case in point. Would any ruler, who had the interests of India at heart, have entertained, in her present circumstances, the proposal of abolishing the import duty on Manchester goods, when such a step must necessitate new taxation with its many and serious concomitant evils, and injure a nascent industry the development of which promises to confer the greatest benefits on the country?

This brings us to the second point elicited in the Lords' debate, when Vicount Halifax read the following passage in Mr. Laing's letter to a society in Manchester, established to promote the repeal of the duty in question; that letter being as applicable to the present case as it was to the circumstances under which it was written some twelve years ago:—

> The import duty is scarcely felt at all, while the direct taxes involved an inevitable amount of oppression, extortion, evasion, alarm, and discontent, which made them intensely unpopular. If India is to be retained in peaceful and loyal allegiance to the British Crown, these matters must be looked upon in an Indian as well as an English point of view, and the interests, the wishes, and the feelings of 150 millions of inhabitants must be the primary consideration in deciding how to raise the necessary revenue. I believe the Indian Government and the whole Indian community would oppose it, and I cannot for a moment imagine that any Secretary of State would think of sending an order to India for a purely English object, overruling in such a manner the unanimous wish of India. If he did he would deserve to be impeached, for it is perfectly evident that he would be a far more formidable enemy to the British Crown than Ferozshah or Nana Sahib.

Thus it will be seen what the exercise of uncontrolled power has effected in the administration of India; how a proposal that, twelve years ago, was looked upon with horror and condemned as deserving of impeachment, is now boldly put forward by a Secretary of State, regardless alike of the injury it is calculated to inflict on the country intrusted to his care, and of his own responsibility to a Parliament whose power, as affecting India, he has long been taught to consider as merely nominal.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Kashmir and Kashghar. A Narrative of the Journey of the Embassy to Kashghar in 1873-74. By H. W. BELLEW, C.S.I., Surgeon-Major, &c. London: Trübner and Co. 1875.

When the Indian Government was invited by the ruler of Kashghar in 1873 to enter into friendly relations with him it was a wise step to despatch a mission for the purpose. Such a mission, as is well known, started, accomplished its object, and returned to India after the conclusion of a treaty of commerce. In the course of the journey to and from Kashghar, however, certain facts became apparent which materially detracted from the benefits expected to accrue to our traders. It was found that the country of the Atalik Ghazi was sparsely inhabited by little knots of people, living on oases, separated from each other by vast sandy deserts. The entire subjects of the Atalik Ghazi scarcely number a million and a half, so that anything like an important trade with Kashghar is clearly impossible. Finally, the country is separated from India by almost impassable mountains, while it is open to easy competition from the Russian side.

Some accounts of these circumstances have already been made public, and notably the interesting narrative of Mr. R. B. Shaw; but, as has been elsewhere remarked, that gentleman has pourtrayed the characteristics of the people with singular fidelity, but has hardly done justice to the natural obstacles of the country, or pointed out the impracticable difficulties of the passes as a trade route. This has now been done by Dr. Bellew, in the book we are noticing, with much clearness and detail; indeed, it is impossible to read the unvarnished tale of "Kashmir and Kashghar" without the gravest misgivings as to the practical utility of endeavouring to stimulate trade over such rugged and inhospitable regions. The mere fact that it required 1,621 animals and 6,476 coolies to convey the few members of the mission with their baggage over these terrible passes is sufficient to condemn the route for commercial purposes.

Dr. Bellew gives an interesting account of the journey to Kashghar, and testifies to the perfect order reigning in the country, and its complete subordination to the strong mind now at the head of affairs. This was curiously shown in the fearful silence of ceremony observed each time the mission had an interview with the Atalik Ghazi. Universal distrust seems to overshadow the land, and augurs ill for the permanence of the existing régime. Dr. Bellew has acted wisely in publishing the real facts of the case, so that a just estimate may be formed of the advantages and disadvantages of opening this difficult trade route.

Tibet seems to have favourably impressed the travellers; and Dr. Bellew came to the conclusion that the polyandry and Buddhism there prevailing are institutions well suited to the requirements of the country. The Buddhism of Tibet must, however, be of a very degenerate type, if it conforms to Dr. Bellew's description; for he constantly speaks of prayers to the "gods," and for the "souls of defunct relations," &c. But we are inclined to think that Dr. Bellew has not much studied this subject, or he would not inform us on p. 109 that Om mani padme hum is "said to be the Budhist form of invoking the Deity." He also speaks throughout of "Budh" and "Budhist," not Buddha and Buddhist; but he ought to know that Budha and Buddha are totally distinct personages. We are not disposed to be captious, however, for the book contains a large amount of valuable information, and is written with much candour and good feeling.

Impairment or Loss of Vision from Spinal Concussion Resulting from Railway or other Injuries. By Jabez Hogg, Surgeon to the Royal Westminster Ophthalmic Hospital. London: Baillière and Co., King William-street, Strand. 1876.

This little work possesses a value for railway travellers, voyagers, and all those whose physique is liable to be tried by the "wear and tear" incurred in making long journeys. The work consists of a paper read by the author before the Medical Society of London in November of last year. It treats the subject of loss of vision from spinal concussion or shock. Dr. Hogg believes that there is so intimate a connection between the head, the heart, the spine (the latter by many believed to be the sensorial seat, instead of the brain), and the vision, that he would draw a diagnosis from the seat of any bodily injury—caused, for instance, by railway accident—to the optic nerves themselves, whenever loss of vision ensued unaccountably. His professional and hospital experience has shown him that "the more numerous patients suffering from what he calls 'hysterical spine' disorder, are the travelling clerks of the General Post Office." Dr. Hogg states that, as an oculist, he has had many patients who have come to him with impaired or destroyed vision which they could not state the origin of: hence it was that, as a medical practitioner, he set about tracing the cause. The result of his inquiries invariably was to identify the visual injury with partial paralysis of the spine, originally sustained in some railway or similar accident; and he treated the cases accordingly, insisting as the first curative process "on complete rest, both of body and mind."

The doctor is never tired of reminding his readers of "the intimate connection that exists between one set of nerves and another in the human frame," and his diagnosis is greatly guided by this first principle of anatomy.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

THE QUEEN'S NEW TITLE.

The Bombay Gazette thinks that Mr. Disraeli must have begun by this time to perceive how serious is the mistake he has made in asking Parliament to let the Queen assume the title of Empress of India. Public feeling in England has declared itself so unmistakably on the subject that the Opposition has been encouraged to run the hazard of giving deadly offence to the Court by thwarting a cherished wish of the Queen. The Liberal leader, Lord Hartington, has now himself given notice of a motion—which will of course be supported by the whole strength of the Liberal party, and, probably by not a few independent Conservatives—that the House of Commons, while willing to consider the expediency of giving the Queen an additional title, does not thing it right to impair the ancient Royal dignity of the English Crown by allowing her Majesty to assume the title of Empress. Lord Hartington has, we are glad to see, hit upon the real objection to the Bill, and has not been misled, like Mr. Lowe and Mr. Gladstone, into using unpopular and unsound arguments against the Ministerial proposal. If it were the case that Indian Princes still considered themselves the equals of the Queen of England, and that they would resent the adoption by her Majesty of the title of Empress as an invasion of their sovereign rights and as the assertion of a claim to a supremacy which the Queen is not supposed to enjoy, then we should say that it was high time the native Princes had such nonsensical ideas about their real political status in the country knocked out of their heads. But a change of style is not necessary to teach these Princes who are the real rulers of India. The paramount authority of the Queen has been admitted over and over again by every native Prince, and the allegiance vowed on many previous occasions has been solemnly renewed by all the greater Princes in their recent interviews with the Prince of Wales. We believe, therefore, that the Government of the Queen aleady commands in India all the respect that could be paid to the Government of the Empress. This being so, it is undoubtedly better that the title with which her Majesty's subjects in all parts of the British Empire are familiar, and which is endeared to them by its association with a form of government which differs toto cælo from that of Emperors or Great Moguls, should remain unaltered.

The Times of India thinks there are many considerations which would justify persons out of the range of Court influence in regretting that the Government was not animated in this matter by the happy spirit of prudent indolence which used to find expression in Lord Melbourne's well-known formula, "Can't you let it alone?" But since Mr. Disraeli has not seen fit to "let it alone," but has introduced the Bill, and the Bill is certain to be carried, it is a pity that the grace and dignity of the act of conferring the new title on her Majesty should be marred by useless cavillings and motions foredoomed to failure. Since the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland is to become Empress of India, it would be politic to allow her Imperial Majesty's oriental subjects to become impressed with the grandeur of the new title, and the reality of the compliment which it implies to themselves. And the Opposition would find useful employment in pressing upon the Government the propriety of acting upon the suggestion of Sir E. Colebrooke, that the Princes of India should be guaranteed anew in the possession of all the rights and privileges which are at present secured to them by treaties, and usage, and the Queen's Proclamation. If this be done the assumption of the new dignity will have a soothing and a reassuring effect in India, whatever heart-burnings it may create elsewhere. A certain amount of ridicule would have covered not only the Cabinet but the Royal Family, if the House of Commons refused to sanction the title of Empress once the formal proposal to confer it had been made by the Government, and the Queen's desire for it had become known. Since there is to be a new title, that of Empress is the only one suitable to the political circumstances of India. We respect the fear of timid politicians at home who are afraid that the British Constitution may be compromised by the official use of the noun Empress, or the adjective Imperial, in this country, but we do not share them. English liberty will survive greater shocks. If it be dangerous and wicked to have an empire in India, the hypocrisy of refusing to call its sovereign an Empress will not avail anything. We have a strong prejudice in favour of calling a spade a spade, and an empire an empire. To call it a kingdom would be dishonest. An Act of Parliament could not make the Sovereign Queen of India as she is Queen of England. Her Majesty has not the same territorial rights over Gwalior or Indore that she has over Devonshire or Norfolk; her "Paramount Power" over the Princes of those States might be appropriately expressed by the imperial title, but something essentially different would be implied by the regal one. Of course it was open to Mr. Disraeli to abstain from suggesting any new title whatever; had he done so a great deal might have been said in defence of his political prudence. But since a new title there is to be, he has shown a sound discretion in choosing that which best accords with the state of things in India.

THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT ON MR. LOWE.

The Pioneer thinks it may be true that a constantly-increasing proportion of young officers of the Civil Service has been poured in at the lower end of the Non-Regulation Commissions (the resolution only deals with those of the Punjab and Oudh). But this will not cure the excess of military officers in the higher grades; and if that evil is one of old standing and difficult to treat it is still left in doubt whether any honest endeavour has been made to supply a remedy. For example, a Military Commissioner who cannot hope for his "off-reckonings" till he has completed a service of thirty-eight years would compound to retire at a cheaper rate than a civilian who can hope for a similar annuity after twenty-five. Has any sincere and systematic effort been made to buy out these gentlemen? Was it ever considered in making first appointments—whenever vacancies in Non-Regulation Provinces had to be filled up—that they would necessarily lead in the course of time to the top of the tree; so that to give them to uncovenanted men while civilians were left to lie in cold obstruction, was to "take the children's bread and give it to the dog." When "the Lieutenant-Governor of the N. W. P. declined to spare civilians" from those provinces, was it impressed on his Honour that by extending the use of uncovenanted men (who could not rise in those provinces) as assistants or deputies, enough civilians might easily have been at once available? So far as this was not insisted on, it is clearly the fault of the Government of India that there are not more civilians in employ in the Non-Regulation Provinces; and not in the Punjab and Oudh alone, but wherever the extra and the ex-centurion have been spread over the official Canaan. Then, again, certain appointments of officers of the army have been justified on the score of their "fitness," their "ability, especially in the native languages." No one supposes that responsible administrators in British India are in the habit of deliberately appointing men whom they know to be incapable or unfit. The question is not really that at all, but whether there were no covenanted civilians equally fit? Can it be supposed, for example, that the Bengal Civil Service did not contain in all its junior ranks a man capable of "explaining papers to the native members of Council," or possessing a sufficient knowledge of Oriental languages to hold the post of Under-Secretary in the Foreign Department? It may be so; but the point has been ignored by the Government of India, and cannot be accepted as a notorious fact. When the resolution turns, however, to promotion in special departments requiring special training, it comes to much stronger ground, and it may be thought that the Government of India would have done wisely to occupy that ground more openly. It may not be held altogether an adequate reason for making Sir H. Ramsay's cousin a stipendiary magistrate that he had talents as an engineer; but the fact would have had—as an answer—some weight if he had been given employment in the latter capacity. Sir H. Daly's high opinion of Major James would have been fairly recognisable in the Political Department, though it fails to convince us of that officer's exclusive claim to a purely civil appointment. In the case of Mr. Kempson and other educational officers, the Governor-General in Council has less difficulty in showing that by special fitness no less than by a distinct written guarantee from the Home Government, "all appointments in the Department of education should be filled by individuals unconnected with the service of Government, either civil or military.—(Secretary of State's Despatch of April 7th. 1859.) And this brings us to the true basis on which the question seems likely to have to stand. So long as you keep up a "Civil Service" in the Indian sense, you must, in spite of any Acts of Parliament whatever, give its members a priority as to all appointments for which their fitness is on anything like a par with that of other candidates. But it must be for public opinion to decide whether the maintenance of such a service, with such claims, is on the whole desirable. If it be so, it cannot be too soon or too distinctly understood that the subordinate employés of finance, revenue, police, justice, and education, are only a sort of non-commissioned officer, with a bare one per cent. potentiality of rising late in life to a higher grade. If not, you may open all these several services, according to the several circumstances of each, in the full hope of getting good recruits into each by the inducement of guaranteed departmental promotion, according to departmental claims and merits. Only, in the latter case, the scheme of maintaining a right of pre-emption in favour of outsiders must be given up; and the separate Civil Service, ever ready to take up any appointment of any class—so long as it is but sufficiently lucrative—must be put upon the shelf along with many old contrivances which have been useful in their day, but whose day is past. It is quite possible than an institution that was salutary—even necessary—in the days of Clive, may become in another century an anachronism, and even a nuisance.

REMITTANCES TO ENGLAND.

The Pioneer remarks that its readers may have some general impressions concerning the extent to which military and civil officers in the service of the Indian Government are privileged to remit sums of money to England at the rate announced as the Government rate at the beginning of each year. They may be glad, however, of a precise record of the rights thus enjoyed at present. Referring first to military officers, the case stands thus:—They are privileged to remit to their families in Europe by instalments, or in one sum within the following limits per annum:—General officers, £400; colonels, £300; lieutenant-colonels, £200; majors, £150; captains, £100; lieutenants, £70; sub-lieutenants, £50. Officers of British regiments and batteries revert to British pay on returning home, but those who came out to India before 1865 get Indian allowance for six months after their departure from India, and then British pay. Staff Corps officers of other Indian corps, when going home on furlough, get half their Indian pay and allowances, and staff pay within a maximum of £1,000 and a minimum of £250 per annum in sterling. Civilians, while serving in India, have no privileges of any kind in respect to remittances, but when home on furlough they draw their furlough pay at the Government rate of exchange, subject to a maximum of £1,000 and a minimum of £500 a year in sterling. They may, if they like, have their furlough pay paid over to agents in this country in rupees. These privileges, it will be seen, are not very extensive, but their existence would furnish the Government with a ready means of making some concession to the services on account of the severe loss that officers incur through the depreciation of silver. The proposal that obviously suggests itself would be this: the family remittance system might be extended to both services alike. Although the theory of civilian life in India contemplates a more complete establishment of the civilian in this country than is the case with officers in the army, still the necessity of sending children home, and very often wives as well, constantly establishes a drain in the direction of England on the civilian purse. If Government conferred the boon of family remittances on civilians who actually have to pay for the education and maintenance of their families at home, the concession would be a very graceful one, and need not leave room for any abuses. To start with a hard-and-fast-rule, empowering each officer to remit a given percentage of his pay at the Government rate, would no doubt lead to an immediate absorption of that privilege by the service. Whether a man were married or not, he would naturally remit his maximum to agents at home, and get the money remitted back at a profit through the ordinary channels, but there would be no difficulty in limiting the privilege at first, at all events, to officers who are bonâ fide in need of it, who actually are maintaining children or wives at home. The privilege could be conferred individually, on the officer's declaration as to the average sum he found it necessary to send home. We are not at all prepared to say that the Government ought not to make a more extensive concession than we have here suggested, but at all events it might, by doing this much in a prompt and spontaneous way, refute to some extent the growing belief that in its relations with Anglo-Indian interests it is altogether cold and unsympathetic.

CO-OPERATIVE STORES.—According to the Peshawur correspondent of the Pioneer, the shopkeepers there are complaining of the establishment of a regimental co-operative store by the 51st Regiment, from which residents can also obtain supplies.

LOTTERIES.—The following new rule with regard to lotteries was passed at the last annual meeting of the Calcutta Turf Club:—"That it be an instruction to the stewards charged with the duty of framing the prospectus of the Calcutta Races for 1876-77 to insert a rule making cash payment at lotteries absolutely obligatory, it being optional either to pay cash on each occasion, or to pay to the Honorary Secretary a round sum in advance, an account being in the latter case kept as long as there is any balance at credit, but no longer."

STATION TALK.

JABALPUR, March 11.—In my hasty letter about the Prince's reception I failed to communicate the circumstances of an interesting interview he had with some of our ancient Thugs. You are aware of Jabalpur being the head-quarters of this once famous body of criminals. Under the auspices and through the instrumentality of General Sleeman, in 1837, the School of Industry was established here, as an institution for providing the arrested Thugs with employment. Thus it came about that the Thugs formed quite a colony here, while the principal criminals remained incarcerated. Thuggism is now virtually a thing of the past, and of the men who were arrested and sentenced years ago only a few remain. Nine of these aged representatives of a class, whose designation once was a synonym for everything brutal and terrible, were brought to his Royal Highness for inspection; and for the Prince's gratification and information, the old men lived their deeds of darkness over again by going through the various stages of a Thuggee outrage. Thuggee murder is in substance garrotting, with this difference, that the Thug used to enact his deeds of blood and robbery as a part of his religious life, while the civilised garrotting has no such motives to fall back upon. Any one visiting that interesting establishment, the Thuggee School of Industry at Jabalpur, will find in the room where the various fabrics are exhibited, photographs of the Thuggee process of murder. The victim in the photographs has the air of one who knows what is coming, but the pictures on the whole are interesting. The first representation shows the traveller walking unconcernedly or obvious of impending danger; behind him is Thug No. 1 in a stooping posture advancing to seize the victim around the thighs and hurl him forward on his face; behind this man is Thug No. 2, with a piece of cord; he holds the cord between his hands, and walking erect is ready to cast it across the gullet of the unsuspecting traveller. Thug No. 3 is at the back, passive in this stage. The next picture shows the victim embraced from behind by the first Thug, who has his arms around the poor man's thighs and is evidently throwing him. The Thug with the piece of cord has advanced at this juncture, and is now engaged in strangling the traveller. The passive Thug now makes ready for action by advancing in a stooping position to seize the assaulted man's legs. The last picture represents the last act of the tragedy. The victim is now on his face, the first and second actors in the assault are on his back, and the old sinner who did the least up to this moment has the struggling man by the legs. This was the way the Thugs practised their work. The process seems to have been as cowardly as the act itself was diabolical. But thanks to General Sleeman and his successors, and the Government they represented, Thuggism, with the orthodox (!) Hindoo practice of Suttee and other religious barbarities, is a thing of the past. There are about three hundred artisans in the school—men, women, and children—the offspring principally of the old Thugs now dying out. The school is noted for its tents, which are supposed to be the best in India, and, perhaps, in the world. The criminals work at carpets and other such fabrics. Like Nagpore and elsewhere, the institution produces fine cloths, &c. The iron work, carpentry, and dyeing operation incidental to the tent-making are undertaken by approvers, informers, &c. The workers have certain hours for work, and when the day's labour is over the most of them go to their houses in the city, while a few of the chained individuals are housed in the Jabalpur Jail. The school is now being administered by the Deputy Commissioner, Major Ward. On the nine aged representatives of Thuggism being brought before his Royal Highness, I hear they were presented with Rs. 5 each. It is said the Prince was not inclined to grant them entire liberty, as through their feeble state and inability to work they might only starve if thrown upon the world. He therefore suggested that they be given no work and have good food, &c., in their declining years. Kind, princely act no doubt, but what a contrast to the treatment bestowed upon the poor white loafer unable to subsist upon a pittance of a pension, after spending the flower of his life, perchance, in the defence of his Sovereign and his country.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

ACCIDENT TO A SPORTSMAN.—We regret to hear that Mr. Hamilton Maxwell, of Messrs. W. Nicol, and Co., fell a height of twenty feet from a machan while out tiger shooting in the Central Provinces the other day, and was seriously injured, one of the bones of his right arm being fractured. Mr. Maxwell was carried in a dhooly into Raipur, and is now doing well.

THE FAMILY OF THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—Lord Napier of Magdala has had thirteen children, of whom twelve are alive. He has been married twice, viz., first to a daughter of Dr. Geo. Pearse, Madras, and secondly to a daughter of General E. S. Scott, R.A. His eldest and his second son are twins, and are captains in the Bengal Army. His third son, who is four years their junior, is a lieutenant in the 10th Hussars. His second daughter is married to Mr. H. R. Madocks, Bengal C.S. The youngest of his six daughters is fifteen months old.—Times of India.

MR. J. LOWE.—The French mail steamer Tibre took away from India, on Tuesday last, a gentleman well known in Calcutta, Mr. J. W. Lowe, barrister-at-law, who, after a career of twelve years of very lucrative practice, is understood to have acquired more than a competency; and even now is quite a young man who does not intend to rest upon his oars at home. It is not stated whether Mr. Lowe contemplates to enter upon what is called "public life;" though were he to do so, there is ample reason to believe that he would find a brilliant career before him.—Bombay Gazette, March 20.

THE SEE OF CALCUTTA.—According to the terms of the Letters Patent, says the Indian Church Gazette, during the vacancy in the See of Calcutta, the Bishop of Madras takes over jurisdiction of the diocese. The transaction of the official business of the See will be under the superintendence of the Archdeacon of Calcutta. In accordance with these temporary arrangements a notice has been issued by the Registrar of the Diocese that there should be substituted for the present heading of marriage licenses the following form:—"Frederick, by Divine permission, Bishop of Madras, and exercising the jurisdiction and functions appertaining to the See of Calcutta, vacant by the demise of the Bishop thereof," &c.

NEW PONTOON.—Captain B. Blood, R.E., Second in Command of the Bengal Sappers and Miners at Roorkee, has constructed a new pattern of pontoon, which is acknowledged to possess advantages over the pontoon now used in the engineer trains. With a view to the adoption of Captain Blood's pontoon in place of the old pattern, a committee, with General D. M. Stewart as President, and officers of the Royal Engineers from the Madras, Bombay, and Bengal Corps of Sappers and Miners as members, was ordered by the military authorities to assemble at Roorkee. Two bridges—one of the old pattern and one of the new pattern pontoons—were thrown across the canals side by side, which were experimented upon by the committee. Their report is now before Government, but we believe there is no doubt as to Captain Blood's pontoon having been approved, and that it will be adopted.

JAIPUR.—On the 6th March, and for the first time in its history, the city of Jaipur blazed out in all the glory of gas-light. The gentleman employed to carry out the improvements at Jaipur was Mr. Adolf Silbiger, who received his commission in June last, since which time the goods trains on the Rajputana State Railway have been continually landing consignments of pipes, lamp-posts, &c., at the Rajput city. The Maharajah hoped that the works would be sufficiently advanced to permit of being opened on the occasion of the Prince's visit; but the dilatoriness of the Rajputana Railway was, says an irate local writer, against him. The Political Agent, a multitude of native nobles, and the English resident of Jaipur, turned out to behold his Highness lighting the first jets, and the Maharajah is said to have been in such ecstacies of delight over his new improvement that he took a private midnight stroll through the streets to see how they looked.

THE CROPS.—The following is a report on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 9th March, 1876:—No rain has fallen in Madras, where prospects continue unchanged. There has been a general and beneficial fall in Sind, but none elsewhere in the Bombay Presidency; the harvest is progressing. In Berar and the Central Provinces the rabi cuttings continue; the outturn is expected to be good. In Bengal there has been general rain in the Eastern and South Central Districts, the Sonthal Pergunnahs, Balasore and part of Chota Nagpore; none in Behar; the rains have facilitated ploughing for the cultivation of early rice. No rain has fallen in the North-Western Provinces, except in Kumahon; in Rohilkhund the crops are reported to promise badly; elsewhere prospects are good. None has fallen in Oudh; prospects are good. In the Punjab there has been more or less rain in all districts except Delhi, Hissar, and Umballa; in these it is badly wanted. In Assam there have been good falls, and prospects are good. From Rajputana a slight fall is reported from Bhurtpore.

TELEGRAPHS.—The administration report of the Telegraph Department for the year 1874-75 shows that the total capital expenditure for the year has been Rs.11,94,673; and the gross capital outlay both in India and Ceylon amounts to Rs.2,96,60,675, or nearly 3 millions sterling. The revenue receipts have been Rs.22,46,032, and the expenditure Rs.26,63,839, leaving a deficit of Rs.4,17,807, an improvement on previous years, when the net deficit amounted to Rs. 5,61,666. The number of paid messages were Rs.837,391, against Rs. 745,468 in the previous year, and the total message revenue Rs.19,16,878, as against Rs. 17,83,431 in 1873-74. The press messages show a total increase of 1,831 over the previous year, and there has been a diminution in Reuter's messages, but an increase in those of others. At the ordinary rates the Department would have realised Rs. 90,273 by the 4,206 press messages, thus showing a rebate of Rs. 72,452 in favour of the press. This is a convenient way of throwing halfpence to the press, but the more correct estimate would be to state that but for the press messages the Department would not have realised their Rs. 17,821.

ILL-TREATMENT OF NATIVES.—It may be useful to officers visiting Kashmir to understand how serious is the view which Government always takes of cases of assault on the servants of the Maharajah. Last October a Kashmiri sepoy, with a severe incised wound about one-and-a-half inches in length on one of his legs, complained to the Resident that he had been struck with an alpenstock by a certain officer of the Ordnance Department. The officer in question admitted the assault, but endeavoured to justify it on the ground that the sepoy had failed to supply him with ponies. The case came before the Government of India, and Lord Northbrook was at first disposed to direct the summary removal of the offending officer from his appointment. The latter ultimately escaped with a prohibition against again visiting Kashmir and the stoppage of his privilege leave and all leave on private affairs for two years. At the same time Major Henderson was instructed without fail to report at once any case of an officer striking or ill-using natives, as in any future instance the Government of India desire to take more severe notice of such misconduct.

RASSALDAR ANUP SINGH.—The Lahor paper publishes the following:—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has invited Rassaldar Anup Singh, a well-known native officer of the 11th Bengal Lancers, one of the finest specimens of an Irregular Cavalry soldier that could be found anywhere, to accompany him in the Serapis to England. The Rassaldar was with the detachment under Major A. H. Prinsep which formed H.R.H.'s escort during his tour through the Terai. We have just seen a note, in which he announces the fact of his approaching departure to Europe to a European officer. He simply puts it thus:—"The Prince asked me to come to England, and of course I could not refuse." If these are the real facts, they show the existence in this native officer of a high sense of obedience and discipline, as it must have been with considerable inward qualms that a Sikh Jat made up his mind to cross the seas alone. We only hope that Anup Singh, who will be now regarded in England as a sort of "show" man of the native army, will not be spoilt by his trip. He is a most handsome well-made man, with a striking appearance, and will in all probability attract much attention.

RAJPUTANA.—Captain H. Abbott, of the Political Department, has been appointed to take charge as Superintendent of the State of Jhallawar in Rajputana. The necessity for this charge has arisen out of the predicament in which the State now finds itself, without a chief, and with the prospect of a long minority. The late chief, an excellent ruler, died in August last. In his great anxiety to provide himself with an heir, he did two things not long before his death,—he adopted a son from a distant branch of his family, and he married a new wife upon the understanding that any heir to his body should supersede the adopted son. Having made these judicious arrangements for the devolution of his State, he complicated them by dying suddenly within two or three months of his marriage. Now, his widow undertakes to provide a posthumous son, who will take the State under the settlement, if she is only allowed reasonable time. The question is, what time, as to length, shall be considered reasonable, the party of the adopted son being incredulous as to the coming event, and hinting all kinds of unworthy suspicions as to the dangers of delay and the possibility of tricks; while the disconsolate widow's party indignantly stakes its existence upon her fulfilment of the expectations formed. Affairs are thus in a critical state, and whatever be the upshot, a long minority must follow, for the adopted son is still quite young.—Pioneer.

THE LATE BISHOP MILMAN.—The Indian Church Gazette says of the late Bishop of Calcutta:—"Only his clergy, and those with whom in the discharge of his episcopal functions he was brought into intimate relations, can fully realise the greatness of the help, the value of the counsel, and the fulness of the sympathy which he was ever ready gladly to extend to them; and they only can fully estimate the extent of their loss in the death of such a leader. But many others in all ranks and classes of society have found in him a ready helper, a wise and kind adviser, and a warm friend—one ever ready to expend strength and substance for the furtherance of all good works. Our mourning must indeed be great in the thought that one so earnest, so loving, and so true, has been taken from us. But as we think of his long and patient and unwearying toil in the service of that Master whom he so greatly loved, with our sorrow there cannot but largely mingle a feeling of earnest thankfulness that he 'rests from his labours.' Faithful and true, he died at his post, and we may feel sure that thus was only fulfilled the desire of his loyal and devoted spirit. A very sad and terrible proof has been added to the number of those already existing and so often brought forward, of the exceeding necessity there is that our enormous diocese should be sub-divided, and thus the risks and laborious duties connected with its supervision be reduced. Apart from the excessive strain of mind and body involved in the conscientious discharge of the duties of that supervision, the very sudden and frequent changes of climate, which careful visitation of the stations included within the far-extending boundaries of the diocese demands, are enough to break down at last the strongest constitution, and the most enduring frame. We hope that ere long this very serious and pressing question may receive full attention, and with satisfactory results. None felt more keenly its importance nor more earnestly desired its solution than our lamented Bishop.

SHIP ON FIRE.—Captain Barnsby, of the ship M. and E. Cox, which has arrived at Madras from Calcutta, reports that at 11.30 A.M. on the 9th March he saw a large ship on fire on the starboard bow, and immediately bore down on her. On getting close to her she proved to be the ship China, of South Shields. She was burning from stem to stern, masts hanging over the side, and nearly gutted; kept a sharp look-out, but saw nothing of the crew, in boats or otherwise.

WEDDING AT MADRAS.—On Wednesday afternoon, the 13th March, the wedding of Captain R. F. Willoughby, A.D.C. to his Grace the Governor, to Miss Robinson, the eldest daughter of Sir William Robinson, K.C.S.I., was celebrated at St. George's Cathedral, Madras. The Bishop of Madras, assisted by the Rev. D. Fenn, performed the marriage ceremony. His Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Government House party were present, together with a large number of the fashionable world of Madras.

COTTON AND INDIGO.—The extent of cotton and indigo cultivation in the Madras Presidency up to December last was as follows:—1,386,680 acres of cotton, assessed at Rs. 16,26,116, and 282,682 acres of indigo, assessed at Rs. 5,96,483. The district of Bellary shows the largest cotton cultivation, and South Arcot the largest indigo cultivation. North Arcot shows the smallest cotton industry, and Madura the smallest indigo industry. There has been an additional extent of 47,716 acres devoted to cotton cultivation during the nine months of the current official year, and an addition of 85,935 acres taken up for indigo cultivation, giving an increase of revenue for the nine months of Rs. 2,72,854.

MYSOR.—A formal demand, it is said, will shortly be made on the Madras Government for the restitution of certain large sums of money for educational purposes which are alleged to be wrongly withheld by the trustees or executors of the first Lord Harris from the Mohammedans of the Province of Mysor. The contention is, that the conqueror of Seringapatam left a considerable amount of money for the furtherance of the education of Mohammedans in Mysor, as well as the Madras Presidency. The money in dispute, with interest, is calculated to amount to something like a crore of rupees, and it is said that the Mohammedans of the Mysor Province intend fighting for it. Don't they wish they may get it?

THE BANGALORE VOLUNTEERS.—On Saturday last the annual inspection of the Bangalore Volunteers by Major-General Elmhirst, C.B., took place on the parade ground opposite the Volunteer barracks. The men turned out in large numbers for the occasion, and their appearance on parade was smart and soldierlike. The regiment received General Elmhirst, who was accompanied by Colonel Arbuthnot, Assistant Adjutant General, in review order with the usual salute, and after breaking into column the general dismounted and each company was minutely inspected. The general expressed himself satisfied with the cleanliness of the arms and accoutrements of the men present on parade.—Times of India, March 27.

THE GOVERNOR.—His Grace the Duke of Buckingham intends to leave Madras with his family by special train on Monday next, for the Neilgherries. The Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner will meet his Grace at Coonoor on Tuesday morning. Breakfast will be laid in tents on a hill near Wellington. After breakfast the party will drive into Ootacamund, and take up their residence at the Cedars. His Grace will return alone immediately afterwards to Madras. This experiment of running up from the Plains to the Hill and back again in a week is to be made, we believe, on the Duke's sole responsibility, for the "faculty" naturally cannot accord it their sanction. We admit its boldness, but we would rather that the Duke refrained from experiments with a tropical climate.—Times of India, March 27.

CENTRAL MUSEUM.—On Thursday evening, the 15th inst., his Grace the Duke of Buckingham opened to the public the new Lecture Hall and Library attached to the Central Museum. Dr. Bidie, the Curator of the Museum, gave an interesting lecture on the occasion, the subject of which was "The Use of Public Museums and Free Public Libraries." The attendance of European ladies and gentlemen was small, but a large number of educated natives attended, showing the interest they feel in the important addition which has been made to our Museum. Dr. Bidie's able inaugural address was listened to most attentively, and the lecturer was warmly applauded at its conclusion. The proceedings were brought to a close by his Grace the Duke of Buckingham declaring the Lecture Hall open.—Madras Athenæum, March 18.

FINANCIAL.—The Budget estimates of the Local Funds of the Madras Presidency for 1876-7 have been published, we learn from a Madras paper. The general revenues and receipts during the year amounted to Rs. 67,34,740, against Rs. 64,86,833 in the previous year, consisting of a balance of Rs. 13,01,910; Government allotment Rs. 11,76,280, rates and taxes Rs. 38,16,910, school fees Rs. 32,540, contribution from Municipalities Rs. 59,760, receipts from endowments, contributions and donations Rs. 2,42,260, and miscellaneous Rs. 1,05,088. The estimated expenditure amounts to Rs. 60,59,660, against Rs. 58,24,560 in the previous year. The allotment for Public Works amount to Rs. 44,52,700; Education Rs. 5,70,200; Sanitation, Medical Services and Public and Charitable Institutions Rs. 9,64,000; and Miscellaneous, Rs. 72,760.

ANOTHER DIFFERENCE WITH BURMAH.—Another boundary dispute seems likely to crop up with the King of Burmah. In April last year, according to the Arakan News, "the Extra Assistant Commissioner went up the Dahlet creek on inspection duty, where he discovered the existence of soap-stone mines within British territory, but they are owned and worked by the King; the Extra Assistant Commissioner reported about them to the Government, through proper channels. It is now believed that the Government have asked the King to make them over to the British. The demand of the soap-stone mines by the British was the topic at Mandalay, and the King admitted the existence of the mines within Arakan, but as they had been owned and worked by the King of Burmah for generations, on this ground the King refused to comply with the British demand."

AGRARIAN OUTBREAK IN BASTAR.—The rising reported from Berhampur and that reported from Vizagapatam are, no doubt, one and the same event. It is certain that the Rajah of Bastar has applied to the British authorities at Vizagapatam for assistance, saying that he is besieged in his palace by his own rayats, who threaten to murder him—in return for what favours on his part is not known. Two companies of the 2nd M.N.I. have started from Vizagapatam for "the seat of war," and Mr. Goderich, the Agent of the Governor, accompanies the force to see what the business is. This event will not improbably lead to a revision of the political position of his Highness of Bastar, for it is obvious that if a petty potentate can call in the aid of the British Power whenever popular indignation rises against him he is but little likely to be considerate towards his subject.—Madras Times, March 25.

THE MOPLAHS.—The Calicut Observer of March 25 gives the following particulars of another Moplah outbreak:—"Not long ago there was a serious disturbance at Puttamby, caused by Moplahs, which created no small sensation in Malabar, owing to the turbulent spirit manifested, and tea outrages committed by the Moplahs. To quell this disturbance, military aid had to be called in. From what we hear now of what is going on at Puttamby again, we doubt not that, ever since the former disturbance, feelings of bitter enmity have been fermenting in the breasts of the Moplahs, towards the wealthy Warryar there, and that they, the Moplahs, are determined upon revenging themselves. We understand that a daring dacoity was committed there lately, and that a portion of the stolen property was discovered in the house of one of the Moplah marauders, who, on being arrested, and with the view of screening his accomplices, offered violent resistance to the Tasildar's party, two of whom are now in a precarious state from injuries received. As the rioters are now at large, committing depredations and bidding defiance to the authorities there, the Magistrate of the District, his Sheristadar and clerks, accompanied by Captain Hole, the Superintendent of Police, and a batch of policemen, left Calicut on the morning of the 16th instant for the scene of the disturbance. We learn that outrageous villanies have been committed on a number of Nair females, and that instructions have been received here from the Superintendent of Police, directing that policemen, as many as are available, be marched off expeditiously to the scene of the disturbance. The detachment of the 48th Regiment, stationed on the West Hill, received orders on the night of the 16th instant to be in readiness."

CIVIL.—Mr. Havelock, Revenue Commissioner, S.D., who returned to Bombay from leave to England on Thursday, will not take up his appointment for a fortnight yet. He proceeds to Madras and the Neilgherries this week, and will afterwards return by rail to Poona.

VACCINATION.—We understand that seven hundred and fifty-nine European seamen, &c., belonging to merchant-vessels in harbour, have been vaccinated during the last four days, and it is hoped that masters of all the other vessels whose crews have not yet been so treated will see the necessity of having them sent to the dockyard for the purpose, where a vaccinator attends every morning at seven o'clock.—Times of India, March 27.

BELGAUM.—We learn from a correspondent at Belgaum that that station has been visited by heavy thunderstorms, accompanied by copious downpours of rain. On Monday, the 13th instant, at about 5 P.M., a violent thunderstorm with vivid lightning and heavy rain broke over the station and lasted more than an hour. On the nights of Sunday, the 19th, and Monday, the 20th instant, thunderstorms with rain came on about midnight, lasting for an hour, more or less. The air is heavy and muggy, and more rain is expected. There has been a great fall of rain at Ceylon.—Times of India, March 27.

KHELAT.—Our Kurrachee correspondent, writing on the 13th March, says that advices from Khelat state that the Brahooee Chiefs are determined not to give in to his Highness the Khan of Khelat. After arranging for the protection of their families and property, they marched with a strong force last week to oppose the Khan's troops. The latter numbered about 1,200 men of all arms, but were unable to maintain their position, and were soon driven back at all points, and compelled to retire on Baugh, the chief town of the province of Cutchee. The Brahooee Chiefs had only one of their men killed and about four wounded, while on his Highness's side there were fourteen killed and twenty wounded.—Times of India, March 27.

LOSS OF THE "HYDREE."—The Marine Court of Enquiry, which sat at the Fort Police Court to investigate into the circumstances connected with the loss of the ship Hydree, re-assembled on Friday to pronounce their decision. The Hydree was wrecked while endeavouring to enter the port of Jeddah on the 8th February last. The Nacoda was, the Court thought, guilty of carelessness and error in the navigation of his ship; but looking to all the circumstances, they considered that the responsibility of her loss rested upon the pilot. The Court held that the Nacoda was not guilty of wilful and gross carelessness, and recommended that he should be warned, and that his certificate should be returned to him.

KARACHI HARBOUR.—We are glad to notice the large number of steamers and sailing ships now in our harbour, eleven of the former and six of the latter; and the fact leaves us to suppose that the trade of our port is increasing. Within the last two or three years vessels of much larger tonnage visited the port than was the case before, and it is, doubtless, owing to the improved state of the entrance channels. Of the number of vessels in our harbour we notice two fine ships, the Hospadar, of 1,620 tons, commander Whitmore, and Britannia, of 1,340 tons, commander Hamilton, this being their first voyage; the Hospadar brought a cargo of 2,500 tons of material for the Indus Valley State Railway.—Sind News.

DEATH OF MR. H. BURTON.—We regret to have to announce the death of Mr. Henry Burton, late a member of Mr. Lewis's Dramatic and Burlesque Company. Mr. Burton was attacked with small-pox not many days ago, and died on Monday night, at the European General Hospital. He was only twenty-six years of age, and was the son of Mr. W. Burton, a celebrated circus proprietor, of Redbank, in Australia, Mr. Burton joined Lewis's company in 1873 and was much liked by his professional brothers, who followed his remains to the Sewree Cemetery on Tuesday afternoon. The funeral expenses were defrayed by the members of the company. The other members of this company who are now attacked with small-pox are, we are glad to say, progressing most favourably.

UNVEILING OF THE STATUE OF SIR COWASJI JEHANGIR.—On Thursday evening, March 23, at 5.30, a large number of European ladies and gentlemen, as also many native gentlemen, assembled in the University Hall, to witness the unveiling of the statue of Sir Cowasji Jehangir. The band of the 20th N. I., which was present on the occasion, played during the ceremony. When all were seated, the Hon. James Gibbs occupying the chair, and having on his right the Hon. Alexander Rogers, and on the left Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeeboy, Mr. Dosabhoy Framjee, stepping forward in front of the table before which these gentlemen sat, read an address recording Sir Cowasji's services to Bombay. After a speech on the same topic from Mr. Gibbs, the statue was unveiled by the latter gentleman.

ALEXANDRA GIRLS' SCHOOL.—We understand that Sir Cowasjee Jehangier has given Rs. 20,000 to the Alexandra Girls' School. In order to combine the two objects of permanently commemorating his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales' visit to India and of providing a permanent home for an institution founded in honour of his auspicious marriage, and called after his august consort, Sir Cowasjee, with his usual liberality, last week subscribed the princely sum of Rs. 20,000 towards the building fund of the institution. This sum, with a few other subscriptions towards the same end collected up to date, the sum total of which will, it is expected, be doubled by Government, will enable the Alexandra Institution authorities to at once commence the building of a new school.—Times of India.

ACCIDENT TO THE HEALTH OFFICER.—We are sorry to hear that an accident befel Dr. Weir, the Health Officer of Bombay, on Monday evening. He was returning from a round of inspection in the native town, when, at the Money School, the powerful Australian horse drawing his brougham bolted and ran the whole length of the Esplanade-road and past the fountain to the Bombay Club. It dashed in between the pillars in front of the Club, smashing the brougham to pieces. Dr. Weir was thrown out, and received severe injuries on his head and face. Several members of the club ran and seized the horse, which lashed out furiously, and Dr. Weir himself got up and cut the traces, not being at first aware that he was hurt. His injuries, though by no means trifling, are not dangerous. Dr. Hughes and Dr. Grey were called in and satisfied themselves that there was no fracture of the skull. Dr. Weir will be able to resume his duties in a few days.—Times of India, March 27.

THE WRECK OF THE STEAMER "ORESTES."—We have to chronicle another shipping disaster to-day, in the total loss of the steamer Orestes, which occurred off the port of Galle this evening. This vessel was sighted in the afternoon, she slackened speed considerably in nearing the roadstead, and to the usual inquiry from the flagstaff, she signalled for a tug-boat. The steamer Bucentaur steamed out at once to her assistance, and thirteen cargo boats were also despatched from shore. Mr. Blyth, the Master Attendant; Mr. E. Byrde, Collector of Customs; Mr. Delmege, of the firm of Messrs. Delmege, Reid and Co., agents of the vessels; as well as Mr. Scott, of Messrs. Clark, Spence and Co., Lloyd's Agents, all went on board without delay. In the meantime the flagstaff station and ramparts were crowded with spectators, all intent in watching the movements of the disabled steamer, which lay in the roadstead nearly opposite the flagstaff, surrounded by the boats, the Bucentaur being quite close to her. At this time considerable uncertainty prevailed as to the extent of the injury; and it was surmised on shore that the vessel had sprung a leak or that her engines were disabled. Late in the evening it was ascertained that the Orestes had struck on the Cindura Rock. She made her way under steam to the roadstead, and although every endeavour was made to tow her into the harbour, it was of no avail, as she went down in about fifteen fathoms water at ten minutes to eight P.M. The passengers and crew have been saved. The Orestes belonged to Alfred Holt's line, and was bound from London to Singapore with a general cargo. Further particulars have not yet transpired.—Galle Correspondent of the Ceylon Times, March 10.

INDIAN SERVICE FAMILY PENSION FUND.

The following letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published for general information;—

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have considered in Council Military Letter, dated Nov. 12, 1875, No. 278, in which you submit for my consideration the question whether it would be competent to an officer who has exchanged from a purchase corps into the staff corps, and who may retire from the service by the sale of his commission before being entitled to Indian pension, to continue his subscription to the Indian Service Family Pension Fund for the benefit of his wife and family after such retirement.

In reply I have to inform you that an officer so situated would not be entitled to continue his subscription to the Fund.

Such cases are not, however, likely to be of frequent occurrence, and I see no objection to the return on retirement of contributions in excess of the risk borne by the Fund during membership.—I have, &c.,

SALISBURY.

THE CENTRAL INDIA HORSE.—CASE OF MAJOR JAMES.

No. 86. 14, dated Feb. 7.

From Major Gen. Sir H. D. Daly, K.C.S.I., Agent to the Governor-General for Central India, to C. U. Aitchison, Esq., C.S.I., Secretary to the Govt. of India, Foreign Department.

I have the honour to submit, in reply to your No. 2,566, of 21st ult. respecting the appointment by the late Viceroy of Major James, Central India Horse, to a Deputy-Commissionership, Central Provinces the following:—

2. The Central India Horse was embodied in 1858-59, under the orders of the Government of India, to supply the place of the Cavalry of the Gwalior, Malwa, and Bhopal Contingents, swept away during the Mutiny. As the force was for service within Native States, without defined boundaries and with daily conflicting interests, it was essential that its officers should be linguists and men of tact. Application in this spirit was made by Government to each Presidency for two or three selected officers. Major (then Lieutenant) James was one thus sent by the Commander-in-Chief of Madras (Sir P. Grant).

3. My own connection with the Central India Horse began in 1861, when I was appointed commandant by Lord Canning. On joining I found Lieut. James, staff officer of the force and assistant in charge of the civil duties at Goona, the head-quarters.

4. In 1863-64 application was made to me for the services of an officer for boundary settlement work in Bundlekund—questions of intricacy between native States themselves and between the British Government and native States. I selected Captain James, knowing that he was a rare linguist, and possessed of the patient temper and knowledge requisite in dealing with points of custom and tradition.

5. Captain James so successfully performed the task, that during two years' labour there was not, I believe, a single appeal from his decisions. After completion of the duty Captain James resumed his place in the Central India Horse.

6. In 1865-66 Major James (he had now become Major) was offered by the Agent to Governor-General, Central India, the appointment of Officiating First Assistant, a position of much responsibility, in consequence of his success in settlement work. Between 1866 and 1870 Major James on several occasions officiated as Political Agent in Western Malwa, and was employed from time to time on boundary work. His substantive appointment in the Central India Horse was Squadron officer and second in command, though he repeatedly held temporary command of a corps. It was on the ground of Major James's special fitness for civil employment, thus established, that I submitted a recommendation to Lord Mayo for this transfer from the military branch.

7. Lord Mayo had no acquaintance of any sort with Major James, nor with Captain Buller, Second Squadron officer in 11th Bengal Cavalry, appointed to succeed him in the Central India Horse. The late Viceroy had seen neither officer. Bearing in mind the peculiarity of services required of officers in the Central India Horse to maintain the force in the efficiency which has won special acknowledgments from the Commander-in-Chief, Lord Napier, on occasions when regiments have been associated with the army, a roll of eligible officers was submitted to Lord Mayo through his Military Secretary.

8. He selected Captain Buller. Captain Buller was not even aware of his nomination, which was solely on the grounds of his merits as an officer.

9. So far from the appointment being wanted for any one officer, there were doubts of Captain Buller's acceptance; and as events have turned out, it would have been better for him had he remained with the 11th Bengal Cavalry; he would now have been Commandant.

Major James received a Deputy-Commissionership, fourth class, Rs. 1,000 per mensem, in 1871, after twenty-five years' service. In emolument there was little difference between his appointment in the Central India Horse and the Deputy-Commissionership. In 1872 he became Lieutenant-Colonel, when, without advancement in the grade of Deputy-Commissioner, in income he became a loser.

CHANGES, PROMOTIONS, &c., IN H.M.'s REGIMENTS SERVING IN INDIA.

April 11.

BREVET.

Capt. W. Whitla, 10th foot, and Capt. G. N. Channer, Bengal staff corps, to be majors, in recognition of their services during the recent operations against the Malays in Perak; April 12.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

WAR-OFFICE, April 14.

The Queen has conferred the decoration of the Victoria Cross on Captain (now Brevet-Major) George Nicholas Channer, of the Bengal Staff Corps, for his gallant conduct during the recent operations against the Malays in Perak. The following record is made of the act of bravery for which the gallant Major is thus distinguished:—

"For having, with the greatest gallantry, been the first to jump into the enemy's stockade, to which he had been despatched with a small party of the 1st Ghoorkha Light Infantry, on the afternoon of the 20th December, 1875, by the officer commanding the Malacca Column, to procure intelligence as to its strength, position, &c. Major Channer got completely in rear of the enemy's position, and finding himself so close that he could hear the voices of the men inside, who were cooking at the time, and keeping no look-out, he beckoned to his men, and the whole party stole quietly forward to within a few paces of the stockade. On jumping in he shot the first man dead with his revolver, and his party then came up and entered the stockade, which was of a most formidable nature, surrounded by a bamboo palisade; about seven yards within was a log house, loopholed, with two narrow entrances, and trees laid latidunially, to the thickness of two feet. The officer commanding reports that if Major Channer, by his foresight, coolness, and intrepidity, had not taken this stockade, a great loss of life must have occurred, as from the fact of his being unable to bring guns to bear on it, from the steepness of the hill and the density of the jungle, it must have been taken at the point of the bayonet."

THE NAVAL SERVICE AND THE PRINCE OF WALES.—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has been pleased to express officially the satisfaction he has felt at the arrangements made by the naval service for his voyage to India and reception at ports of disembarkation and re-embarkation.

INDIAN TROOPSHIPS.—The Indian troopship Malabar, Captain Kelly, with the 76th Regiment on board, arrived at Portsmouth on the 10th April. Seven men and one child died on the passage. The regiment is now stationed at Chatham. The Euphrates, Indian troopship, is to proceed from Portsmouth to Birkenhead, to undergo thorough repair, and to be fitted with compound engines.

MR. G. R. F. CHRISTIE (India Office) writes as follows:—"Publicity has lately been given to the decision of two Richmond magistrates who convicted me of travelling on the London and South-Western Railway without a ticket. As this was calculated to do me serious injury, please allow me the opportunity to state that on my appeal to quarter sessions the conviction was quashed without even my case being opened, the Chairman remarking that I left the court without a stain upon my character, and allowing me full costs."

THE MAILS TO CHINA AND AUSTRALIA.—The following notice has been issued from the General Post-office:—The mail packet Surat, which left Southampton on the 6th inst., with the heavy portion of the India, China, and Australian mails, has put into Lisbon, damaged, and another vessel has been despatched to Lisbon to carry forward the mails. As this vessel cannot reach Suez until a week after time, it is intended to defer the despatch from London of the Brindisi portion of the mails for Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, China, and Australia, until the evening of Friday, the 21st inst.

LECTURE ON INDIA.—Mr. James Ashbury, one of the members for the borough of Brighton, delivered a lecture at the Town Hall on Wednesday, in connection with his recent visit to India. The lecturer gave a large amount of statistical and other information, with a view to assist his constituents in forming an accurate notion of the magnitude of our Indian possessions, and a series of dissolving views, taken from life or nature, by photography, were brought into aid. Mr. Ashbury expressed his opinion that, although our rule in India is generally a just one, it cannot be universally popular in that Empire. He said he could not conceive how the Royal visit could be other than highly advantageous to the country at large.

THE PRINCE'S WILD ANIMALS.—By desire of the Prince of Wales the whole of the wild animals presented to his Royal Highness in India will be exhibited in one collection at the Zoological Gardens, Regent's-park. A large tent has been erected on a plot of ground behind the pheasantry, and a number of iron cages from the society's surplus stores have been placed under the canopy. The four elephants the Prince brings with him can only be accommodated in the elephant house, but the bears, panthers, cheetahs, leopards, nylghaus, snakes, ostriches, and pheasants will all find shelter in the tent. It is expected that the collection will be open to the public about the 12th May.

THE PRINCE'S RETURN.—The Mayor of Portsmouth has received a telegram from the Prince of Wales, informing him that it is the intention of his Royal Highness to land in the dockyard and to proceed through the town to the railway station. The date of his arrival will be notified. Extensive preparations are commenced with a view of giving the Prince a grand reception. A committee has been formed, and a public subscription opened. The Lord Mayor of London received a telegram from Malta stating in effect that the Prince of Wales would have great pleasure in being present at a banquet, followed by a ball, in the Guildhall, to be given by the Corporation of London in celebration of his safe return from India.

CAPTAIN BURNABY.—Captain Burnaby writes as follows to a contemporary:—"Having seen my name mentioned in a Reuter's telegram from St. Petersburg, published in your issue of this morning, where it states that I was expelled from Khiva for having evaded the requisite presentation of a passport and other papers testifying to my identity, and in consequence of complaints raised by the Khan of Khiva, permit me to remark that there is no truth whatever in that statement, and that the reasons for my leaving Khiva are better known to General Milutin, the Russian Minister of War, than to the St. Petersburg correspondent of the North German Gazette.—I have the honour to remain, Sir, your obedient servant, FRED. BURNABY, Captain Royal Horse Guards, Cavalry Barracks, Windsor, April 13."

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S PRESENTS.—The live animals forming part of the Prince of Wales's presents, and which arrived at Portsmouth on Monday, reached London on Wednesday, in two horse-boxes, en route for Sandringham. The armadillo, one of the most valuable of the collection, died on the way home. Rooms are being specially prepared at the East Indian Museum, Exhibition-road, South Kensington, for the reception of the numerous and costly presents received by the Prince of Wales during his recent tour in India. Mr. Moore, the deputy-superintendent of the Museum, has charge of the arrangements, which are now in an advanced state, and will be completed in another fortnight. The rooms will be elaborately decorated in green, scarlet, and gold, so as to harmonise with the character of the exhibition, which will be opened for public inspection about the middle of May. Amongst the presents are a large number of Indian shawls of the finest texture, a splendid variety of jewels, a fine collection of Indian-made pipes, saddlery, scimitars, and other antique weapons. The exhibition will remain at South Kensington till November, when the collection will be removed to the Bethnal-green Museum, so that the inhabitants of East London may have an opportunity of seeing the Royal presents. Since the commencement of the week great progress has been made with the house which is being erected at the Zoological Gardens for the reception of the collection of animals which the Prince brings with him from India.

THE DELHI AND LONDON BANK.—The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of this bank was held on Wednesday. The accounts for the half-year exhibited a net profit during that period of £9,902. 13s. 1d., which, with £729. 0s. 11d. unappropriated balance of profit from the previous half-year, made a total of £10,631. 14s. at the credit of profit and loss account. The directors proposed to apply that sum as follows:—£7,596. 11s. 3d. in payment of a dividend of 4½ per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, and £2,500 to meet deficiencies on the realisation of accounts comprised in the "lock-up account," thus leaving a balance of £535. 2s. 9d. to be carried forward. The Chairman (Mr. D. H. Small) observed that all business with the East had been, and continued to be, greatly restricted, and profits had thus been reduced. It was, however, satisfactory to state that from the profits of the half-year the directors had been able to set aside £2,500 for the "lock-up account," and also to pay a 4½ per cent. dividend. The total amount of the "lock-up account" was between six and six and a half lacs of rupees. The Manager (Mr. J. W. H. Ilbery), replying to a Shareholder, said that the question of exchange was a difficult one to deal with, and it was also difficult to say what the effect of the reduction in the value of silver would be. The fall in exchanges had been attributed to many causes; but he believed that it arose from the falling off in the value of exports from India. On four articles alone—cotton, jute, rice, and silk—there had been a reduction from £24,000,000 to £15,000,000, thus leaving a deficiency of about £9,000,000. Therefore there must be a still greater reduction when other articles were taken into account. The action of the East India Government in selling so large an amount of their bills in India would create a demand upon India of about £16,000,000, and therefore interfered greatly with exchanges. Many causes had influenced the exchanges. Although silver must in the future be cheaper than it had hitherto been, and must tend to keep the rates down, he did not think that it would continue so low in the future as it had been lately. The report was adopted.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, April 10.—THE ROYAL TITLES BILL.—Mr. FAWCETT gave notice that he would, on the first day the House re-assembled after the Easter Holidays, ask the Prime Minister whether he would afford any facilities for the discussion of the motion, of which notice had been given, with respect to the Royal Titles before the Proclamation should be issued relative thereto.

THE YUNNAN MISSION.—Mr. BOURKE, in answer to Sir T. LAWRENCE, said: We have received a telegram from her Majesty's Consul at Shanghai, stating that Mr. Grosvenor's mission had arrived safely at Yunnan-Foo on the 6th of March. The Chief Commissioner of British Burmah also telegraphs under date of the 4th of this month, that he had received intelligence from the Resident at Mandalay announcing that a letter had reached him, via Bhamo, from Mr. Grosvenor, dated Yunnan-Foo, the 10th. Mr. Grosvenor had everywhere been received with civility by the Chinese officials since leaving Hankow. Mr. Grosvenor proposes to go on to Burmah after the inquiry is over, and expects to be at Bhamo by the end of May. (Hear, hear.)

INDIAN TARIFF.—Lord GEORGE HAMILTON said, in answer to Mr. FAWCETT: We have not yet received the whole of the replies of the Indian Government to the despatch of the Secretary of State for India of November 11, 1875. When the correspondence is complete I will lay it upon the table of the House.

PETITIONS.—Petitions in favour of an humble address to her Majesty praying her not to assume the title of Empress of India, were presented, by Mr. Fawcett, from Canterbury; also from a public meeting at Birkenhead; by Sir F. Perkins, from a meeting at Southampton; by Mr. W. E. Forster, from a meeting at Bradford; by Mr. James, from Gateshead; by Mr. Gourley, from Sunderland; and by Mr. Monk, from the Gloucester Liberal Association.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, April 11.—THE SUEZ CANAL.—On the report of the resolutions in Supply, Sir HENRY WOLFF

called attention to the negotiations between Colonel Stokes and M. de Lesseps in reference to the Suez Canal, and, commenting on the position of this country in relation to the administration of the Canal, pointed out that the three representatives of England on the direction would in all divisions were English interests were concerned find themselves in a minority. In fact, they would not be directors, but mere hostages, without any influence at all. His view of the matter was that the Government ought to have taken steps to make the Canal an international highway, instead of listening to weak-kneed counsellors and running the risk of turning what had been a political success into a financial complication.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER observed that it would not be consistent with his duty to follow Sir Henry Wolff into a general discussion of the subject, but his hon. friend might be assured that his statements should receive careful consideration, though he had no doubt given a somewhat exaggerated account of the situation. The Government were, indeed, at the present moment in communication with Foreign Powers with the view of giving the Canal an international character. With reference to the three English directors, Sir Henry Wolff had too hastily assumed that they would always be in a minority; but it was of comparatively little importance what the particular representation of England might be on the direction. The value of the purchase was wholly irrespective of such considerations. The subsidiary arrangements, though important in themselves, were still subsidiary; and when the proper time arrived he should be able to show that they had not been overlooked.—Mr. GOSCHEN said no doubt the House was in a difficult position when it was called upon to discuss a question of this kind without the correspondence being before them, but this might possibly be the only opportunity when the House of Commons would be able to discuss the subject before the matter was so far advanced that no backward step could be taken. That was the misfortune of the present position. They could not discuss the grounds and nature of the arrangement because they had not all the facts before them, and, when once the Government had committed themselves to the arrangement, it would be too late for the House to discuss it. They would only be able to criticise, and not to alter anything. If, as he gathered from Sir Stafford Northcote's remarks, the right hon. gentleman expected little advantage from the presence of three directors nominated by the Government on the board, he would venture to ask him to consider whether there would not be great disadvantages in their presence on the board. Surely, if we could use our influence without their presence, it would be undesirable to commit ourselves so distinctly as we might be committed by the presence of directors voting in a French company, under the French law, and in a French city. He understood that the negotiations were still in progress, and that any objection which might be taken to any part of the scheme would still receive the extended consideration of the Government; therefore he ventured to submit these observations.—Mr. BAILLIE COCHRANE pointed out that there were many collateral questions concerned, and that in the absence of the necessary information it was impossible to discuss the matter satisfactorily.—Sir G. CAMPBELL was gratified at finding that the purchase of the Canal shares did not necessitate our having anything to do with Egyptian finances, which were at present in an insolvent state.—Sir. G. ELLIOT, alluding to the proposal to expend £30,000,000 upon the improvement of the canal, described such an outlay as quite unnecessary. The works were in excellent condition, and he had no doubt that at the end of the nineteen years the shares for which we had paid £4,000,000 would be worth £8,000,000. The Canal could be kept in perfect order for less than £1,000 a mile, or £90,000 a year.—After a few remarks from Sir C. DILKE and Mr. C. B. DENISON, the report of Supply was agreed to.—The House adjourned until Monday, April 24.

INDIA OFFICE, 10th April, 1876.

THE SECRETARY of STATE for INDIA in COUNCIL GIVES NOTICE, That he will be PREPARED to RECEIVE, on FRIDAY, the 28th of April instant, at or before Twelve o'clock, TENDERS for a LOAN of £4,000,000, on Security of Stock to be created under the provisions of the Act 37 Vict. ch. 3, and to bear Interest at the rate of Four Pounds per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly at the Bank of England, on the 5th April and the 5th October in each year.

The Stock not to be redeemable until the 10th October, 1888, but to be redeemable at par on or after that day, upon one year's previous notice having been given in the London Gazette by the Secretary of State for India in Council.

The Books of the Stock will be kept at the Bank of England, where all Assignments and Transfers will be made. No Stamp Duties whatsoever will be charged on the Transfers.

The Tenders to be for the whole or any part of such Loan, but not for sums of less than £500 Stock, and to state what amount of money will be given for every £100 of the said Stock. Tenders at a price including fractions of a shilling other than sixpence will not be accepted. Tenders by the same person at various prices must be made out and delivered separately. Each separate Tender is to be delivered in, sealed, at the Chief Cashier's Office, Bank of England, and the amount of Stock subscribed for to be written on the outside of the Tender.

A deposit of £5 per cent. upon the amount of Stock tendered for must, at the same time, be paid at the same Office, to be returned in the event of the Tenders not being accepted, and parties tendering must be careful not to enclose the Deposit in the sealed Tender.

So much of the amount tendered and accepted, to be paid at the Bank of England on account of the Secretary of State for India in Council, on Friday, the 5th May, 1876, as, when added to the Deposit paid on the Tenders being delivered, will leave Eighty Pounds for every One Hundred Pounds of Stock, to be paid as under, viz.:—

£30 per cent. on Tuesday, the 30th May, 1876;
£30 per cent. on Tuesday, the 27th June, 1876;
£20 per cent. on Tuesday, the 1st August, 1876;

but parties who so desire may pay up in full, and will be allowed a discount at the rate of Four Pounds per cent. per annum upon the anticipated payments.

The Dividend payable on the 5th October, 1876, to be a six months' dividend upon the Capital Amount of Stock contracted for on the said 28th April.

In the event of the receipt of Tenders (at or above the minimum price to be fixed by the Secretary of State for India in Council on the 28th April) for a larger amount than that proposed to be raised, the Tenders, at the lowest price accepted, will be subject to a pro rata diminution. No allotment will be made of a less amount than £50.

Due notice will be given when the Scrip Certificates are ready, and these will be delivered only to the parties entitled, or to their order, at the Chief Cashier's Office at the Bank of England.

For each instalment after the payment of the first, which is due on the 5th of May, 1876, a proportional amount of Stock will be created for the contributors. The Stock for the first instalment, including the Deposit, to be created at the same time with that which will be due on the last.

No Tender will be received after Twelve o'clock on the said 28th day of April, nor unless upon a printed Form, which must not be enclosed in an Envelope.

Forms of Tender may be obtained at the Chief Cashier's Office, Bank of England, or of Mr. HUBERT SCOTT, the Broker to the Secretary of State for India in Council, 16, Throgmorton-street, London, E.C.

BY
ARTHUR ALLEN DURTNALL, of the High Court of Chancery.
Price, fully Tinted, mounted on Roller, or in Case, 20s. Size, about 40 in. by 50 in.
Showing, at one view, all the principal nations, governments, and empires which have existed in that country from the earliest times to the suppression of the Great Mutiny, A.D. 1858; with the date of each historical event according to the various eras used in India. By this Chart, any person, however ignorant of the subject, may, by an hour's attention, obtain a clear view of the broad lines of Indian History, and of the evolutions which have resulted in the dominion of her Majesty as EMPRESS OF INDIA. It will be found invaluable for EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES, especially in Colleges and Schools, where an Indian career is in contemplation. It will also be found of permanent utility in all Libraries and Offices as a work of ready reference for the connection of events and dates. Besides the History of India, it includes the contemporaneous histories of Afghanistan, Central Asia, and Europe.

A RELIEVO MAP OF INDIA.
BY HENRY F. BRION.
In Frame, 21s.
"A map of this kind brings before us such a picture of the surface of a given country as no ordinary map could ever do. To the mind's eye of the average Englishman, India consists of 'the plains' and 'the hills,' chiefly of the former, the hills being limited to the Himalayas and the Nilgiris. The new map will at least enable him to correct his notions of Indian geography. It combines the usual features of a good plain map of the country on a scale of 150 miles to the inch, with a faithful representation of all the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus bringing out into clear relief the comparative heights and outlines of all the hill-ranges, and showing broad tracts of uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a very practised eye. The plains of Upper India are reduced to their true proportions; the Central Provinces, Malwa, and Western Bengal reveal their actual ruggedness at a glance; and Southern India, from the Vindhyas to Cape Comorin, proclaims its real height above the sea-level. To the historical as well as the geographical student such a map is an obvious and important aid in tracing the course of past campaigns, in realising the conditions under which successive races carried their arms or settlements through the Peninsula, and in comprehending the difference of race, climate, and physical surroundings which make up our Indian Empire. Set in a neat frame of maplewood, the map seems to attract the eye like a prettily-coloured picture, and its price, a guinea, should place it within the reach of all who care to combine the useful with the ornamental."—Home News.

PYRETIC SALINE.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, April 3; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, April 1; Calcutta, March 31.

THE 3rd Sind Horse and a Wing of Jacob's Rifles, with 150 Guides, were to escort Major Sandeman from Jacobabad to Khelat. It appears that Major Sandeman is not merely charged with messages to the Khan, but has orders to use the troops sent with him in keeping the Bolan Pass open. They will begin by escorting a Kafila of 2,000 camels through the Pass, which has lately been closed up. The force will summer in Khelat, and escort back the autumn Kafilas. Every effort will, we are told, be made to complete the Indus Valley Railway, for which the grant this year amounts to £1,000,000; and a large sum has also been sanctioned for further improvements in Karachi harbour. As soon as the railway is finished, Sind will be definitely severed from Bombay, and will be annexed to the Punjab, or formed into a Chief Commissionership. The latter alternative, says the Pioneer, is that of which Indian opinion would most approve. It is argued that for the proper control of so large an extent of border land there will be required a Commissioner of special qualifications, directly subordinate to the Government of India.

SIR LEWIS PELLY'S sudden determination to return to India after being named for a seat at the Indian Council has caused a good deal of speculation in India. There are some who profess to see in his return the foreshadowing of a radical change in our Indian frontier policy. The Times of India believes it is no secret that the Governor-General's late agent at Baroda had an eye to the Lieutenant-Governorship in the Punjab. Is it possible—asks our contemporary—"that in the event of Sir Henry Davies retiring shortly, Sir Lewis will step into his shoes? He is hardly likely to revert to the Rajputana Agency. If Mr. Disraeli is to be believed, we are to show the Russians, and other people supposed to be inimical to our rule in India, that we intend to hold the country against all comers, "gunboat" Pelly is the man for the occasion." As we cannot enlighten our contemporary on this point, we ought perhaps to say nothing. But while guessing is the fashion, we may as well pull a bow at a venture. If Sind is to be separated from Bombay, and not incorporated with the Punjab, perhaps Sir L. Pelly will be its first Chief Commissioner.

ALTHOUGH Sir W. Muir's Budget Statement was published in Calcutta on March 31 no further particulars than those already known to us appear in the Bombay or Calcutta papers.

ON Saturday, March 26, the Calcutta Municipal Bill was passed through the Bengal Legislative Council, and awaited only the Viceroy's sanction. In deference to public opinion, Sir Richard Temple had agreed to modify the clauses which defined the objects of municipal expenditure and the occasions on which the local Government might interfere with the proceedings of the new Municipal body. Some fault, however, was still found with the Bill. It is objected that the paid servants of the new Council—the Chairman and his subordinates—will be practically independent of the Corporation. As it will have no direct power to appoint or remove its own office-bearers, the new Municipality can hardly be called a fully self-governing body. Again, the union in one person of the two offices of Chairman of the Corporation and Commissioner of Police is condemned by all except the majority of the Bengal Council. Nevertheless it is admitted that the present Municipal Bill is a great improvement upon its predecessor, and will fail, as the Pioneer remarks, "only if its opponents carry out their threat of declining to offer themselves as candidates, simply because the Bill is not so perfect as they would wish it to be."

THE party which was sent to lay out the boundary pillars marking the limit of British territory through the Karenni country have completed their task and returned to Tonghoo. They seem to have met with no interruption to their labours, such as befel Major Grant Allan when he was laying out the original boundary line north of Pegu. The Major's party were exposed to frequent annoyances, and were once fired upon, when an officer was killed. But that happened shortly after the Burmese War, before order under British rule had been thoroughly established in Pegu.

AT Rupur, in the Punjab, on the 21st March, a Pathan prisoner, employed on the canal works, made a murderous attack upon Dr. Dickson, the Superintendent of the Jail, by striking him a blow from behind with a pickaxe. A subordinate in the Canal Department, who was talking to Dr. Dickson, was also struck, and both gentlemen were felled to the ground. Happily no serious injury was done to either, although Dr. Dickson lay for some time insensible. The prisoner, who seemed to have no desire to escape, was promptly secured.

SHAIKH PALTU, the Sepoy who in 1857 saved the lives of his adjutant and sergeant major at Barrackpore, and afterwards retired to the privacy of his native village, has just received that recognition of his services which he has hitherto so carefully shirked. Through the representation of the District Officer of Hamirpur, the Government of India has at length persuaded Shaikh Paltu to accept a Third Class Order of Merit, and his pension as havildar from the day his regiment was disbanded.

COLONEL WILLIAMS, Director of State Railways, had just left Khandwa for Agra, after having inspected the Holkar and Nimach State Railway lines. The line from Mhau to Ujain, via Indor, is to be opened in June next for goods and passenger traffic, and the line from Chural Chauki to Mhau about the same time next year; Government insisting that the works on the ghât division should be completed first.

A NOTICE in the Gazette of Saturday, April 1, orders, on the authority of the Secretary of State, that, as a temporary measure, subaltern officers of British regiments, who have only passed the Lower Standard Examination in Hindustani, but who are in other respects duly qualified under existing regulations, may be admitted as probationers for the Indian Staff Corps in the post of 2nd wing or squadron subaltern. These officers will receive their regimental pay and allowances, also horse allowance, to the amount of Rs. 60 a month if attached to cavalry, and Rs. 30 if attached to infantry regiments, but will receive no staff allowances until they pass the Higher Standard Examination. If they fail to pass this examination within one year from date of appointment they will be required to rejoin their regiments. This order is applicable to the three Presidencies.

IF the utterances of the Native Press in India afforded a fair clue to native feeling, we should be tempted to think that the proposed addition to the Queen's titles found as little favour in India as it has done in this country. The Rast Goftar for instance speaks in the following strain:—

If it be necessary for her Majesty to assume this title, why should Mr. Disraeli hesitate to call her Empress of England as well as of India? Why "Queen" of England and "Empress" of India? Which is the more dignified title of the two? If the latter, why should the people of England be ashamed to confer it on their honoured sovereign? Or is it to be supposed that some future day her Majesty will attain the dignity now denied to her by a third of the House of Commons? That seems very improbable. If the people of England deem the title unconstitutional and oppose it on that ground, why should India tamely submit to the innovation. Why should Mr. Disraeli ride the high horse with India, unless it be that he means to triumph over her prostrate condition. The move seems very like taking an advantage of India's quiescent attitude.

Why, indeed, should we expect India to feel honoured by a title of which almost every Englishman feels ashamed? But we have been assured in very high quarters that the Princes of India at any rate wish for nothing better than the privilege of calling their Queen an Empress. And yet, it seems, according to the Indu Prakash, that such assurance is rather wide of the mark. That journal deems it matter for much regret, "that such an auspicious event as the visit of the future King to this jewel in the British Crown should be spoiled by any measure so certain to produce dissatisfaction among the best props of the British Empire in India—the Native Princes." Turning to Native Opinion for better guidance, what do we find? Admitting that some addition to the Royal Titles—whether in the shape of Queen or Empress—is likely to "produce in our minds a feeling of pride in the grandeur and renown of the Empire," that journal argues that such a feeling should be sustained by something more real than a mere title:—

Are the proceedings of the Indian Government calculated to supply this nourishment for an honourable pride in the people of India? Our laws are degenerating into mere official decrees, and the official is becoming more and more a Nabob—in all departments of the State—and his power over the purse, the liberty, and the life of the subject is becoming more despotic now, than, strange to say, it was ever before. The present course of events is, therefore, more flattering to the vanity of the bumptious Anglo-Indian official than to the subject, and the assumption of an Indian title by her Majesty per se is not calculated to remedy the evil—rather the reverse.

The Bengal Samáchar for its part is ready to acquiesce in anything that Mr. Disraeli may desire, but "cannot quite see why there should be such opposition to the measure in Parliament, if no very serious consequences are involved in its success." If utterances like these reflect the opinions of a large number of educated natives, we may infer that the Royal Titles Bill carries to their minds about as much significance as it does to those of Russian observers. If it means anything to them, it means at the best an idle compliment which nobody asks for, and which some are quite ready to regard as an insult.

ACCORDING to recent information from India, the Viceroy has decided that upon a vacancy occurring in the command of a brigade of Royal Artillery, the next senior officer of the brigade in the performance of regimental duty in any Presidency, whether in command of any portion of the brigade or not, shall draw the brigade command allowance. While drawing this allowance he will cease to draw any allowance of which he may have been in receipt for the command of the artillery in a station, district, or division.

AN official note on the Trade Statistics of the Punjab for 1874-75 contains some rather curious figures. The weight of the traffic of 1874-75 comes out as 1,56,35,619 maunds, as compared with 66,41,549 maunds in the previous year; the value as 16,95,19,610 rupees, or, in round numbers, seventeen millions sterling, as compared with 4,51,26,153 rupees, or, in round numbers, four and a-half millions sterling. Surely these figures must be wrong somewhere. Coming to details we find that while the largest cotton imports hitherto recorded were 65,587 maunds, valued at 73,51,156 rupees, those registered in the year under notice amount to no less than 3,41,474 maunds, valued at 7,40,66,464 rupees, or nearly seven and a-half millions sterling. Of this quantity only 61,711 maunds were re-exported, so that 2,79,763 maunds, valued at 6,40,62,656 rupees, were consumed, or retained for consumption in the Province. This—as the Englishman remarks—"is more than three times the land revenue of the Province, and represents an expenditure per head of population of no less than 3-10 rupees—this on European cloths alone. These averages would of themselves justly excite suspicion; but when we further add that the value of these cloths amount to forty-one per cent. of the total imports of this class of goods for all India, we feel that we must pronounce the figures impossible ones."

WE regret to learn from a telegram to the Times that the Maharajah of Patiala died on Friday, April 14. He had lately been suffering from liver complaint, and while shooting had an epileptic fit. He was taken home insensible, and soon expired. The Maharajah, as our readers may remember, was the same Chief whose splendid jewels attracted such attention during the Prince of Wales's visit. He was the son of Rajah Narindar Singh, the first of the Sikh Chiefs in Sirhind to take up arms in our behalf during the Mutiny; and the services he rendered us in keeping the road open from Lahor to Delhi during the siege, in fighting and dispersing rebels, and in holding disturbed districts in our name, cannot readily be forgotten. The late Rajah's eldest son, aged five, succeeds him. During his minority the Administration will probably be a Council of Regency, with the present Prime Minister as President. It is sad to think that two of the Rajahs who paid their homage to the Prince of Wales are already dead. The Rao of Kach has soon been followed by the Rajah of Patiala.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram the Bastar riots are looking more serious, but there has been no actual fighting as yet. Large numbers of armed rioters are collecting. The people's anger is chiefly directed against the Rajah because of his exactions. He has shut himself up in a fort. The Governor's agent at Vizagapatam has gone to the district, and a wing of the 7th Native Infantry follows. This piece of news, however, is rather stale, for the Madras papers of March 25 report the same tidings in differents words and in greater detail. The Madras Athenæum, for instance, told us that about the 22nd March a rising of the inhabitants had taken place at a village in the district called Bastar, and that two full companies of H.M.'s 7th Regiment Native Infantry under Captains Godfrey and Pearse were proceeding by forced marches to the scene of the outbreak, accompanied by the Agent to the Governor General. Particulars of the rising were not then known, but exactions on the part of the Rajah were said to be the cause. According to the Madras Times the Rajah was even then being besieged in his palace by his own rayats, who threatened to murder him; and he had applied to the British authorities at Vizagapatam for help. In compliance with his request two companies of the 7th M.N.I. had started from Vizagapatam for the scene of disturbance. According to one report, a small party of native police were repulsed by the insurgents armed with battle-axes. A third company of infantry had also been ordered off to Bastar.

BASTAR forms an outlying part of the Chatisgarh district, between Nágpur on the west and Jaipur on the east. It is thinly peopled by aboriginal Gonds, and its Rajah pays us a yearly tribute of Rs. 5,000. The town of Bastar, or Jagdalpur, lies on the Indrawati branch of the Godávari, near the Jaipur frontier. The Vizagapam district, on the eastern border of Jaipur, stretches along the coast from the Godávari northward to Ganjam.

THE Russian Invalid states that several tribes of the Kara Kirghiz, principally the important tribe of the Bargas, refused to take part in the general submission of Khokan under Russian rule, and concentrated themselves in Gulshah under the leadership of Abdullah Beg. General Scobeleff, at the head of a considerable force, was despatched by General Kolpakowski with orders to demand the submission of all the Kirghiz within three days, and to enforce his demand in case of refusal. A despatch has since been received from him, dated Khojand, April 6, announcing that all the Chiefs of the Bargas and other Kirghiz tribes had given in their complete submission to General Scobeleff, with the sole exception of Abdullah Beg and two of his companions, and that a detachment of fifty Dshighites has been sent in pursuit.

SOME further particulars of Lord Lytton's address to his Council, after taking the oaths of office on Wednesday, April 12, have been telegraphed by the Times correspondent. Referring to recent discussions in Parliament and elsewhere on the relative position of the Home and Indian Governments, the Viceroy said that as his own name had been introduced into them he deemed himself entitled to take the earliest opportunity of trying to remove any doubt regarding his profound sense of personal responsibility. From whatever party the Queen's Government might be formed, he would always be ready to welcome its timely and Constitutional co-operation as a guarantee for the salutary freedom of the Council's deliberations, and the undisputed dignity of its authority. He felt himself strongly supported by the generous confidence of the present Government, and he hoped to win a no less generous support in India. He then added:—"Aided by your advice, relying on your trusted experience, it will be my constant endeavour to keep a strict watch over the economical management and cautious progress of the Administration. Such economy and caution are, indeed, specially imposed upon us by the present unprecedented disturbance of the currency, but I shall also claim your co-operation in providing with unflinching firmness for the safety and repose of the Empire." From all this we may infer that Lord Lytton has entered office with a just sense of what is due to his position as the head of the Indian Government in India. With every desire to stand well with the Home Government, he does not forget that the Governor General of India must above all things uphold "the salutary freedom of the Council's deliberations and the undisputed dignity of its authority." We may therefore believe on good grounds that the predictions of those persons who regarded the new Viceroy as only an obedient instrument in the hands of those who sent him out will be duly falsified by the event. With the best inclinations in the world to obey orders from home, an Indian Viceroy cannot be long in office without falling insensibly into that posture of practical independence which his predecessors have been equally driven to maintain.

LORD LYTTON and his suite were to proceed to Simla on the 22nd current. Lady Lytton and party arrived there at four o'clock on the afternoon of April 17.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram the Viceroy left Calcutta on Saturday last, the 22nd, and arrives at Simla to-morrow. On Thursday a deputation from the Trades' Association presented an address of welcome to Lord Lytton. The Viceroy, in replying, vindicated Lord Salisbury's policy regarding the Cotton Duties, and said their abolition or reduction at the cost of adding to taxation was never intended. He spoke warmly of Lord Salisbury's assiduous devotion to the interests of India. For himself, nothing would ever induce him to tax the people of India for any exclusive benefit to their English fellow-subjects. At present the smallness of the surplus, the constantly-increasing expenditure, and the unforeseen consequences of the depreciation of the currency rendered it impossible to make the smallest reduction in the country's limited sources of income.

FROM the same source we learn that a public meeting has been held at Bombay regarding the revenue jurisdiction Act, and it was resolved to memorialise the Secretary of State against the Act. The refusal of the Government to grant the use of the Town Hall for the meeting provokes much comment. The Act is generally condemned by the Press.

LORD NORTHBROOK arrived at Colombo on Friday, the 21st, after a pleasant voyage. He stays a short time in Ceylon as the guest of the Governor. Sir R. Temple has gone to Darjiling.

THERE is a temporary lull in Khelat affairs. Major Sandeman's advance has been retarded near the entrance of the Bolan Pass by an outbreak of cholera among the escort.

ON the Punjab frontier there have been some skirmishes lately between our troops and the Afridis, in which we lost three killed and two wounded. The whole tribe, except one section, now wishes to submit, and probably the affair will be speedily settled. Troops have been sent from Peshawar to defend Cherat.

ANOTHER mutineer of 1857 has been brought to justice. He was a trooper in the 1st Bombay Cavalry, and was concerned in the Mutiny of Nasirabad, in June of that year. He has been tried by court-martial and convicted, and sentenced to fifteen years' transportation.

THE Census taken a fortnight ago gives Calcutta a population of 423,000. The figures, however, are liable to further correction. The Begam of Bhopal is building a free hospital at her capital, as a memorial of the Prince of Wales's visit to India. Reports from Madras state that the Bastar affair is settled, the rayats dispersing and the troops returning.

AN important outpost at the mouth of the Gulf of Aden has just been annexed to the British Empire. The island of Socotra lies about 150 miles E.N.E. of Cape Guardafui, the southern gate to the Gulf far up whose northern shore rises the fortress of Aden, our eastern Gibraltar. The island is about eighty miles long by thirty broad, with bold coast-line, enclosing a table-land about eight hundred feet above the sea, with high mountain ridges in the centre. Its southern side is very barren and devoid of bays or creeks, but the northern coast is broken by a number of openings which afford a secure shelter for ships. At the bottom of one of these havens, at the foot of a high and rugged mountain, lies the miserable village of Tamarida, the abode of the principal chief of the country, and therefore regarded by strangers as the capital of the island. The northern and eastern sides of the island are more or less cultivated; date-trees, cotton, tamarinds, and above all aloes, being the staple products. Camels, oxen, sheep, goats, and asses are also bred there. The inhabitants, numbering 5,000, consist of Arabs, Abyssinians, and aboriginals; the Arabs being the ruling race. In the sixteenth century the island was conquered by the Portuguese, who afterwards abandoned it to its native rulers. In 1834 Lord W. Bentinck, then Governor-general of India, had the island explored, with a view to establish a coal depot for the Royal Mail steamers. The result of this exploration having appeared satisfactory, the East India Company bought Socotra for £20,000 from the Imam of Muscat, to whom it then belonged. An establishment was formed on the island, but disease soon thinned the small garrison, and the new colony was abandoned. As a link in the chain of strong posts by which India will henceforth be bound to England, Socotra will doubtless prove better worth occupying now than it did forty years ago.

AFTER spending several days at Gibraltar, the Prince of Wales landed at Cadiz from the Osborne yacht at three o'clock on the 20th, and went on to Seville. On arriving there he was received at the railway station by three officers of King Alphonso, who welcomed him in the name of his Majesty, and repeated the King's invitation to visit Madrid, which was formally accepted by his Royal Highness.

WE regret to notice the death of Colonel Basil Bacon, of the Bengal Staff Corps, which occurred at Cannes, on April 4, on his way home from India. The deceased officer entered the Bengal army in 1838, and became colonel in June, 1869. He had served in the Gwalior campaign of 1843, at the battle of Panniar, and commanded a detachment of the corps of Sappers and Miners during the Punjab campaign of 1848-9, including the affair of Ramnagar, and the battles of Chilianwalla and Gujarat. Colonel Bacon had served for many years in the Military Secretariat at Calcutta, and was about to retire on a pension with the rank of major-general.

THE new volume of Sir John Kaye's Sepoy War has already reached its second edition, in the very height of the controversies aroused by its first appearance. Very little therefore has been altered in the text of the book; but some interesting additions—to the extent of some twenty-five pages—have been made to the Appendix, in correction or elucidation of various minor matters of detail, such, for instance, as the conduct of Udaipur during the Mutiny, the escape of the prisoner from Fort William, the sufferings of the fugitives from Faizabad, and the doings of the Kashmir Contingent at the memorable storming of Delhi.

WE are glad to learn that the account of Sladen's and Browne's missions to Burmah and Western China, as given by Dr. Anderson in his recently published work, "Mandalay and Momein," is to be followed up by the publication of Mr. Margary's Journal, kept to within a few days of his tragic end. The publishers, Messrs. Macmillan and Co., will bring out this book during the present season.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, April 24, 1876.

A TRAVELLER'S IMPRESSIONS OF INDIA.

WE admit with Professor Monier Williams, that the impressions of a flying traveller "are not generally worth recording." But from such a disqualification the long and well-considered letter, in which the Boden Professor of Sanscrit has just conveyed to the readers of the Times the results of his recent tour in India, may fairly claim to be exempted. A ripe and thoughtful scholar, whose life has been spent in studying the Indian languages and literature, could hardly travel many weeks in India without picking up some useful knowledge; and Mr. Williams was specially fortunate in the time and circumstances of his Indian trip, which led him in the track of the Prince of Wales, and enabled him to mix with natives of all classes more freely than he might else have done.

Beginning with the climate, Mr. Williams believes the cold-weather climate of India to be "more salubrious than that of England. Perpetual sunshine, balmy breezes, perfect dryness of air and soil, with lovely flowers and beautiful foliage constantly before the eyes, cannot fail to exhilarate the spirits and benefit the health. Many invalids, who habitually resort to Italy to escape the damp and gloom of an English winter, would do well to visit India occasionally." They would certainly be liable to few of those unpleasant changes which sometimes annoy the visitors to Cannes, Nice, and other health resorts in Southern Europe. For dry, bracing air, however, they must not go to Bengal or south of the Narbada as a general rule. From November to the end of February the climate of Upper India is probably as delightful as that of Cairo, but it lacks the element of sea-air, which enhances the charm of the Riviera. And the voyage home through the Red Sea in March or April might undo the good effects of the previous months. Still it is a pity that English tourists of various classes do not avail themselves more largely of the help provided for them by the Suez Canal, in order to lessen the mass of popular ignorance concerning one of the most interesting and important parts of the British Empire. "How is it"—asks the Professor, with special regard to the varieties of animal and plant life in India—"that zoologists and botanists do not come by scores to this country and revel in the rich fare—the endless variety spread out in every direction, and asking to be enjoyed and appreciated? For my own part, I would rather see them abound than sportsmen, of whom, indeed, there is no lack at all. In some parts of India the study of ants alone is an inexhaustible subject of interest. But I have looked in vain for entomologists in my travels." Nor is he less surprised that other scientific men do not oftener turn their steps towards India. "How is it that there are not more telescopic batteries directed against the heavens in an atmosphere unequalled for clearness, stillness, and all the conditions favourable to new conquests in the field of astronomical research?" The admirers of scenery also would do well, he thinks, to explore a country which presents "an epitome of the whole world."

Where can be found more wonderful contrasts, where such amazing variety? Monotonous plains, sandy deserts, fertile fields, immense districts wooded like English parks, forest, grove, and jungle, gentle undulation, hill and dale, rock, crag, precipice, snowy peak—everything is here. But the grand distinctive feature which impresses a traveller most is the sublime range which, stretching from east to west, blends with other ranges towards the north, and surrounds the whole upper part of India with a mighty natural rampart, shutting it out from the rest of the continent of Asia, and, indeed, from the rest of the world, except from the sea.

In order to realise the grandeur and vastness of Himálayan scenery, he bids us "imagine the Jung Frau piled on Mont Blanc, and repeated in a succession of peaks, stretching apparently half round the horizon in an unbroken line, far more extended than that of the Alps as seen from Berne." If the passes through these mountains may yet open the way to fresh invasions, Mr. Williams has the good sense to acknowledge that "no Power that cannot beat us at sea is ever likely to dispossess us of India."

In his estimate of the native character Mr. Williams keeps clear of one-sided and superficial judgments. He has found

No people in Europe more religious—none more patiently persevering in common duties, none more docile and amenable to authority, none more courteous or respectful towards age and learning, none more dutiful to parents, none more intelligent. Superstition, immorality, untruthfulness, pride, selfishness—all these and other faults and vices, of course, abound, but not more than they do in other countries unpenetrated by the spirit of true Christianity, and not more than will be found among those merely nominal Christians who, after all, constitute the real mass of the people in Europe.

The varieties of race, language, and religion he touches off in a few neat but carefully considered paragraphs. Brahmanism, for instance, with the educated classes, means "pure pantheism, or a kind of pantheistic atheism." But it encourages worship before images and symbols of Vishnu, Siva, &c., as "a help for weak-minded persons," who form, of course, the great majority, and naturally "turn adoration before idols into adoration of the idols themselves"—a process not peculiar to un-Christian countries. Of the Mohammedans he rightly observes that they are "much Hinduised in their habits and ways." We must, however, question the statement that they "are chiefly the result of a forced conversion from Hinduism by the Mohammedan conquerors." This is surely too sweeping an inference from the well-known fact that several millions of Mussulmans in Bengal, Kashmir, Sind, and one or two other provinces, are descended from Hindu converts to Islam. With regard to the prospects of Christianity, Mr. Williams speaks in terms with which no impartial observer will disagree. Education is upheaving and undermining the old creeds, especially in the upper layers of society. But its tendency in the main is only to produce new sects and schools of pure Theists. Christianity "has made most progress among people of low caste, and with some of the aboriginal tribes." Real conversions will not be more common until our Christianity adapts itself more closely to native feelings and caste-usages. In describing the caste system as it now exists, the Professor is fully alive to the changes which that system has undergone since the days of Manu. Caste, he says,

Is now so divided and subdivided that even the Brahmans are broken up into innumerable classes and tribes, one claiming superiority over the other. Some of these are little more than groups of families bound together by a few peculiar usages. In other cases, caste is only another name for an association of men united by common occupation in a kind of trade union, every such combination being cemented by the practice of a few distinctive religious observances.

With the disappearance of the old broad divisions of caste, and in the general absence of national or patriotic ideas and motives, the family bond "appears to be the strongest tie left," a tie, indeed, which operates in India far more powerfully than in Europe.

On the practical results of our rule in India Professor Williams discourses shrewdly, with just pride in his country's achievements, yet without any blindness to weak points and dangerous tendencies. He finds "everywhere conspicuous monuments of the good intentions, integrity, and efficiency of our administration." Nowhere else is so much work done "so well and conscientiously, and with such a single regard to the discharge of duty," as by the Queen's servants in India. "Even men of inferior energy and mental calibre, who, in England, would do little to benefit society, are, by the circumstances of their position in India, drawn out and developed into useful officers and able administrators." Instead of a country "devastated by intestine wars, oppressed by despotic rulers, depopulated by famine, and left to succumb unresistingly to the attacks of pestilence or to the destructive energy of physical forces," what—asks Mr. Williams—do we now find? "The same forces tamed and controlled, steam and electricity made to subserve the purposes of traffic and intercourse, good roads, canals, and waterworks constructed, rights of all kinds secured, justice impartially administered, education actively promoted, and everywhere a thriving, law-abiding, rapidly-increasing population." Our error, if any, has lain in trying to do too much. Authority has been unduly centralised, first in Calcutta, and now in London, so that India is at present more governed from the central terminus of Queen, Lords, and Commons, than by those who are at the Indian end of the wires. Formerly the ignorance and apathy of Parliament were of little importance; now its interposition may often complicate our difficulties. Moreover, the possibility of conveying a message backwards and forwards between the India-office and Calcutta in a few hours fosters a forgetfulness of the enormous distance dividing the Western from the Eastern Empire, and of the vast gulf separating the condition of England and of English society and habits of thought from those of India. Hence it is often supposed that Western ideas may be suddenly transfused into an Eastern mind, and English institutions abruptly transplanted to an Indian soil, when neither the one nor the other is prepared to receive them.

The farce of municipal Government in many parts of India is illustrated by a story—not very new—about a Collector who said that, as chairman of a municipal board, he could make native members vote whichever way he wanted them. No doubt he could, and will for some time to come; still the municipal system was worth trying in the land of village communities and panchayats, and the experiment, if continued long enough, may yet prove a success.

The Professor during his Indian trip saw a good deal of the Native Princes, whose relations to the Government he has briefly but accurately described. Some of them, he owns are enlightened men. Many have been brought up under our superintendence with great care. But I fear the truth about many of them is this. On coming of age they are allowed to manage their kingdoms, under the eye of our Residents and Political Agents, who watch them without direct interference. At first they give great promise, but soon become surrounded by designing Ministers, who, to serve their own interests—which are better promoted by bad government than by good—encourage the young Rajahs in a life of dissipation. Very few resist the evil influences of their surroundings for any length of time. By degrees they succumb and degenerate. In the end they fall into excesses and become debilitated in body and mind.

A good example however of the few native rulers who really consult their subjects' welfare is adduced in the present Rajah of Kashmir, "the Augustus of Indian Princes," as Mr. Williams calls him for his marked encouragement of literature and education. With regard to the progress of Government schools and colleges, the Professor fears that, while very little impression has yet been made on the masses, the actual result has been only to inform the mind without forming the character. Youths grow conceited, lose faith in their own religion without acquiring any other, learn to despise their fathers' callings, and so forth. All this may be true, but it is not predicable of India only. The same thing may be said of the Professor's remarks on the small progress made in educating women. It is obvious that "before we can raise the women of India, we must first raise the men." But the women, though "faithful wives and devoted mothers," are "grossly ignorant;" therefore willing slaves to the tyranny of their Brahman priests; while the men have hitherto been unable or unwilling to deliver them from a yoke which serves at any rate to keep them out of mischief.

Coming to the question of native feeling towards ourselves and our rule, the Professor holds that the gulf between us has widened since the Mutiny. This may be so, but most of the instances adduced by him point to a state of things which existed before the Mutiny no less than now. It is nothing new for Englishmen and Natives to live apart in the same town and to ride in separate railway carriages. The many differences in thought, feeling, manners and customs between the conquering and conquered races were as great in Clive's day as in ours. The imperious bearing of so many Englishmen towards the Natives springs from causes that work for the maintenance of our rule. It is a pity that the strong hand is not always gloved so softly as it might be, but it is well that the natives should not mistake mild words for conscious weakness. Mr. Williams himself refers to "many cases in which the mild Hindu is not a whit milder in manner than those who are set over him." Is this indeed a sign of growing estrangement, or only a result of natural growth in freedom under a rule which has set itself consciously to train the natives in self-government? That the gulf has widened however since the Mutiny we will not deny, and there is, we fear, some foundation for the Professor's belief that "the mass of unthinking people would rather be badly governed by their own chiefs than well governed by us;" just as many an Irishman still yearns for Home Rule and shillelaghs in preference to the best things provided for him by the tyrant Saxon.

OUR DUTY TO INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Prince of Wales's visit to the East and the new title about to be assumed by our Sovereign have naturally drawn much public attention to India; and hopes and opinions have been very generally expressed that the Royal visit will be productive of great benefit to that country, and that it will also powerfully promote the cause of Christianity among the people of India. Such reflections are pleasant to our feelings, and we readily, therefore, indulge in them; but how many are there who stop to consider whether the hopes and opinions thus expressed are based on any real ground? The Prince's kindly and courteous manners have doubtless favourably impressed those who were allowed to approach him; but men acquainted with India must know that neither her people nor her Princes are able, owing to innate ideas, to dissociate the Prince from the ruling power by which they are governed; and that the gratification manifested at the Royal visit must be assumed to have arisen from the conviction that the Prince, either directly or through representatives, is able to ameliorate the condition and redress the grievances of the millions who pressed forward to do him honour. Such conviction alone can account for the numberless petitions which were presented to his Royal Highness during his tour, and from which the memorialists are doubtless, at the present moment, anxiously looking for some measure of redress or relief.

The certain and immediate effect of the Prince's visit to India has been the expenditure of several millions sterling, for which the people of that country will be pinched for some years; and privations and sufferings will thus, for a time, keep alive the recollection of the Royal presence amongst them. As for the petitions, they must, of course, remain unheeded; and the hopes founded on them, after lingering for a season, must die and be replaced by sad and bitter disappointment.

Under these circumstances, it is difficult to see what those benefits are that we so complacently talk of as likely to arise from the Royal visit. The only benefit that seems possible may arise from the host of newspaper correspondents who followed the Prince, and by whose instrumentality the people of Great Britain may be enabled to form a more correct estimate than they now seem to have of the condition and feelings of their Indian fellow-subjects, and of those high duties which, as a ruling nation, they have failed in fulfilling towards the subject-race.

As regards Christianity, it is impossible to believe that the cause of a religion that enjoins poverty, humility, and brotherly love can be promoted by the display of pomp, extravagance, and luxury, while the characteristic features of our Indian Government, as seen by the people, continue to be constantly increasing exactions of the tax-gatherer, and a stern refusal to listen to the voice of the poor, i.e., the bulk of the population.

The police and the tax-gatherer are the only channels of communication that subsist between the people of India and their rulers, and the conduct of neither of those bodies is guided by the precepts of our gospel, or even the common dictates of humanity. The police, under the system inaugurated in 1862, are not placed under due control, and have, in consequence, become corrupt and oppressive to an almost incredible degree; and, although this fact has repeatedly been forced upon the attention of the authorities, no step has been taken to stop the growth of the evil. As for the taxgather, he has often been known to sicken at the duty imposed on him, and men have resigned highly remunerated posts in India from their unwillingness to become the instruments of torment and injustice to their fellow-creatures.

In order to realise the extent to which we have failed in our duty to India, we have only to consider the nature of the arrangement made for the happiness of the millions whose destinies Providence has placed in our hands. In 1858, India was made over to a Cabinet Minister, who has been left to rule that vast kingdom, unrestrained and unguided by supervision or control, although he is known to be personally ignorant of the country and people placed under his charge, and to labour under influences that are often incompatible with the interests of India, viz., the interests of his own Cabinet. This Minister, it is true, is responsible to Parliament; but has such responsibility proved to be anything more than nominal?—Has Parliament, during the last eighteen years, called for an account of the administration of India?—When individual members have urged that body to fulfil its duty towards India, have they not invariably been met by a direct refusal and by unmistakable signs that the subject of India was distasteful?—When the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the administration of Indian finances was at last consented to, was not the result rendered useless by Parliamentary combinations, although the inquiry brought to light maladministration and malversations that urgently called for reform?

The sooner the cant about governing India for the benefit of India itself is given up the more creditable will it be to our candour. At the same time, let us not beguile ourselves with the idea that we are governing India for our benefit, i.e., for the benefit of the English nation. Some Englishmen have certainly profited by our rule, by obtaining, through the influence of home politics, fat appointments in India for which they were totally unfit; and our ruinous irrigation and navigation works and minor undertakings of the same nature, while they uselessly burdened India with debt, served to fill the pockets of individuals likewise belonging to our own nation. But those are not national gains; they are rather national losses; for England can scarcely repudiate the debt contracted with the sanction of Parliament; while the incapacity and the want of scrupulous rectitude displayed in connection with some of our Indian schemes certainly detract from the character of our nation.

India, nevertheless, is a valuable property, that enriches us by its commerce, supplies a wide and practical field for the training of our army, and provides lucrative employment for our sons. The finest property in the world, however, may soon be ruined by mismanagement and neglect, and India is subjected to both at our hands.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

April 17. HERMIT.

THE INDIAN LEGISLATION BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—A Bill under the above title was introduced in the House of Commons in February this year, read a second time last month, and set down for discussion in Committee on the 1st May. Its objects are, 1st—to repeal the law which, at present, secures to Englishmen in India the right of trial by jury; and 2nd—to unable the Government of India to repeal or alter, at will, the letters patent of the High Courts established in that country under the authority of Acts of Parliament.

It is particularly worthy of remark that, when asking for powers so extraordinary and unconstitutional, the Government should not have vouchsafed a single word of explanation as to the necessity or expediency of the step they had taken; and that the Bill should have been allowed to attain its present advanced stage without a single question being asked on the subject. It is true that India is not represented in Parliament, and that Indian questions are, as a rule, distasteful to the members of that body; but this Bill affects not India only, but also one of the most valued rights of Englishmen; and moreover, by proposing to vest in the Executive powers that have hitherto been exercised by the Legislature alone, it tends to limit the functions and to weaken the authority of the Imperial Parliament itself. Let us hope, therefore, that, notwithstanding its Indian title, the Bill will receive some attention from Parliament, and that it will not be allowed to pass into law without some discussion upon its provisions. The following case will show the very great danger to which Englishmen will be exposed when deprived of their birthright to be tried by a jury; a right which they have hitherto preserved intact in India, while nothing is known to have occurred calling for the change which it is now proposed to make.

Mr. Henry Boyle Stevens, a young Englishman who attained his majority in 1872, became entitled to a sum of money bequeathed by his parents, and with which he proposed to try his fortune in India. On his arrival there he obtained employment in a tea plantation in Assam, and after a probation of some eighteen months, during which he gave satisfaction to his employers, he was about to be promoted to the managership of a garden, and intended buying a share in the concern, when his career was suddenly arrested and his prospects were dashed to the ground by his being arrested on a charge of murder, got up, as it subsequently became manifest, for the purpose of creating the belief that a certain contractor, who was in difficulties and had been evading a process of court, was dead.

The evidence for the prosecution was so contradictory and inconclusive, and so manifestly bore the stamp of falsehood and fabrication, that the jury, with the concurrence of the judge (Justice Markby, of the High Court of Calcutta), found a verdict of not guilty, without calling on the prisoner for his defence; and Mr. Pitt Kennedy, the standing counsel, who prosecuted on behalf of the Crown, confessed at the same time that he had been misled by the depositions he had seen before the trial, and that there really was no case against Mr. Stevens. Some four months, however, elapsed between the arrest and the trial, when Mr. Stevens was kept in prison, on worse than prison diet, in a country like Assam, where Europeans can preserve their health only by careful living and outdoor exercise, and by the time he was brought to Calcutta, in the custody of the police, his health had completely given way under the hardships he had endured. His body was covered with sores and painfully emaciated, and his voice was scarcely audible. Much of the money he had reserved for investment in a tea concern was used in legal expenses for proving his innocence, and he found himself after his trial ruined in his prospects and so shattered in health that he was unfit for any sort of work.

This case naturally excited much indignation, and the Landholders' Association of Bengal memorialised the Viceroy for an inquiry into the conduct of the magistrate who committed Mr. Stevens and of the police who got up the charge. The request was granted; but that esprit de corps that in all countries unites officials in their common defence was successfully exerted on the occasion on behalf of those implicated in Mr. Stevens's case. It became evident after the trial that the committing magistrate either was deplorably ignorant or had acted under evil influences, and it was hopeless to bring him out blameless. Moreover, it was said that he had acted with the concurrence, if not at the instigation, of a high official, the Judicial Commissioner of the Province. Delay, therefore, seemed the course best calculated to shield the guilty, as there was a reasonable chance of public indignation abating with time and of public attention being diverted to some other subject. Accordingly, a letter from the Government of India, dated the 18th December, 1874 (the trial having taken place in the preceding September), informed the Landholders' Association that "the Chief Commissioner of Assam had been unable to depute a competent officer to carry out the investigation, but that the Government of India had determined to initiate the inquiry asked for, and arrangements were being made for the selection of a competent officer." The result of the inquiry became known only a few months ago, in 1875, and established the facts that the committing magistrate had no evidence to justify the commitment, and that all the officers concerned in the prosecution had been guilty of gross irregularities, and that some of them were chargeable with worse.

Had the law which it is now proposed to enact been in a force in 1874, and Mr. Stevens been tried without a jury, by Court in Assam (where Courts are presided over by Executive officers, vested with judicial powers, although they have neither legal education nor training), there is no reason to doubt that he would have been found guilty and sentenced to death; and all Englishmen in India will be exposed to the same danger if section two of the "Indian Legislation Bill" is allowed to pass into law.

I shall not take up more of your valuable space at present, but shall crave permission, in a future letter, to illustrate, likewise by actual occurrences, the effect of another provision in the same Bill, viz., the power it proposes to vest in the Executive, to repeal or alter the letters patent of High Courts established under Acts of the Imperial Parliament.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

April 19, 1876.

CIVIS.

AFFAIRS IN KHELAT.—I.

Khelat is again the scene of intestine troubles, of such a nature that the active interference of the British Government is considered imperative. The political relations have been hitherto in the hands of the Commissioner of Sind and the Bombay Government, but the Government of India has now deputed a Deputy Commissioner from the Punjab to Khelat, and has sent the Punjab Frontier Commissioner down to Sind to act in Khelat affairs, under its own immediate orders.

This fact, in conjunction with the reiterated suggestions of experienced Frontier officers, from General Jacob downwards, for the occupation of Khelat and Quetta, renders Khelat affairs a subject of interest to such as regard with attention the state of the North-Western frontier of India. A summary, therefore, of the antecedent history and politics of the State will not be out of place.

Belochistan, as now curtailed from the extensive provinces, held under Ahmed Shah, the Dooranee King of Affghanistan, by Nasseer Khan the First, may be understood to comprise eleven main divisions containing about one and a half millions of inhabitants:—

1. Sarawan (high country); 2. Nooshkey—to the north.
3. Jhallawan (low country); 4. Kharan; 5. Mushki—in the centre.
6. Gundava—to the east.
7. Kolwah; 8. Jhow; 9. Las (flat country)—to the south.
10. Punjgoor; 11. Mekran—to the south-west.

The Kohistan to the west (comprising the districts of Kohukee, Bunpoor, Puhra, Sibb, Duzzak, and Bushkurd has been absorbed in the Persian provinces of Laristan and Kirnian, and the districts of Hurrund and Dojil to the east are now included in the British jurisdiction of Dera Ghazi Khan. The total present length of the kingdom of Khelat is given by General Jacob at 400 miles, from Quetta to the Persian Gulf, and its breadth at 400 miles from the Persian frontier to Sind. The hills of the Murrees and Boogtees are not included in the territories of the Khan, as those powerful tribes (mustering respectively 4,000 and 2,500 fighting men), owed at the best of times but a nominal allegiance to Khelat, and pay neither revenue nor tribute.

Sarawan is the principal of the two great chiefships of Belochistan—about 100 miles in extreme length from north to south, and of equal average breadth. It comprises the districts of Shal, Kohuk, Mastoong, Mangachar, Garghina, and Khelat. The principal towns are Quetta (at the head of the Bolan Pass, and distant from Shikarpur, Khelat, and Candahar, respectively, 227, 129, and 147 miles), and Khelat, the capital of Belochistan—a city of about 1,500 houses.

Nooshkey is a small district to the west of Sarawan, and bordering upon the Gurmseil, part of the Affghan province of Candahar. Its extreme length and breadth are about thirty miles each.

Jhallawan, the second of the great Brahoe chiefships, though of twice the extent of Sarawan, contains a much scantier population. Its extreme length is 200 miles, and average breadth about 100 miles. It comprises the districts of Sohrab, Zehri, Baghwan, Zidi, Kapper, Khozdar, Wad, and Nal. The principal towns are Zehri, the seat of the Chief, and Khozdar, the ancient capital of the Brahoes before their conquest of Khelat.

The other divisions of Belochistan are of minor importance. Las and Mekran contain Sunmiani, and other small trading ports on the Persian Gulf, which maintain some intercourse with Kurrachi, and are occasionally visited by the great line of steamers belonging to the India General Navigation Company, which carries most of the Indian coasting trade. Through these divisions also runs the line of the Persian telegraph, and on this account the Jam or Chief of Las received the honour of a separate treaty with the British Government, by which a subsidy of £1,500 per annum was granted to him for the protection of the line. The total revenues of the district of Las, independent of this subsidy, are under £5,000 a-year, and were enjoyed by the Chief, before the recent confiscation of his possessions by the Khan, on the tenure of military service, having been granted to his ancestor by Mohubbut Khan, father of the great Nusseer Khan, as a reward for services in the field.

The total revenues of Khelat, independent of the British subsidy of £5,000 per annum, are under £40,000 a-year. They are derived entirely from Crown lands or the tribute of conquered provinces, such as Gundava or Mekran, as the Brahoe and Beloch tribes pay no revenue save to their immediate chiefs. These tribes compose some two-fifths of the total population of one and-a-half millions. The remaining three-fifths are mainly Dehwars or Pajiks, the aborigines of the country. The Beloches and Brahoes follow pastoral pursuits, and the cultivation is almost entirely done by the Pajiks. Both classes pay a portion of their produce to their immediate chiefs, of which none reaches the Khan. The only claim which the Khan has upon his people, under the Brahoe Constitution, is that of military service.

The modern history of Belochistan, of which country Khelat is the capital, commences, like that of Affghanistan, with the death of Nadir Shah, King of Persia, in A.D. 1747. Abdulla Khan, the first Khan of Khelat, regarding whom authentic information exists, having been killed in battle with the Sindians, his son Mohubbut Khan took advantage of Nadir Shah's conquest of Candahar, about A.D. 1732, to attach himself to that monarch. He took part in Nadir Shah's invasion of Hindustan, and was rewarded on his return by the transfer to him from the Sindians of the territory of Gandava, in redress for his father's death at their hands. He also, in A.D. 1739, received from Nadir Shah the title of Begbe Beg, or Chief Ruler of Belochistan.

After Nadir Shah's death his generals commenced carving out principalities for themselves. Ahmed Shah Dooranee established himself in Cabul, and, being provoked by the aggressions of Mohubbut Khan on the Province of Candahar, he invaded and ravaged Sarawan, the northernmost district of Belochistan, and destroyed one of its chief towns, Mastoong carrying away Mohubbut Khan captive. This was in A.D. 1849, and in the following year Ahmed Shah, induced by the discontent existing in Belochistan against Mohubbut Khan, deposed him in favour of his younger brother, Nusseer Khan.

Nusseer Khan accompanied Ahmed Shah with a Beloch contingent in his campaigns against Persia in 1750-51, and rendered brilliant services, for which he was rewarded by the cession of the district of Shal, of which the chief town is Quetta. He, however, took advantage of troubles which embarrassed Ahmed Shah in Hindoostan to rebel with some success in A.D. 1758, but was eventually reduced, kindly treated, and again rendered such military service, this time in Hindustan, as to receive a further reward, in the addition to his dominions of Hurrund and Dajil—now British districts.

Early in his reign, Nusseer Khan had interested the whole Brahoe nation (the dominant class in Belochistan, and composing about one fifth of the population of the State) in the retention of Gundava, annexed by his predecessor—by allotting to all the tribes tracts of land therein to which they could migrate from the highlands of Belochistan during the winter. The result has been that Gundava is still part of the State, while Kurrachee, Hurrund, and Dajil, the other acquisitions in the plains, were ere long wrested from the Khan's descendants by their neighbours. The annexation by us to Cabul of so valuable a possession was alone sufficient to cause the rising of the Brahoes against us in 1840. The Khan had, moreover, succeeded in conquering Kurrachee—now, after Bombay, our principal western port—from the Ameers of Sind. This was, however, reconquered from Khelat, after his death, by the Talpur Chiefs who had ousted the Kalora dynasty from Sind. Besides these acquisitions to the east and south-east he further succeeded, on the south-west, in annexing Ruggoor and Mekran to his dominions. He marched against those districts with 30 000 men whom he suddenly concentrated at Khozdar, and immediately invested and carried by storm (with heavy loss) the capital town of Kej. His father Abdulla had never been able to conquer Mekran, nor could his son Mihmood retain it; but Mihrab Khan, his grandson, recovered it for a time. From Nusseer Khan's time to the present hour Mekran has maintained more or less practical independence of the authority of Khelat, and also of Persia, which of late years has repeatedly aimed at its acquisition. The district has never, however, actually thrown off its allegiance to Khelat, and threatened Persian aggression has of late years led to a closer rapprochement thereto. In fact it at present pays the Khan a small tribute.

Nusseer Khan, moreover, held in complete subjection the Beloch tribes of Murrees and Boogtees on his northern frontier, in the hills extending from the Bolan Pass to Hurrund and Dajil; and though, in the weak hands of his successor, Kurrachee and Mekran were lost to the Khan's authority, the Murrees and Boogtees were still retained in subjection because the Khan still held Hurrund and Dajil, and, therewith, the means of conciliating and coercing them. Throughout Mihmood's reign, and for the first three years of that of his son Mihrab, successive governors of Hurrund and Dajil kept these border tribes well in hand. The Khan's inability now to restrain them is one of the grounds of our interference in Khelat affairs, by establishing direct relations with them, but the reason for that inability is that Hurrund and Dajil, wrested from the Khan by Runjeet Singh, are now in our hands.

Nassar Khan survived both Ahmed Shah and his son Timoor Shah, dying six months after the latter, after a reign of forty-three years. He was succeeded in 1793 by his son Mahmood. During Mahmood Khan's reign the power and revenues of the Khan of Khelat were greatly diminished. Not only were Kurrachee and Mekran lost to him altogether, as before mentioned; but the southern districts of Nal and Wad entered on a course of rebellion and disorder which has lasted ever since. Under urgent pressure from Shah Shing of Cabul, consequent on the plunder by the tribes of those districts of an Affghan caravan, Mahmood inflicted very severe chastisement upon them; nevertheless we find them in his son's reign as contumacious as ever. To the north, moreover, the Afghan Kaffir tribe twice ravaged the Khan's district of Shal and sacked Quetta. Only in the last, where Mahmood's brother Mustapha governed Gundava, Hurrund, and Dajil, did his arms maintain their ascendency. The Murrees and Boogtees were overawed, and the Ameers of Sind were held in check. Even when another brother, Rahmin Khan, murdered Mustapha, and declared himself independent in the eastern provinces, the Khan was able, by means of the Chief of Jhallawur (the central district of Khelat) to overthrow the rebel and recover the territory—(A.D. 1812).

Weak as was the government of Mihmood Khan, it was under his son Mihrab, who succeeded in A.D. 1820, that the position of the Khan of Khelat reached that last degree of degradation now again seen in the case of Khodadad, the present Khan. For the first three years of his reign he displayed considerable energy; he recovered Mekran, and seemed disposed and able to maintain the integrity of his remaining dominions. But there was an opposition Khan in the family, and the turbulent Brahoe chiefs, desirous to curb their monarch, and unwilling to recognise in him more than the head of their confederacy, balanced one Khan against the other, till an attitude of mutual distrust and hostility between themselves and Mihrab Khan was thoroughly established.

Bihram, grandson of the Mohubbut Khan, deposed by Ahmed Shah in favour of Nusseer Khan, married a sister of Timoor, the son of Ahmed Shah. On Timoor's accession to the throne of Cabul Bihram struck for his grandfather's principality, and, though defeated by Nusseer Khan at Kohuk, in Sarawan, he returned to the charge in the reign of Nihmood. Zeman Shah, son and successor of Timoor, Shah of Cabul, and thus nephew of Bihram, attempted to mediate, but without success; and Bihram, being again defeated in the Bolan Pass, died of fatigue during his flight towards Bhawalpur. His son, Ahmed Gor, fell into Mihmood's hands, and was for some time retained prisoner, while his aunt, mother of Zeman Shah, endeavoured, after marrying his sister to one of the Ameers of Sind, to enlist the latter's support on his side. The Ameer, however, contented himself with the reconquest of Kurrachi, being held in check, as before mentioned, by Mahmood's brother Mustapha, Governor of Gundava Hurrund and Dajil.

Ahmed Gor had been released from imprisonment in consideration of his youth, but, on attaining man's estate, in 1823, he headed four successive rebellions of the Brahol clans against Mihrab Khan, and was eventually taken and put to death. Mihrab, nevertheless, treated his son Shah Newaz with the utmost kindness, who in return headed an insurrection, in 1834, in Sarawan, and finally supplanted Mihrab's son in 1839 (Mihrab Khan having been slain at the storming of Khelat)—being seated on the throne by our arms. He was soon ejected by Nusseer Khan, son of Mihrab, and remained impotent for mischief during the reign of that able prince, but his brother Futteh Khan has been a thorn in the side of the present Khan of Khelat, Khodadad, brother of Nusseer the second.

THE COMING VICEROY.

The Englishman remarks that a widespread impression seems to have arisen that, because, in his relations with Lord Northbrook, the Marquis of Salisbury has shown himself to be imperious and impatient of contradiction, therefore Lord Lytton must be facile and subservient. Like the burnt child that dreads the fire, the Marquis of Salisbury, it is argued, would take care not to appoint as Viceroy a man who would be likely to emulate the inconvenient proclivities of his predecessor. The conclusion is, at the best, one of probability only, and involves a two-fold risk of error. The Marquis of Salisbury may have appointed Lord Lytton without reference to any such considerations as those imputed to him. On the other hand, even, if actuated by a such a motive, he may be mistaken in his estimate of Lord Lytton's character. With these qualifications, the argument possesses a validity which it is not for us to gainsay. With no amount of qualification, however, can we accept, as either logical or just, the argument of a weekly contemporary, that, because Lord Lytton's official life has hitherto been spent in carrying out as literally as possible, no matter with how much ability, the wishes and opinions of the Foreign-office in London, therefore, in his Indian career, he will be a puppet in the hands of the Secretary of State. It is true that a diplomatist is accustomed to act up to the letter of his instructions and to feel "that his official opinions should be those of his superiors rather than his own." But it is more than reasonable and charitable to suppose that he acts and feels thus because it is his duty as a diplomatist to do so; and it does not follow either that he has no opinions of his own, or that he would not act up to them in a position of greater liberty. Our contemporary lays great stress on the force of training, but it is certainly over-estimating the force of training to suppose that the habit of obedience to imperative orders disqualifies a man for independent action or command. Were it so, the discipline of the man-of-war would be fatal to the production of a Nelson or a Collingwood, and we should have to look for our commanders and admirals among street Arabs or backwoodsmen, or, at all events, outside the ranks of our navy. It is not the first time, either, that a diplomatist has been placed in an independent position, and we are not aware that the experience of history confirms our contemporary's view that, when placed in such a position, he is necessarily a failure. Besides Lord Lytton's diplomatic career, our contemporary points to his comparative youth, his ignorance of India, his want of fixed opinions on questions of administration, and the development of his private opinions and idiosyncrasies in the direction of literature rather than politics, as circumstances calculated to lend force to his conclusions. As to his comparative youth, it strikes us that the comparative youth of a man of forty-five is rather favourable than otherwise to the chances of vigorous and independent action. His ignorance of India can hardly be greater than has been that of many previous Viceroys, who have shown that they had wills of their own. His alleged want of fixed opinions on questions of administration is, to the best of our belief, a pure assumption of the writer's; and as to the fact that his private opinions and idiosyncrasies have been developed more in the direction of literature than of politics, it is capable of other explanations than that of the one-sidedness apparently implied.

INDIAN ARMY REFORM.

The Pioneer observes that the local journals have very little confidence in the thoroughness of the recommendations for the reform of the Indian Army which were sent home a mail or two back. No doubt the substance of the despatch is a secret; but unhappily the public guesses on the point are influenced by Mr. Grant Duff's late confidences to the British public. The ex-Under-Secretary had personally heard Lord Napier's views on the subject, "and very re-assuring those views were." Mr. Grant Duff will believe in anything, so long as it is "very re-assuring." But in the next place, Lord Napier's statement, that the Indian Army is sufficiently well adapted for the purposes for which it is intended, is not necessarily re-assuring. Its present purposes, it has been retorted, are merely to patrol the country and to do garrison duty; but we want something better than a chowkedaree army. The public estimate of course may be all wrong; we are merely stating its general character. The public, also, would have preferred the army question to be taken in hand by the new Viceroy, backed by men like Sir Frederick Haines and Sir Neville Chamberlain. The coming Commander-in-Chief is universally known to be wholly opposed to the absurd and mischievous system under which civil employment absorbs all the most promising officers in the Indian Army; and the last-named is no less hostile to that over-centralisation of the army which is pretty generally acknowledged to have been one of the main causes of the mutiny, and which may lead us into trouble again. The grand points upon which most critics—lay and military—appear to be agreed are,—(1) abolition of the Staff Corps system; (2) increase in the number of regimental officers; (3) connected with the foregoing, the introduction of the double company, or some similar arrangement; (4) localisation of forces; (5) a more liberal rate of pay and pension for native troops; (6) improvement in the status of native officers; (7) the establishment of a military college for the special training of young men destined for service in the Native Army.

OPIUM.

The Pioneer thinks one hardly needs a report of what was said by the deputation from the Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade which waited lately on Lord Salisbury. The arguments of the Society are all of the ex sans dire order. Opium harms the Chinese, and the Indian Government, which derives a revenue from its sale, is guilty of immorality. The reply is equally self-evident, at all events to most persons of ordinary common sense—so very self-evident that one is almost ashamed to repeat it. Yet the agitators must be answered; and all that Lord Salisbury can do is to trust to mere force of repetition, as Mr. Bright used, when he apologised for being unable to throw any new light on a threadbare subject. Lord Salisbury was, however, in a position to give the Society a small modicum of really fresh information. After having argued that if the Chinese did not get the drug from India they would grow it themselves, and that the opium revenue was not a whit more immoral than the duties on the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks in England, he said that native Chinese opium had "the property of producing skin diseases." In that case, as a London contemporary observes, "the Indian Government is really doing the Chinese consumer a service in enabling him at least to suffer with a clean skin." Another consideration which the suppressors might bear in mind is, that the Indian Government monopoly is infinitely less "immoral" than unrestricted cultivation. The Government is satisfied with a certain proportionate income from opium; and has a special interest in the purity of the drug. Private growers, on the other hand, would extend the trade to the very utmost, and throw any trash on the market, so long as it sold. It is evident from the tenor of his Lordship's address to the deputation that he has been looking up the subject. Could not the Indian and Foreign Secretaries, in concert with the Government of India, compile a Blue-book on opium cultivation in China, and its bearing on the Indian industry? What has already been written on the question is scattered through consular reports, missionary memoranda, and stories of travel.

THE APPROACHING AGRARIAN CONTEST.

The Englishman points out that the depreciation in the value of silver is making itself felt in a novel and an unprecedented manner throughout the central districts of Bengal. Hitherto writers have been accustomed to look at the subject as one chiefly, if not indeed solely, affecting commercial operations, the Anglo-Indian on a fixed salary, and those who have to make remittances to England. But the Bengal landholders are discovering that they too have interests at stake, During the past few weeks we have received evidence to show that the fall in the value of silver has now begun to directly affect the question of rent, and that it promises to become an all-important influence in the smouldering feud between landlord and tenant in Bengal. The decline in the purchasing power of the rupee is seriously felt in every household, whether European or Native, which has to live on a fixed sum. A large proportion of the landholding body in Bengal belong to this class. They are simply annuitants, who have a right to finger the rental, and pass it on, after deducting a certain amount en route. This class is bitterly conscious that the value of their incomes is somehow slipping away from them, without their having any means of arresting the process. But their misfortunes only serve to render the fortunate minority, who retain the remedy in their hands, more alive to the necessity of applying it. The proprietor, who still deals directly with the cultivators, now sees in a general enhancement of rent the only escape from ruin. He can seldom reduce his expenses; his former revenue no longer enables him to defray those expenses; and, so, another twist has to be given to the great rent-screw throughout Bengal. In the presence of a substantial and widespread necessity of this sort, no amount of advice from candid friends will avail. Sir Richard Temple may turn on the agrarian tap of oil, but he will not still the troubled waters. The question must be fought out by the parties themselves. The feud between landlord and tenant, which during late years disclosed itself at intervals in Pabna and Central Bengal, has now attained a chronic intensity. The landlords are more and more determined on enhancing; the cultivators in many villages are more and more resolute not to allow their rent to be raised. Were the question to be decided according to English ideas, or the canons of political science, there would be no uncertainty as to the result. The steady increase of the population must, according to the economical theory of rent, render increased rates inevitable as the pressure on the soil grows more severe, and worse qualities of land are resorted to. Again, there can be little doubt that the husbandman now realises a much larger sum in money from the same quantity of land; improved communications have brought the rich districts between the Ganges and the Brahmáputra nearer and nearer to Calcutta, and the new demand for rice in Assam has opened up a great market at their own doors. The Bogra and Rangpur cultivators sell their crops for higher prices, not only because silver, the measure of value, has fallen, but also because the effective local demand has increased. They gain in every way; and, according to the English method of looking at such subjects, can well afford to pay a higher rent. But the struggle will not be decided according to British modes of thought. The cultivators have a certain status recognised by law, and a talent for combination which renders it very difficult to infringe upon it. The landholders have also their legal rights, and the power of bringing a good deal of extra-judicial pressure to bear upon individual tenants who oppose them. This has been the situation during the last seventeen years, and both parties accurately appreciate it. The compromise which they have hitherto agreed to may be briefly stated thus:—The landlord says, "I must increase my income." The tenants say, "You shan't measure our holdings, or raise our rents." Then, after much haggling, the struggle ends for a while by the cultivators granting a nominally temporary aid or cess—in short, an abwab—on the understanding that their permanent rent (asil) remains unchanged. That the abwab is quite illegal, and might lead the proprietors into unpleasant legal consequences, is a consideration which does not disturb either party. The landholder increases his income, without having to go to law on a vast and ruinous scale with his tenantry, and he makes a firm resolution in his own soul that he will never relinquish his grasp on the nominally temporary augmentation. The cultivator issues from the transaction in an equally happy frame of mind. He has staved off an increase in rent, and so another year has run off the twelve which will give him a right of occupancy under the law.

THE NATIVE STAGE.

The Madras Times thinks it is very doubtful if any European, unaided, is competent to pass a judgment upon the indecency, or otherwise, of the Native Stage, seeing that it depicts manners and conversation quite different from his own, and as much belonging to the people as anything can well do. We might as properly put a native into the pit of a London theatre on a ballet night, or send him to Paris to criticise one of Dumas's plays, with the hope of arriving at any correct judgment in the matter. Indecency and immorality could scarcely farther go, a native would say, than in the spectacle of Lady Godiva exhibited at a London circus to thousands of people nightly, but we presume there would be no objection made by the Government to a similar exhibition at Calcutta if a native actress could be found to take the part. Here, it might be thought, would be a case for the police, but the police would probably not interfere. The indecency of the Native Stage would appear to appeal to the ears and not to the eyes. In this respect it resembles the modern French Stage rather than our own. It wants close attention and a very correct knowledge of the language to be able to recognise the well-concealed immorality of some of the worst French plays, for their immorality consists more in their want of a moral than in anything else. Crime is rewarded instead of punished; but is Policeman X, or rather John Mahomed, to be considered a nice judge of such dramatic subtlety as this? Then, as to innuendo, the Native, like the French Stage, is full of it; but it is questionable if a double entendre can come within the comprehension of a constable. Better, though, a constable than a Lord Chamberlain in India. The importance, the political importance, an official of this grandeur would lend the Native Stage is much against his appointment, and yet the berth is spoken of, for some protégé, do doubt, of Dowb, the guardian of public morality. For our own part, we believe the Native Stage to be a very inoffensive institution, if let alone. If it exhibits sometimes to the European mind scenes of indelicacy, we must remember it is only doing what is the very essence of the dramatic art—holding the mirror up to nature. Besides, the Native Stage is improving, according to Western notions, though to Eastern ideas it is probably falling away. It is becoming more Anglicised, in a word, and, ten years hence, it may be entirely English in all but language, if not that too. It is a useful educator in its way, and we should do wrong to discourage it under terror of the law, and to the scandal of the country. Better help it on to better things, only not with the aid of such an official as the Lord Chamberlain, a personage who has made this office the laughing stock of stage and audience more than once. The best way, perhaps, to exercise a proper control over the Native Stage would be to tax all plays put upon that stage, under heavy penalty in evasion, and to pass all plays intended for performance through a proper Licenser's office—a person who should have competent Native assistance to aid him in his task. This would be fair to all concerned, to the Government, the playwrights, the actors, and the public; but it is scarcely just, we think, to put every one of them at the mercy of police surveillance.

A CURIOUS PRESENT.—On of the most curious presents made to the Prince of Wales was a volume containing the Book of Genesis and the Gospel according to St. Matthew. Says the donor, Mr. Mahomed Obeidullah Khan, of Tonk, "It it well-known to your Royal Highness that sublime religious thoughts clothed in rhyme are generally better appreciated, and make a deeper impression on the mind, than when they are expressed in simple prose." But if Mr. Obeidullah Khan really wished that his Royal Highness should improve his mind by a reperusal of Genesis and Matthew, he might have selected a more suitable vehicle for his rhymes than "the Dari language, the ancient vernacular of the people of Persia."

A BRUTAL PLANTER.—The Chittagong correspondent of the Indian Mirror writes:—"Mr. A. L. Webster, a tea-planter, owner of the Fenuah Garden, was charged with attempt to murder and grievous hurt by the police of the Futtickchery station. Some persons living close to his garden obstructed a stream running along the land belonging to the garden, so as to put a stop to the water flowing downwards. The tea-planter requested these persons to remove the obstruction. They found it difficult to comply with his request, as they said that not only the expenses incurred by them would be fruitless, but the rising crops and labour in tillage would be lost. The planter seeing his orders not carried out, came to the spot with some men for the purpose of opening it. The villagers objected to it, and said that, without the order of a competent Court of Justice, they could not allow him to do the same. He thereupon shot eight persons, who were immediately removed to the town hospital, and by the mercy of God all of them were, in a manner, saved by the exertions of the well-known Assistant Surgeon, Dr. U. C. Kastogiri. On their case coming on before the Joint-Magistrate, Mr. Badcock, the tea-planter was fined only Rs. 500, and three of his coolies Rs. 50 each."

FINANCE.—It has been decided that the surplus cash balance of the General Treasury, which has hitherto remained in the Bank, is to be in future kept in a separate vault in the Currency Department under the Comptroller-General.

DEATH OF AN OLD CITIZEN.—Calcutta papers record the death, at the advanced age of seventy-eight, of Mr. Peter John, a retired Greek merchant of that city. He was the oldest Greek inhabitant of Calcutta, and was highly esteemed and respected by the members of the Greek community.

A TOKEN OF GRATITUDE.—The Prince of Wales has been pleased to present Babu Radha Raman Baisak, an employé in the Private Secretary's Office, Government of India, with a gold ring, inscribed with his Royal Highness's name and monogram, in recognition of services done by him as a correspondence clerk to his Royal Highness during his tour throughout India.

MARCH OF INTELLECT.—Miss Charlotte Maria Tucker, the well-known A. L. O. E., a zenana labourer at Amritsar, recently showed her interest in the women of India by offering a purse of Rs. 100 for the best poem in Bengali on "The Lord Christ." It was competed for by women only, and the prize, it is stated, was divided between two Bengali women, both wives of Christian husbands.

EUROPEAN BEGGARS.—We (Lucknow Times) were very sorry to see the other day two European girls of tender years begging in the Sudder Bazaar, and we understand they are no strangers to the bazaars in various parts of the city as well as the station proper. For very obvious reasons we certainly think these children, for they are such in years, should be taken in hand by the authorities, as they are but barely clad, and apparently are homeless and friendless.

LEGISLATIVE.—At the meeting of the Bengal Council, on Saturday, March 18, a long discussion again took place on the Calcutta Municipal Bill, Sir Richard Temple offering to have only one-fourth of the members nominated by Government, which was rejected. The Batwárá Law Amendment Bill and the Agrarian Disturbances Prevention Bill were also discussed. On Monday the Council met again, and discussed the Mufasal Municipalities Bill, and the same Bill was again discussed at Thursday's meeting.

AN OFFICER UNDER ARREST.—We (Indian Daily News) understand that Captain F. W. Crohan, B.S.C., and station staff at Benares, has lately been brought to a Court of Inquiry for some discrepancies in his accounts in respect to the payment of pensioners, &c. The result of the inquiry was unsatisfactory, and Captain Crohan was given the option of either sending in his papers or standing a court-martial. We are told that he has elected to take his trial.

CIVIL SERVICE GRIEVANCES.—The Lahor paper states that the recommendations of the Junior Civilians' Grievance Committee are very much to the following effect, namely, that civilians of from thirteen to fifteen years' service should be offered immediate retiring pensions on a more liberal scale than that to which those of fifteen years' service would be now entitled. The pensions recommended are £500 to £700 per annum, according to the standing of the officer. This scale would, doubtless, be most acceptable to many civilians of the 1861 batch, who will not be entitled to anything higher for some time to come than a pension of £350 per annum.

A NEW KIND OF ROBBERY.—A correspondent on the Chord line, East Indian Railway, writes to the Railway Service Gazette:—"The Local and Railway Police are endeavouring to discover spike robbers in this district. I believe from 1,500 to 2,000 have been taken out of the line in a short distance in about one month. No less than 110 spikes were missing in one mile length last night, the 13th inst. This work must be remunerative, or it would not be followed out so steadily. The expense of replacing must be considerable; the only thing to be feared is that these men may actually endanger the road by their continued depredations, which up to date appear to baffle the police entirely."

THE WESTERN DUARS.—The Darjeeling paper tells us that a gentleman of very considerable experience has just returned from a tour amongst the tea-gardens in the Western Duars. He gives a most glowing account of the soil, which is in most places black mould to the depth of several feet. All the gardens are in a most thriving condition, and planted out four by four with the very best variety of hybrid trees. Pahariah labour is abundant, but dear, Rs. 6 being the rate for men. He gives it as his opinion that the Duars are even better suited for tea than the Terai. This is of course very nice, indeed, remarks our contemporary, but it remains to be seen whether the climate is not too deadly for Europeans to live in, while, on the other hand, the Darjiling Terai is becoming more healthy every year.

THE LAHOR DRAINAGE.—The survey of Lahor for the drainage scheme has now been completed, and Mr. Leslie Clark has laid before the public an estimate of the cost of the entire scheme. Detailed estimates are appended to the report, which show the aggregate cost of the proposed works are Rs. 4,72,332-9-3. The proposed out-fall sewer is to be of brickwork, and starting at the south-west corner of the city will discharge itself into the Ravi near the old village of Lunda, having a fall of three feet per mile along its entire length. The internal drainage of the city will be divided into eight separate sections, each section being distinct and separate in itself, having its own discharge into a proposed main intercepting sewer. Separate systems have been provided for the drainage of Anarkullee and Lunda Bazaars.

THE LATE MALAY WAR.—On Tuesday last the telegraph brought the news of the final episode of the Malayan campaign. Governor Anson, whose persuasions were seconded by the Sultan of Quedah, induced ex-Sultan Ismail to present himself at Penang, at which he arrived on Monday last, bringing his regalia and two chiefs with him; the former he has duly surrendered to Governor Anson. We have not yet heard what has been done with Ismail; but it was understood that he was to be sent immediately to Singapore. Finally, Colonel Ross, with the Buffs and the Goorkhas, sailed for Calcutta on Tuesday last in the Himalaya, leaving the 10th Regiment behind them to garrison Perak. We suppose that the public will soon learn the policy which the Colonial-office means to adopt with reference to Perak, and about which Sir William Jervois has spoken so mysteriously in Council.—Pioneer, March 26.

EDUCATION IN OUDH.—From the last Oudh Administration Report we perceive that the Mohammedans in the province are, in proportion to their numbers, far more ready than Hindus to accept the offer of State education. This superiority is shown not only in the case of Vernacular, but also in that of English schools. The same fact appears also in girls' schools, in special schools, and in normal schools. From the returns submitted from the several districts it has been reckoned that the number of Mohammedans in Vernacular schools exceeds that of Hindus, in proportion to the total Hindu population by 13 per cent., in English or Anglo-Vernacular schools by 18 per cent., in the Oriental Department of Canning College by 50 per cent., in the University or College Department by 9 per cent., in normal schools by 31 per cent., and in girls' schools by 55 per cent. The average excess of Mohammedans over Hindus in all schools combined amounts to 15 per ent. in proportion to the respective population.

JABALPUR.—A correspondent of the Times of India, writing on the 23rd March, says:—"A strange case has recently occurred here. A Government telegraph employe had been transferred from Haidarabad, Deccan, and arrived at Jabalpur some few weeks back. Nothing remarkable had ever been noticed in his behaviour until Friday last, when he exhibited unmistakable symptons of insanity and a desire to put an end to himself. Among other unreasonable acts he swallowed a quantity of turpentine. These irrational doings were brought to the notice of the medical profession, and our station doctor, an experienced authority in such cases, had him removed forthwith to the local Lunatic Asylum, and there was some talk of sending him on to Bombay, as the asylum here is only for natives; but as he has since shown signs of mental convalescence, it is hoped he may soon be restored to his sorrowing friends and in his right mind. The cause of the mishap is generally attributed to the everlasting manipulation of Morse instruments, combined with hard work and less pay. The Telegraph Department appears to be in a fair way of creating a new phase of mania."

AFGHANISTAN.—A contemporary says "We have noticed from time to time the expedition which Sher Ali sent against Maimana, and the other day we announced its success. Very few people here, perhaps, care in the least about Maimana; the Amir's troops might have blown it to the four winds of heaven, and we should never have cared, but still it is a place that people used to think about at one time. Now, however, absurd rumours reach Calcutta that the Russians have been defeated at Maimana with great slaughter, and no one remembers that the place lies about half-way between Herat and Balkh, and that a Russian force at Maimana would mean a Russian garrison at Herat. What has really happened, of course, is that the Mir of Maimana has been chastised for his intrigues with the Amir of Bokhara and Abdul Rahman by the Amir of Afghanistan; and that Maimana is once more brought into perfect subjection to Kabul. Maimana is one of the four western States of Afghan Turkistan. One of the Nadir Shah's soldiers, an Usbeg adventurer, founded it, and for some while Maimana was an almost independent fief of Persia. Since then it has passed through various stages, at one time owing allegiance to Afghanistan, at another to Persia, at all times freely intriguing with Bokhara. When Captain Conolly was there in 1840, the Chief of Maimana lamented that five different powers—Cabul, Herat, Khiva, Bokhara, and Persia—claimed his allegiance. They have all prevailed in turn; and, at last, in 1866, the Mir of Maimana swore fealty to Faiz Mahomed Khan, who then held Afghan Turkistan in Shere Ali's name. Since then, as we know, the Mir has been intriguing with the ruler of Bokhara again, and with Abdul Rahman. Last year Shere Ali sent the expedition, which, as we have just heard, has been successful. He has not gained very much by it. Still as the Usbegs of Maimana are the best soldiers in all Afghanistan, and as the natural products of the place are abundant, Shere Ali may find it useful to keep a body of troops there, ready for the accidents which may always happen to him. Success, moreover, is always good for his rule; the mere fact that he can punish refractory vassals is very much in his favour.

THE LATE GENERAL TROUP.—The Pioneer gives the following biography of the late General Troup:—"The name of General Colin Troup, who died lately at Meerut, has long been a very familiar one in India. General Troup's first commission bore date 1820, and he seems to have been in this country almost ever since. He served against the Bheels in 1827, and throughout the operations in Afghanistan in 1839-42, including the storm and capture of Ghuznee. He was taken prisoner during the famous retreat, but survived this reverse to fight on the Sutlej in 1846. Next year he was Assistant Adjutant-General of the Cawnpore Division, and during the mutinies he commanded a column in Rohilcund and Oudh, and scattered the forces of Ferozeshah and Ismail Khan, taking the latter prisoner with all his guns. He commanded the Meerut Division for five years, and was, we believe, the first President of the Stud Commission. Few soldiers in India can have seen more service or gone through more varied experiences, or left behind them a reputation more replete with anecdote. For General Troup, though pious to the core, and not more distinguished by the peculiarity we are about to notice than for his religious ardour, had nevertheless an old fashioned constitutional trick of swearing in a manner which the more subdued habits of this generation have discouraged. Nor was his genius in the direction shown merely on parade, for vernaculur swearing was perhaps his forte for choice. He has been known, by mere command of gali, to beat an old native woman who tried to engage him at her own weapons, and this was not by calling her a parallel-opipedon. The gallant veteran has lately been "permitted to reside" at Meerut, his rank in the army shelving him as far as divisional commands were concerned. His death, which took place on the 19th, ensued not from any specific complaint, but from a general break up of the constitution. He was buried on the 20th, when all the troops in the station were turned out to do honour to his memory."

THE LOST LETTERS OF WARREN HASTINGS.—To the Editor of the Indian Daily News. Sir,—Your London Correspondent in his last budget, inserted in your impression (dak edition) of yesterday, refers to the discovery of certain papers of Warren Hastings in the archives of the India-office, and these are probably the lost letters, &c., of our first Governor General, which he was so very anxious to find, and which are alluded to at p. 99 of my "Historical and Topographical Sketch of Calcutta," recently reprinted from the Englishman's Saturday Evening Journal. In Gleig's "Memoirs of Warren Hastings," vol. III., p. 240, there is a letter of Hastings dated the 21st July, 1785, in which he laments the loss of the letters, &c., thus:—"But my greatest disappointment arises from your silence in that which I have received concerning my bureau. It contained many letters and other papers which I would not, for the world, have seen by strangers, and some not even by you. . . . There are some miniature pictures which I should grieve to lose." The following advertisement regarding the above appeared in the Calcutta Gazette and Oriental Advertiser of Thursday, the 6th September, 1787.—"Whereas an old black wood bureau, the property of Warren Hastings, Esq., containing, amongst other things, two small miniature pictures and some private papers, was, about the time of his departure from Bengal, either stolen from his house on the Esplanade or by mistake sold at the auction of his effects. This is to give notice—That Mr. Larkins and Mr. Thompson will pay the sum of two thousand sicca rupees to any person who shall give them such information as shall enable them to recover the contents of the bureau." The bureau, or rather its mysterious contents, would appear to have found their way to the office of the magnates of Leadenhall-street, and have just been discovered in the India-office, according to the announcement of your London Correspondent. The Government would certainly not be justified in publishing them, especially after the expressed anxiety of Hastings that no one should see them.—Yours, &c., H. JAMES RAINEY.—Khoolnah, Jespore, March 14, 1876.

STATION TALK.

COCHIN, March 22.—Our Acting Master Attendant, Captain Bartlett, has been recalled to Madras, and Captain Phipps, of Tuticorin, has been gazetted Master Attendant of this port. The latter officer is now at Calicut, and is expected here shortly, to take charge of the new appointment. On Saturday last there was a grand procession from the Church of St. Anthony at Amarapathy. Of course, many of your readers are aware that, when cholera and small-pox begins to rage, Roman Catholics in these parts carry the image of St. Sebastian in procession through the streets as an act of devotion for the abatement of the epidemics, and with this object in view the parishioners of the Amarapathy Church had their procession out on Sunday last. The Rev. Fre Ferreiro, Vicar of the Amarapathy Church, and the Very Rev. Fre Gomez, Vicar-General of the Bishopric of Cochin, were present on the occasion. The procession went as far as the Goanese Church at Mattancherry, from whence it will start back to Amarapathy on Sunday next. Let us hope that the noble object these religious people have in view will be realised. The Rev. Mr. Johnson arrived here from Alleppey yesterday evening. He has come to perform a marriage ceremony at St. Francis' Church to-morrow, and has been expressly called down here owing to the indisposition of the Rev. Mr. Stone, our chaplain. Of late there has been a sudden change in the state of the weather. Sunday before last the skies assumed a very thick and cloudy aspect, and during the whole night it rained "cats and dogs," accompanied with thunder and lightning. This weather was experienced all along the coast from here to Quilon. The heat during the day is still excessive and insufferable. Cholera is still lurking about within the precincts of the town. On Saturday last two cases proved fatal. It is reported that cholera has abated to some extent at Alwaye, and people here are making up their minds to proceed there to enjoy the cool climate of that place, as is generally done at this time of the season.

NAGPUR, March 17.—A gloom was cast over this station lately on account of the sad death of Mr. Carpenter, Commissioner of this division. His untimely demise caused the Chief Commissioner and other officers of this Administration deep regret, and an expression of that regret has been recorded in the Central Provinces Gazette, which I give verbatim et literatim:—

March 6.—The Chief Commissioner deeply regrets to have to announce the death on the evening of the 5th inst., from injuries the effects of an accident, of Mr. C. W. Carpenter, C.S., Officiating Commissioner, Nagpoor Division. Whilst Government loses in him a very valuable public servant, the Chief Commissioner, in common with his numerous friends in the N.W. Provinces, deplores the loss of one, whose sweetness of disposition endeared him to all, and whose many sterling qualities gave promise of a brilliant future career.

On the night of the 15th inst. the native deacon, the Rev. Nathaniel Gnanapragassum, of the Church of England, died after a short illness, and was followed to his last resting-place by a goodly number of his native congregation, as well as the European community of Nagpoor. He was for many years Catechist at Kamptee, and has for some time past been ministering to the native Christians at Nagpoor, during which time he endeared himself to them. There is a whisper of a revision shortly of the Civil Service Commission of the Central Provinces, for the purpose, it is said, of enhancing the salaries of the officers composing it. Be this as it may, I think there is great need of a revision of the subordinate portion of many Government offices in these provinces, and something, I think, might be done to afford the drudges of Government, if not superior, at least decent salaries. The stagnant condition of some of the offices is pitiful to behold and wretched to contemplate. Only imagine a man, working hard for five, ten, or more years without any increase to his salary, and go on working he must, for he fears to lose so much Government service which counts towards the pension he some day hopes to receive, and when that long-sought-for time arrives, he finds himself shelved on a small pittance with a heavy load of debt, which he was compelled to incur, owing to his having the misfortune to be one of those poorly paid, never-to-rise, Government servants. A retrospect of his life brings most vividly before his imagination a mighty army of soucars and money-lenders, whom, to say the very least, Government have helped through his instrumentality to become rich.—Athenæum Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MYSOR FORESTS.—Australia is making an effort to acclimatise the forest trees of the Mysor Province. Some sixty varieties of plants and seeds were forwarded the other day to Queensland and Adelaide for the purpose.

A VILLAGE BURNT.—A few days ago the village of Ramanahalli, Mysor, in the Chennagiri Taluk, was burnt down, the rayats being thus rendered homeless. The Chief Commissioner, after personally inspecting the place, has now humanely issued orders that these poor people should be allowed to use wood from the neighbouring forest free of charge, for the construction of their huts.

SALT.—The manufacture of salt at Ennor has commenced in some of the manufacturing stations to a limited extent. The Salt Deputy Collector is at Ennor, doing his best to encourage the manufacture. The water in the canal being low, the communication between it and the sea has not realised the expectations of the Salt Department.

THE PRINCE OF TRAVANKOR.—There is some probability of the first Prince of Travankor visiting Bangalor shortly, and of his being followed by the young Maharajah of Mysor. The Travankor Prince thought of going to Utakamaud for a time, but appears to have given up all idea of doing so, owing to the want of suitable house accommodation there.

MADRAS HARBOUR WORKS.—Mr. May, Superintendent of the Madras Harbour Works, has, the Madras Athenæum says, forwarded to Government an estimate, prepared by himself, of the probable cost of the Madras Harbour Works. The estimate, Mr. May observes, is based generally on Mr. Parkes's original estimate; it amounts to Rs. 64,00,000 as against a provisional sanction of £628,000, and Mr. Parkes's estimate of October, 1873, of £565,078.

MEDICAL.—Dr. W. T. Martin, of the British Medical Service, at present Secretary and Statistical Officer to the Surgeon General, has been appointed Surgeon to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, and takes up his appointment immediately, in order to accompany the Government House party to the Hills on Wednesday afternoon next.

ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT.—Mr. Lodwick, the Accountant-General, Madras, has taken three months' leave, and proceeded to the Hills, and we regret to hear that his health is not all that could be desired. He was bitten by a young dog some days ago under circumstances that have given rise to some anxiety, but nothing has occurred to justify fears as to after consequences.

A NICE QUESTION.—The expected, but unfulfilled, visit of the Prince of Wales to Bangalor is likely, it is said, to cause some litigation, for whilst the cost of erecting the triumphal arches and decorations has amounted to Rs. 51,000, the committee only sanctioned an expenditure of Rs. 12,000 for the purpose, and the question now is, who is to pay the difference.

MANDALAY.—The writer of a letter from Mandalay to the Rangoon Mail says that the King has now sent an official to meet the English Karrenne Boundary Commissioners The Minister chosen is the Myotha Woondouk, Judge of the Mixed Court, and it is rumoured that the Mixed Court at Mandalay would be closed in consequence for three months. A new title of Menyeen Maha Menidin Yazah had been conferred on this official before his departure.

THE GOVERNMENT.—His Grace the Governor was to leave Madras on the evening of March 29. He has changed his intention of remaining at Atakamand for a day or two and then returning to Madras, in obedience to medical advice. The Mail says that his Grace is expected to remain on the Nilgiris until August, or until after the South-West monsoon has spent itself, when he will commence a tour to the west coast, to Travancore, Tinnevelly, Madura, and Trichinopoly.

FUNGUS IN COFFEE.—On the 16th of last month, we read in the Utakamand paper, coffee leaves from Mysor, affected with a new kind of fungus, were submitted to the Scientific Committee of the Royal Agricultural Society. The fungus was declared to be different from the Hemiliea of Ceylon, and called Pellicularia Koleroga. At its sitting on the 1st instant the committee received a report on the disease written by Mr. Berkeley. There is not much satisfaction in the report. Mr. Berkeley considered the leaves to be attacked "by the spawn of a fungus, probably a species of Acrimonium."

CHINCHONA.—From the half-yearly report of the Superintendent, Government Chinchona Plantations, Nilgiris, up to the 31st January 1876, we find that the number of plants propagated is 6,088, viz., 3,428 plants of C. Lanceolata (var. Angustifolio) and 2,660 plants of C. Pitayensis. 33,000 chinchona plants have been issued to the planters in Wynaad, and 6¼ ozs. of chinchona seed supplied to the public gratuitously. 277½lbs. of green tea leaf has been supplied to Major Jennings, 1,600 lbs. of dry chinchona bark has been supplied to the Government of Bombay, and 63,600 lbs. collected and prepared for shipment to England.

THE WAINAD.—Splendid showers have fallen over South-east and South Wainad; on the 5th inst. a light storm passed over this district, from which only thirty were registered; but on the 12th the rain fell in torrents both in South Wainad and Calicut. Through the district the showers have been general, and up to date fully two inches of rain has fallen in the Vellera Mulla and Moopanard districts. A heavy blossom will burst about the 20th inst., and with leaf-disease abating in virulence, and coffee at £100 a ton, the ensuing season promises, we are glad to be able to hope, to be very profitable for planters.—Madras Paper.

MYSOR.—We are glad to learn from the Madras Times that there are no grounds for the apprehensions which have been entertained of a grain scarcity in Mysor. The Chief Commissioner, Mr. Dalyell, has been making a tour in the provinces, and has ascertained that though prices have been everywhere high, any actual scarcity of food was limited to a few particular localities, and that even in these parts there is sufficient grain in store to last till next harvest. The report which had been spread of some villagers subsisting on the leaves of a forest tree is utterly without foundation. The revenue had been paid up without any coercive measures being necessary, and in no locality had it been found necessary to institute relief works.

TRADE WITH YUNAN.—We learn from the Rangoon Gazette that there is a probability of the annual caravan between Yunan and Mandalay being resumed. A large kaffila of 1,000 mules arrived at Mandalay about a month or six weeks ago, bringing the usual description of merchandise, and left after some twenty days, taking a large quantity of cotton and other articles. This is the first year since this trade route was closed, nearly twenty years ago, that so large a caravan has passed through it. It will be interesting to watch its effect on the Irrawaddy borne trade with Upper Burma, which should be considerably enhanced, unless the caravan trade becomes a royal monopoly, and if so, then farewell to all sound commercial transactions.

THE UNIVERSITY.—The annual Convocation of the Senate of the Madras University, for the purpose of conferring degrees, was held at the Banqueting Hall on Thursday, the 23rd March, presided over by the Governor, his Grace the Duke of Buckingham, as Chancellor of the University. Seventy-nine candidates presented themselves for the several degrees of M.A., B.L., B.C.E., and B.A. The Hall was crowded with visitors, amongst whom were a large number of ladies. The ladies from Government House were also present. After the ceremony of conferring the degrees upon the candidates had been performed the Hon. Mr. Justice Innes, the Vice-Chancellor of the University, delivered the annual address, at the conclusion of which the Convocation was formally dissolved by his Grace the Chancellor.

SORCERY AND MURDER IN MALABAR.—A man, of the pariah caste, known as Parayen Karimban, was brought up at the last Sessions held at Calicut, on a charge of having murdered a female infant, he daughter of a Mopla woman, between whom and himself there would appear to have been some acquaintance, though whether it amounted to a criminal intimacy or not was not quite clear. The woman's husband was out on the night when the murder took place, but returned home just in the nick of time to catch the murderer, who was concealed in a hedge near the house, with the body of the murdered infant in his arms. The prisoner was a reputed sorcerer, and, as such, was evidently held in great fear by the woman, in common with other people of her class, and he had been forbidden to come to the house by the husband, either on account of the reputation he bore or for some other cause. What his motive was in murdering the child was not very satisfactorily made out, but it was sufficiently proved, both by the evidence and his own admission, that he had committed the crime imputed to him, and he was accordingly found guilty of murder and sentenced to suffer the extreme penalty of the law, which sentence has just been confirmed by the High Court.—Madras Times, March 25.

AN INDIAN JUGGLER SHOT.—The commands of a conjuror claim and usually obtain ready obedience on the part of the spectators of his skill. We fearlessly give up our watches, pocket handkerchiefs, and hats to be flattened, burnt and cut up, confident in their ultimate restoration. Nay, few would hesitate to assault a professor of legerdemain with deadly weapons at his own request. An instance, however, is just reported by Indian journals of fatal results having followed upon this customary complaisance. A juggler at Cuddapah, who pretended to possess some power which rendered his life proof against any attempt that might be made upon it with powder and ball, challenged one of the bystanders to aim at him with a loaded musket, assuring him that the ball would not so much as wound him. The man accepted the challenge, and, with the loaded musket presented to him by the Indian Houdin, shot the unfortunate juggler through the head. The shooter was thereupon seized and committed to the sessions on a charge of murder, which can hardly, we should imagine, be maintained under the very peculiar circumstances of the case. One of the most extraordinary features of the affair is the evidence of the witnesses for the defence, who are most of them relatives of the deceased; they stated that he had several times been shot at before in the same manner, and had never been hurt. However that may be, it is clear that on the occasion of the last fatal performance the man showed absolute confidence in his own invulnerability, and had in no way tampered with the weapon.

LAS BAILA.—A memorial to the Bombay Government has been prepared by the Sirdars and inhabitants of Las Baila, which bears 110 signatures, praying for the restoration of the Jam to the rule of Las Baila. The Jam, who escaped from Las Baila to avoid the persecutions of the Khan of Khelat some six years ago, took refuge in Sind, when the Government removed him to the Deccan, where he has been ever since.

MISS CARPENTER.—Miss Carpenter, who left Bombay by last Monday's mail steamer takes with her—what will doubtless be considered an interesting charge—two children of Baboo Sasipada Banerjee, whom she will educate in England. It will be remembered, says the Calcutta Daily News, that we recorded the death of Mrs. Banerjee a short time since; and stated that that lady visited England some years ago, when she was the guest of Miss Carpenter. If the youngsters possess the "timber" of their parents, good things may be hoped from them.—Bombay Gazette, April 3.

NATIVE PRINCES.—The Bhaunaggar Thakur has just returned home from his Indian tour. The Limri Chief is on the eve of starting on a journey to England, and the Thakur of Morvi, too, is preparing to undertake the prescribed tour with which the scholastic career of the students of the Rajkumar College terminates. The Junaghar and Nowanaggar kuvers, as well as the young Chief of Rajkot, also went through the ordeal some time ago. Under the careful guidance of Captain Nutt, the young Thakur of Bhaunaggar has had ample opportunities of acquiring most varied and useful information during his Indian tour.

THE CASE OF MR. PEREIRA.—It is reported that the case of Mr. Pereira, Superintendent, Political Department, Secretariat, who was first suspended and subsequently dismissed, on a charge never, we believe, substantiated, of giving certain information to the ex-Gaikwar's Government, has been taken into favourable consideration by the local Government, from the fact of his having been so long a servant of Government—over twenty-two years—and that it is intended to communicate with the Home Government recommending a small compensation to be granted to his family.

A HANDY VOLUME.—We have seen the Bombay Army Regulations now being issued from the press, and as every officer is to provide himself with a copy, it may interest intending purchasers to know that the book weighs over 9 lbs., contains an index of 109 pages, and for its size reflects great credit on the compiler. Although it is a nice little addition to an officer's already over-stocked library, it is perhaps to be regretted that it has been considered necessary to add such a voluminous book to the long list. One of the great inconveniences of the Indian Army is the numerous regulation books. It has often been said that it is next to impossible to tel. from the numerous books which is a correct order.—Times of India, KOLABA.—The Royal Artillery at Kolaba were paraded by Colonel Spurway early on Friday morning, to witness the bestowal of medals for long service and good conduct, awarded under the late regulations to the following individuals:—Quartermaster Sergeant George R. Waymark, Sergeant F. W. Gordon, Bombardier Michael Burke, Gunners John Clear and Samuel Hayman. Colonel Bond, in pinning the medals to the breasts of these non-commissioned officers and men, remarked that he should like to decorate all those present in a similar manner, and said that although a war medal might be obtained in a short time, it was the battle of life to gain the medal which he now had the pleasure of presenting to the recipients.—Times of India, April 3.

BROACH NEWS, March 23.—There has been no case of small-pox in Broach as stated; not a single case is known in the town.—The necessity for a Factory Act is shown by the number of mutilations constantly occurring here. Last week a woman's clothes caught in a wheel, and she was literally smashed to pieces; that was in a ginning factory at Kurwan. At the Mofussil's Company's factories at Palej two serious accidents occurred, one of the right arm shattered up to the shoulder, the other of a hand entirely shattered up to the wrist, both cases involving amputation. These accidents only occur at ill-regulated factories.—It is remarked here that the Prince of Wales, in his letter to Lord Northbrook, mentions the Governor-General, the native princes, the military, the Civil servants, and the natives, but all mention whatever of the independent European community is omitted.—Times of India Correspondent.

A COMPLAINT FROM A TRAVELLER.—A passenger from Colombo by the B. I. steamer Dorunda, for London, writes to the Ceylon Observer, from Aden, as follows:—The s.s. Dorunda, which left Colombo on Sunday afternoon, the 13th ult., arrived at Aden on Monday morning, the 21st ult., having done the passage under eight days. The weather has been delightful the whole time, the ship as comfortable as anyone could wish, and the officers, from the captain downwards, very attentive and agreeable. But why should Indian passengers be at the mercy of the steward of the steamer? He has the supplying of the ship with soda-water, &c.; the miserable stock he took on board at Colombo only lasted three days. The water, being bad owing to the tanks being new, is hardly drinkable, and nothing else was to be had. A sick lady passenger, whose life was almost despaired of, could get nothing to drink. I should advise the passengers by Mercara, following, to bring their own stock of liquor, although it is against the Company's rules. The steward of this steamer, who, by-the-bye, seems scarcely fit for the post, assured me before leaving Colombo that the stock of soda-water was quite sufficient for the voyage home. I trust the agents will take notice of this.

MILITARY.—Major Strong, who has been Assistant-Cantonment Magistrate at Mhow for the past four years, left that station on Sunday, proceeding on leave to England. Baron Haussemann's transfiguration of Paris pales before Major Strong's remodelling of Mhow. New roads and avenues have been opened out, and in the bazaar unsightly grounds and slopes are changed to smiling gardens and green banks; a handsome row of shops has risen up in Montgomery-street as if by magic. Captain Withers, 25th Regiment L.I., succeeds Major Strong. We observe that Lieutenant-Colonel W. A. Park, Bombay Infantry and second in command of H.M.'s 12th N.I., has been permitted to retire from the service on the 3rd proximo. Colonel Park goes on the pension of his rank, £365 per annum, and is not one of the twenty who are going under the provision of the new Retirement scheme. Colonel Champion, commandant of the 12th, went home recently, and as he gets his off-reckonings next year, will not come out again. Colonel Hogg, now second-in-command of the 1st Belooch Regiment, gets the 12th in Colonel Champion's place. Lieut.-Colonel Heathcote is confirmed in the appointment of second-in-command, vice Park, and Major Reid, now acting wing officer, is confirmed in that appointment. Lieut.-Colonel Park, who is known in the service as a most efficient officer, has the Indian mutiny medal and clasp, having been through the campaign in Central India, including the relief of Saugor, and the assault and storm of Jhansi. In 1859 he was engaged in the pursuit of Tantia Topee, and, in 1860, in the suppression of the Waghir Rebellion. By the retirement of Colonel Park the Bombay army loses a good officer.—Times of India, April 3.

KHELAT AFFAIRS.—Anent the change of management of Khelat affairs, the on dit is that the transfer of Political charge has involved considerations in respect to the revenue administration of the Frontier district. Colonel Munro, it is said, has represented the necessity that he should have Revenue charge as well, to make his position politically an easier one, by thus securing the co-operation of such of the natives of standing, holding land in it, whose influence would be of material assistance with those out of British ground, but which otherwise there would be a difficulty in obtaining, or the probability of being altogether withheld. This, we understand, is the sum and substance of the representation, but we do not vouch for the reasons adduced for the accession desired. This proposal has, however, been commented on by Sir William Merewether, and a counter one put forward to allow the administrative machinery to be worked as at present, the Khelat Agency which was abolished last year being re-established as it were for the Punjab officers, who, however, would not in any way be connected with the Political Superintendent at Jacobabad. An alternative proposal has also been made, in the event of this being considered undesirable, to transfer the district as an addition to the Shikarpoor, Collectorate. This is the matter now before Government for decision. Public opinion, influenced no doubt by the action against the Commissioner in the first instance, seems to go with Colonel Munro, but this is hardly fair reasoning, and there is a greater probability of the decision being the other way, unless, indeed, the transfer of the district to the Government of the Punjab be intended as the first step towards the annexation ultimately of the entire province. As to events beyond the Frontier, hopes are entertained of some settlement being come to for the opening of the way for commerce, although both the Moola and Bolan Passes are still said to be closed. The Khan, it would appear, is exerting himself to this end, and as an earnest of his good intentions, we may mention the fact of his Highness and Vakeel Peer Jahan having arrived at Jacobabad, a couple of weeks ago, to act in concert with the Politicals. The end in view, however, will be less easily attained, considering the feeling prevailing against the Khan in consequence of the death of Nooroodin Khan; yet there is a greater probability of its being accomplished now than there was a few weeks back. Major Sandeman purposes going out to Gundawa, accompanied by Peer Jahan, there to meet the principal parties, whose co-operation is necessary towards maintaining peace and order, where deeds of plunder and bloodshed have been latterly perpetrated with a persistency and fury which is horrible to think of. It is devoutly to be hoped that the measures contemplated will be successful. The Pathans now in Sind are annoyed about not being able to return to their homes, being unwilling to undertake a journey so perilous, and they anxiously look forward to the prospect of being guaranteed immunity from sharing the sad fate of the earlier caravans of the season.—Indian Public Opinion.

THE PEARL FISHERY.—Captain Donnan, the Master Attendant of Colombo, has proceeded on his annual visit to the Pearl Banks in the Gulf of Mannar. Upon the report he submits to Government will depend whether a fishery is to take place in the spring of next year.

THE MALDIVES.—The Ambassador from the Sultan of the Maldives Islands recently waited upon Sir Charles Peter Layard, K.C.M.G., as the representative of the Governor of Ceylon. The Ambassador was received with some little show of state and ceremony.

THE STUDY OF CELTIC.—The fund being raised in Ceylon on behalf of Professor Blackie's Celtic Chair has received a fillip by the publication of a letter from the projector of the movement, written in his most characteristic manner. There can be little doubt that the sum mentioned at the outset as that which should be sent from Ceylon in aid of this object—viz., £250—will be raised.

THE SURVIVORS OF THE "STRATHMORE."—The sum of Rs.3,010 has been contributed in Ceylon on behalf of the passengers saved from the wrecked ship Strathmore. The crew has been sent to England by various opportunities, and a communication has been addressed to Government, asking the authorities to arrange for sending the passengers on to their destination—New Zealand. If this is done the sum subscribed will give them each something with which to begin the world again.

A COFFEE ESTATE ON FIRE.—As already briefly announced, a most disastrous fire has occurred on Balmoral and Clydesdale Estates in Dimbula, Ceylon. As a rule, fire does but little damage in Ceylon compared with European countries, and, at first sight, it might seem as if the growing bushes of a coffee estate were the last likely object to form fuel for a devastating fire. There are, however, several instances on record of coffee having been burnt in dry seasons, either from a clearing being fired and the flames extending too far, or from a firestick being put in an adjoining patana where mana grass was growing to the height of three or four feet. An unusually rainless season, during the early months of this year, had made the coffee bushes very dry, and when the patana next to Balmoral Estates was accidentally (or otherwise) set fire to, the flames soon spread to the estate and much damage was done. Possibly £7,000 will not cover the mischief done.

ECCLESIASTICAL GRANTS, CEYLON.—A question has been raised relating to ecclesiastical grants from the public revenue of Ceylon. In 1871, when Bishop Claughton resigned the bishopric of Colombo, the Executive Council of the island requested the Secretary of State not to fill up the vacancy, as the services of a resident bishop were not really needed, and it would be advantageous to revert to the old arrangement of making an allowance to the Bishop of Madras for the episcopal superintendence required. But the Secretary of State, the Earl of Kimberley, had already filled up the vacancy. There was again a vacancy in 1875, and Sir W. H. Gregory, who had then become Governor, strongly objected to its being filled up; but again an appointment had been made by the Secretary of State, the Earl of Carnarvon, before the Governor's letter arrived. Sir Hercules Robinson, who was Governor in 1871, did not himself object to the appointment of a bishop, and said he was not aware that there was any general desire for the abolition of the bishopric. In the flourishing condition of the finances, he thought the expenditure entailed was well invested in a social as well as an official point of view. But Governor Sir W. H. Gregory writes, in 1875, that the appointment will be looked upon as an injustice by all educated men in the colony not of the subsidised creed, and even by many of that creed. The last census showed less than 56,000 Protestants in a population of two and a half millions, and the declared members of the Church of England, with the Presbyterians, amounted together to less than 14,000, but their clergy receive upwards of £10,000 a year from the public revenue; the average attendance in 1872 at the services of chaplains paid by Government being but 3,000. The Roman Catholics, 184,000 in number, get a subsidy, but only of £100 a year. The Wesleyans, who have 6,000 declared members, appear to have no subsidy. Sir W. H. Gregory says that the State-paid chaplains, as a rule, minister in towns where their congregations are well able to support them. A memorial from a district meeting of seven English Wesleyan missionaries, and twenty-eight ministers, natives of Ceylon, protests against the grants as unfair, and presenting Christianity as a religion associated with injustice, and they maintain that the Government is, in effect, engaging in missionary operations, which is contrary to public policy; but Lord Carnarvon answers that he is not prepared to authorise any change which shall deprive either the Church of England or the Presbyterian Church of that support from Government which they have hitherto enjoyed.
